

The Heart Beat

2nd Brigade Combat Team, 101st Airborne Division
Volume 1, Issue 15

July 1, 2006

1-75TH CAV DRAWS SABERS
IN NEW SECTOR

FREE MAIL

Table of Contents

1-75th CAV Draws Sabers in New Sector	3
"Strike" Soldier Recognized for Volunteering	4
1-75th Cav. Soldier Overcomes Obstacles to remain with Comrades	5
Faces of the Heart	6-7
Strong Links at Strike Force	8
Feeding the Forces	9
Soldier and NCO of the Quarter,	10
Stories Continued	11

STRIKE 6

...there is expressed the longing of humanity for an order of society in which justice, fair dealing, cooperation, and peace shall prevail. This seems almost an idle dream in such a time of war as this. But we are engaged in this struggle in order that such a dream may be brought closer to realization.

We have clearly changed the face of South Baghdad. Because of your efforts, we will soon turn over a second area of operations to Iraqi army control. Simply know that in this area, once defined as Al Qaeda in Iraq's southern zone we have broken the back of the major terrorist network. For nearly 10 months, we, you, have pushed Al Qaeda out of a major sanctuary and killed many of its ring leaders. Know that our efforts are directly linked to the death of Zarqawi -- we have enabled a chance for peace in this most difficult of areas. No other unit has done more. On a July 1 visit to Camp Striker, General Casey, Commanding General Multinational Forces -Iraq, stated, "it's rare that I can point to a brigade that has had such a strategic impact on my two goals -- securing Baghdad and defeating Al Qaeda."

Even with our many successes and even in our most challenging times, none of us ever expected to face events, such as the brutal murder of our fellow Soldiers, at the hands of soulless terrorists. But we did and we have dealt with it and we will continue to gain strength from it.

Having personally witnessed all that each of you gave under the harshest of conditions, you Black Heart Soldiers, defined for all others what it really means to be a Soldier. I will never know better men and women than you. I offer my most sincere and deepest thanks to each and every Soldier, Air Force Airmen, Navy Diver, and interpreter, who served with us during this moment. Never was I more proud of all of us as we fought with incredible courage and a tireless devotion to duty to recover our lost Soldiers. Within moments of the incident, nearly 8000 US and Iraqi army Soldiers moved to block, conduct searches, and engage communities to gain clues in support of this effort. Most of you had not rested at all from earlier missions and yet you did not hesitate one second, you simply executed your mission flawlessly and persevered under the harshest battlefield conditions for over 72 hours straight. You are Soldiers -- no, you are the very best Soldiers. Everyone one of you is to be thanked and admired -- everyone!

Furthermore, this fight continues. We recently have killed or captured many terrorists linked to this event to include a senior Al Qaeda lieutenant. I am confident that given an unshakable faith in God, coupled with our total commitment to each other and to our mission, this most challenging event has further strengthened us -- we are able to face anything and we remain vigilant in taking our fight to a despicable enemy.

Finally I offer my heartfelt condolences to all the families, friends and teammates

The things we see are temporal; the things which are not yet seen are eternal.

The dream of a more peaceful South Baghdad, Iraq is much closer to reality because of us. Stay focused, maintain high standards, and remain vigilante. Continue to set conditions for those that follow us. We will give them a South Baghdad, Iraq better than anyone could ever imagine.

God Bless each of you.

STRIKE!

Todd Ebel

Colonel, Infantry

1-75th CAV Draws Sabers in New Sector

Sgt. Jason Durham, 1st Squadron, 75th Cavalry Regiment, looks out over the landscape while heading out on an Air Assault mission Nov. 1, 2005, south of Baghdad, Iraq. The Soldiers of 1-75th CAV have participated in multiple Air Assaults and are responsible for uncovering many weapons caches during their deployment.

(U.S. Army photo by Staff Sgt. Patrik Textira, 2nd Brigade Combat Team, 101st Airborne Division)

“Change is always inevitable in this dynamic and fluid environment,” he said. “This adjustment is no different. It will be a challenge to take over a new AO but our Squadron is up to the task and looks forward to making real progress in this important area of operations.”

Accompanying the change of mission is yet another change in the squadron’s task organization. Since arriving in theater, Task Force Widowmaker has been assisted in their operations by a litany of attachments to include a mechanized infantry company, an engineer company and an Iraqi army battalion. The most recent additions are the Soldiers of D Co., 2nd Battalion, 502nd Infantry Regiment, who are relieving the Engineers of E Co., 1st Battalion, 22nd Combined Arms Brigade.

CAMP STRIKER, Iraq – Change is something that the Soldiers of the 1st Squadron 75th Cavalry Regiment have grown accustomed to during their tour in Iraq. Since deploying, the squadron has changed mission three times in nine months.

The unit has transferred battle space with 2nd Battalion, 130th Infantry Regiment, 1st Battalion, 22nd Combined Arms Brigade, 1st Battalion, 87th Infantry Regiment, 1st Squadron, 71st Cavalry Regiment, 2nd Battalion, 8th Infantry Regiment, 1st Squadron, 10th Cavalry Regiment, 2nd Marine Recon Battalion, 3rd Squadron, 3rd Armored Cavalry Regiment, 2nd Battalion, 22nd Infantry Regiment, 1st Battalion, 1st Marine Regiment, and twice exchanged Area of Operations with 2nd Battalion, 502 Infantry Regiment.

However, the most recent change is one which brings 1-75th CAV full circle sending them back to an area they controlled when the unit first arrived in October 2005.

“It’s De ja Vu, all over again,” as Task Force “Widowmaker” gets another crack at the sprawling farmland of Radwaniya.

Every mission is different, and during the last nine months each change of mission has presented the squadron with a unique set of challenges. In every instance, the Soldiers have risen to the occasion and met those challenges head-on.

Lt. Col. Lee Walters, the commander of 1-75th CAV, took a moment recently to discuss the nature of the new mission and describe how he expects the squadron will respond to this latest test.

While their reputation precedes them, D Co., 2-502nd IN has some big shoes to fill in replacing a unit that has been so important to the squadron’s operations over the last six months. Prior to their departure, the Squadron Commanding Officer (SCO) praised the impeccable performance of the engineers and wished them continued success in the future saying, “We have enjoyed operating alongside our brothers from E Co. 1-22nd CAB (Engineer) and they have been an integral part of TF Widowmakers, The Soldiers have developed friendships that will stand the test of time and separation and we wish them well on their next mission.”

Aside from the organizational changes, the squadron staff recognizes the major tenet of the new mission as an expansion in the size of AO Widowmaker, and while successful in its previous assignment, guarding arguably the most dangerous stretch of highway in all Iraq, the Soldiers are looking forward to the flexibility a larger AO creates.

This expansion will allow the planners at both squadron and troop level to target not only the terrorists responsible for attacking coalition and Iraqi Security Forces, but also those who facilitate their operations, directing and supporting these attacks behind the scenes.

“The ability to pursue the enemy into their safe havens, separate the insurgents from the general populace, and crush their attempts to launch coordinated attacks will be instrumental to the unit’s effectiveness at disrupting the Anti-Iraqi Forces operating in the southwest Baghdad area,” said Capt.

Continued on Pg. 11 see 1-75th CAV

"Strike" Soldier Recognized for Volunteering

Spc. George Welcome
2nd BCT 101st Abn. Div. PAO

CAMP STRIKER, Iraq—The spirit of the volunteer is the foundation that the Army is built on. It is what has made our Army the best and most professional for the past 231 years. A Soldier in the "STRIKE" Brigade exemplifies the volunteering spirit and for it, will be presented with an award.

Spc. Samuel Harrington, an intelligence systems maintainer with Company B, 2-101st Brigade Troops Battalion is being awarded the Military Outstanding Volunteer Service Medal for volunteer work he performed while attending advanced individual training at Fort Huachuca, Ariz.

"While I was in AIT, two other Soldiers and I coached a nine and ten-year olds basketball team in Sierra Vista," said Harrington, a native of Grandledge, Mich. "It was the first time I volunteered and I had a great time. It was awesome."

According to the American Veterans website, the Military Outstanding Volunteer Service Medal was established by Executive Order 12830. It is awarded to members of the Armed Forces who performed outstanding volunteer community service of a sustained, direct and consequential nature.

"I found out just before I graduated from AIT that I would be getting the award, but the paperwork got lost somehow," Harrington said. "The orders for the award just got here about three months ago."

"As a person, I thought it was great," Harrington said of his volunteering experience. "We all loved basketball so that's why we decided to do it. We taught these kids how to play basketball, they loved it, the parents loved it, and it was a great time."

Soldiers who work with Harrington were not surprised to find that he had been awarded the Military Outstanding Volunteer Service Medal, as his daily actions in the workplace prove that he has a helpful nature. "He's very squared away."

"No, I'm not surprised at all that Harrington is receiving this award," said Staff. Sgt. Jedediah Wells, intelligence electronic warfare noncommissioned officer in charge.

Wells had nothing but praise for Harrington's work ethic.

"He's a go-getter," said Wells. "Any task you give him he gets it done with minimal supervision. He's just a great Soldier all around."

As for Harrington, volunteering was not only a way to help out others, but an opportunity to do something that brought him great joy.

"I did it for fun," Harrington explained. "I didn't know I was getting an award."

Spc. Samuel Harrington

Looking for news on your unit?

YOU CAN FIND "THE HEART BEAT", PHOTOGRAPHS, NEWS ARTICLES, TV NEWS AND RADIO STORIES ABOUT THE 2ND BCT ON

WWW.DVIDSHUB.NET

VISIT THE FORT CAMPBELL COURIER WEB SITE FOR YOUR LOCAL NEWS AND TO SEE WHAT ARTICLES AND PHOTOGRAPHS HAVE BEEN PUBLISHED ABOUT YOUR UNIT AT

WWW.FORTCAMPBELLCOURIER.COM

IF YOU HAVE ANY QUESTIONS, COMMENTS, STORY IDEAS OR PHOTOGRAPHS YOU WOULD LIKE TO SEE PUBLISHED PLEASE CONTACT "THE HEART BEAT" STAFF AT

VOIP 242-4372 OR EMAIL US AT STRIKEPAOIRAQ@YAHOO.COM

1-75th Cav Soldier Overcomes Obstacles to Remain with Comrades

By 1st Lt. Thomas Cudahy
1-75th CAV

Five months prior to 2nd Brigade Combat Team, 101st Airborne Division's deployment to Iraq, doctors at Fort Campbell, Ky, diagnosed Spc. Benjamin Keenan with testicular cancer.

He immediately underwent radiation treatment and additional therapies; he began to show signs of recovery. After several weeks of treatment, it appeared that the therapies had halted the spread of his cancer, which to Keenan, provided him the possibility of deploying with his platoon.

When asked to describe himself, Keenan, a Cavalry Scout assigned to 1st Squadron 75th Cavalry Regiment, said he is "just another Joe in the Army." Yet to those who know him better, Keenan, or "Big Ben" as he is known, has become a towering example of fortitude and personal courage, both for his unit and the entire Squadron.

While Keenan appeared to be winning his struggle against cancer, his fight to deploy with the rest of his unit had only begun. The first challenge was to convince his doctors that his cancer was in total remission. Further testing assured the doctors that Keenan had a minimal chance of suffering a relapse.

Additionally, he had to persuade his chain of command that he would be able to receive adequate follow up treatments from the medical staff in the Combat Support Hospital in Baghdad. He signed a waiver saying he understood he had a strong possibility of suffering a relapse, and that he was willing to risk his health and his life to go to war with his fellow troopers.

A week prior to deployment, Keenan, who friends call, "the unluckiest, lucky person I've ever met," was told his request would be granted, and he left Fort Campbell with his platoon, bound for southern Baghdad.

As a member of 2nd Platoon, A Troop, 1-75th Cav, Keenan always contributed greatly to his team's success.

"He set a great example for his peers," said 1st Lt. Jason Fears, Keenan's platoon leader. "His work ethic and toughness are an inspiration to us on a daily basis."

While Keenan's dedication to his mission and his fellow troopers was evident, his personal trials continued.

In early March a black mass was detected on Keenan's X-Rays during a routine check-up. Blood tests indicated that the mass indicated a possible relapse. He was evacuated to Landstuhl Medical Center in Germany, where he underwent further testing to determine the source of the mass. After several harrowing days in which Keenan wondered whether his cancer might return, he was given a clean bill of health and told he could return to his unit.

One month later, the day before he was scheduled to earn his promotion to Specialist, Keenan's truck struck a pressure plate roadside bomb while conducting a patrol south of Baghdad. Keenan was wounded in the attack, and after being ground evacuated, it was determined he had suffered several injuries, including a broken transverse process and ruptured spleen. This was the second time that the vehicle in which he was riding was completely destroyed by a roadside bomb, a distinction he is happy to share with no one else in the Troop. Instead of opting to return to Fort Campbell for his recovery and rehabilitation, Keenan again fought to finish what he had started.

Currently, Keenan is performing light duty as a Radio Transmit Operator for Apache Troop's Tactical Operation Center. At 29 years old, he says he is motivated by the desire to provide for his wife and three sons.

Keenan was recently awarded the Purple Heart for the wounds he suffered in combat. Keenan said he is eager to rejoin the line; a model for the Warrior Ethos, he said he only wants to get back to doing the job.

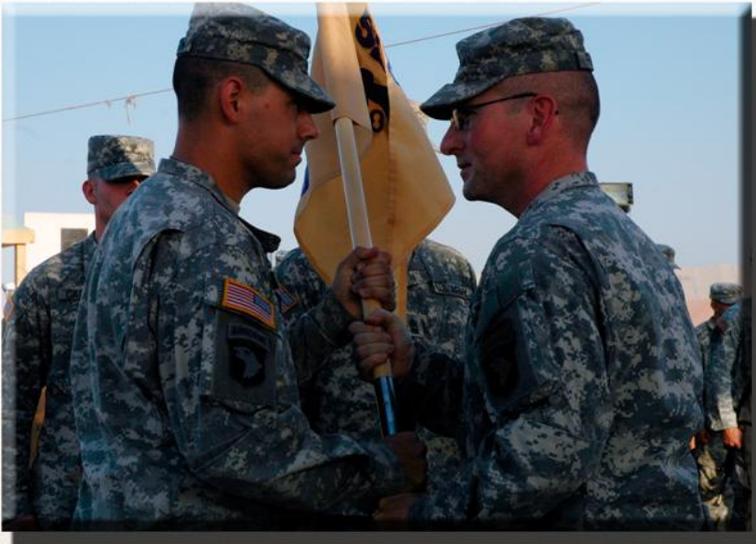

Spc. Benjamin Keenan, 1st Squadron, 75th Cavalry Regiment, stands proud in the turret as he pulls duty as gunner just before heading out on patrol Jan. 12, south of Baghdad, Iraq. (Photo courtesy of 1-75th Cavalry Regiment)

FACES OF

Command Sgt. Major Pfrogner, 2nd Battalion, 502nd Infantry Regiment, watches as a road is cleared for IEDs June 19.

Lt. Col. Farley, 526th Brigade Support Battalion, passes the colors during a change of command ceremony June 27, to incoming commander Capt. Horton

Two Soldiers pose for a photo after a change of command ceremony June 27.

"Strike" Soldiers get a lesson on IED detection from a visiting British sergeant major June 28.

THE HEART

Soldiers pose for a photo with congressional representatives after a lunch meet and greet June 24.

(RIGHT) Command Sgt. Major Brown (Left) and First Sgt. Sampson stand before a formation during a change of responsibility ceremony held June 30.

Pfc. Charboneau, 2nd Battalion, 502nd Infantry Regiment, looks out over a sunrise during a mission June 19.

Sgt. Rodriguez, 2nd Battalion, 502nd Infantry Regiment, welcomes the new MERLIN 6, 1st Lt. Morris to the team.

Strong Links at Strike Force

When the Soldiers of 2nd Battalion, 502nd Infantry Regiment, the "Strike Force" Battalion, began preparations for their deployment to Iraq back in June of 2005, no one could foresee what would await the Battalion upon arrival at Camp Stryker.

Sure, the battalion had the previous unit send as much information as possible, and sure, the battalion had taken the lessons learned from previous deployments and applied them to this deployment, but in the end, the Soldiers truly had no idea what conditions would be like when their boots hit the ground.

The companies began making their preparations for their arrival in Iraq, and the battalion headquarters began making theirs. The Tactical Operations Center (TOC) had a lot of work to do. There was packing of all of the equipment that would be needed to maintain a Battalion Command Post as well as the mentally taxing task of trying to think of everything that the Soldiers would need to conduct day to day operations. From coffee pots to power converters, the lists were endless, and the enormous task of trying to think of everything needed would fall to one man, Sgt. 1st Class Jeffrey Hunter, the Battalion's Operations NCO.

Hunter hails from Staunton, Virginia. He is assigned to the 2nd Battalion, 502nd Infantry Regiment as the Battalion Operations NCO. He attended Basic Combat Training at Fort Benning, GA, and serves the Army as an Infantryman (11B). He is married to Nancy Hunter, and they have one child, a little girl named Madisyn (4 months old).

After spending the better part of two days on a plane, Sergeant 1st Class Jeffrey Hunter holds his new daughter for the first time.

Story and Photos by Sgt. 1st Class Doug Pfeffer, 2-502 IN

Hunter raises his hand for his final reenlistment while deployed in Iraq

When the battalion arrived at Camp Striker, they began conducting the relief in place of the previous unit. The battalion basically fell in on all of their equipment, as well as the building that they had previously used as their Tactical Operations Center. The first change that the battalion put into effect was the renovation of the TOC.

It was decided almost immediately that there were to be major changes, and the task of renovating the building fell to Hunter and his crew. They wasted no time at all, beginning the renovations before the previous unit had even left.

In a matter of days, you could barely recognize the structure. Where before there had been an administrative work area, there was now four plasma screens displaying a constant flow of information from the battlefield, a raised platform for the Battle Captain to work and miles upon miles of cable run through the ceiling, facilitating a myriad of communications options.

All this was accomplished in only 48 hours, and all at the hands of Hunter. He could often be seen working up to 20 hours a day, with little sleep, until the battalion was 100% ready to assume control of the area. If not for his incredible skill, and dedication to the success of this battalion, there would have been no way that we could have assumed control of the area so seamlessly.

He had clearly established himself as the glue that held the Battalion together.

"I have never seen a Non Commissioned Officer take such good care of soldiers as Sgt. 1st Class Hunter does," said Capt. Dan Stuewe, battalion assistant operations officer. "I've seen him studying numerous Army Regulations trying to figure out how to get citizenship for his Soldier's wife, coaching a young Soldier on how to save money and set up a plan to get his teeth fixed, and personally getting ice cold water for Soldiers every time they come off an Air Assault. He is a master of doing all of the little things that no one thinks about or remembers...but that will

Story cont. on Pg. 11 see (STRIKE FORCE)

Pfc. Brandon Fraser slices tomatoes in the kitchen of the Mahmudiyah dining facility.

Story and photos by
Spc. George Welcome

People love to eat and Soldiers are no exception. In a place with very few of the comforts of home, knowing that hot, delicious meals are available to them can go a long way in bolstering Soldiers' morale.

Certainly these tasty vittles don't just prepare themselves, that's where the Soldiers who cook at the Mahmudiyah dining facility use their culinary talents to feed the troops who fight the battles.

"Dinner is definitely the busiest time of the day," said Sgt. Dyshan Keels, of Headquarters Company, 526th Brigade Support Battalion. "Soldiers are out on missions in the morning and the afternoon, so most of our crowd is in the evening."

And it is quite the hungry crowd. The cooks on Mahmudiyah prepare well over 800 servings per meal, to ensure that everyone will be able to have enough to eat.

"Since we have people who can't eat certain foods because of their culture, we usually cook different things. If we cook a pork selection, we will cook another type of meat as well," said Keels.

The Soldiers had to overcome some major obstacles in transforming the DFAC from shabby, to an inviting eating establishment.

"When we first got here everything was pretty trashy and we didn't have the best equipment to work with," said Spc. Eric Snell. "We didn't even have warmers that worked well, so the food would be cold sometimes."

Feeding the Forces

After a few months, the Soldiers were not only able to get new equipment for the kitchen, battalion had arranged for the entire DFAC floor to be refinished. All these improvements made cooking a proper meal much easier.

The cooks' work goes far beyond what they do in the kitchen. Along with preparing three meals per day, they also perform guard duty and divide rations that are shipped to Mahmudiyah from Camp Striker.

"We have 15 Soldiers who work at the DFAC," said Keels. "But that gets stretched thin when you take into account the guard shifts we pull and the ration details."

The DFAC receives rations that include various food, soda, Gatorade, ice cream, utensils and all the things one would expect to find in a dining facility.

"Every five days we receive $ 75,000 worth of rations," said Sgt. 1st Class Inman, dining facility noncommissioned officer in charge. "The rations come from Kuwait to Striker, then get pushed out to us."

Since there are no Kellogg, Brown and Root food preparers, the cooks attached to 1-502 have the distinction of being the only cooks in the "STRIKE" area of operations who are actually cooking, a fact that some of them enjoy.

"I heard some of the war stories about Mahmudiyah and I didn't really want to come down here," explained Keels. "But once I got down here and realized that I was doing my job, it actually felt good because it makes the time go by faster."

The Soldiers are glad they are there as well. Deployments usually bring fears of eating MREs for a year, a fate no Soldier deserves.

"We get compliments from the Soldiers," said Keels. "They tell us if they thought the food was good. But if we don't have something they want that day, they'll be mad at us," he joked. "The thing Soldiers like best right now is breakfast. A month ago we started making omelets, so they really enjoy that."

With the addition of the new breakfast omelet selection, the DFAC has become a place Soldiers know that a good, hot meal awaits them.

Pfc. Maira Perez re-stocks the salad bar in the Mahmudiyah.

Congratulations to the NCO and Soldier of the Quarter

Soldier of
The Quarter:
SPC Wilkes
1-75th CAV

NCO of
The Quarter:
SSG Escude'
HHC, 2-101st
BTB

Honoring our Fallen Comrades

2nd Brigade Combat Team, 101st Airborne Division, has lost many Soldiers since our arrival in Iraq. We will never forget our fallen eagles and should honor their memory and service to country.

These Soldiers exemplified the Army values and it is the Brigade Sergeant Major's plan to provide a lasting memorial for their service and sacrifice.

Sgt. Major Stall is asking all Soldiers to donate $10.00 to a memorial fund. Upon return to Fort Campbell a memorial wall will be raised with each Soldier's unit and name engraved on it.

For those who would like to donate $10.00 to the fund should provide the money to their First Sergeant by September 1st.

Photos by Spc. Kelly K. McDowell

1-75th CAV (Continued from Pg. 3)

"The ability to pursue the enemy into their safe havens, separate the insurgents from the general populace, and crush their attempts to launch coordinated attacks will be instrumental to the unit's effectiveness at disrupting the Anti-Iraqi Forces operating in the southwest Baghdad area," said Capt. Matthew Arrol, squadron fire support officer.

As part of the transition, B Co. 1-75th CAV, will reoccupy a heavily contested area formerly controlled by the Marines of Multinational Forces West. This region has seen little coalition presence in recent months and experienced resurgence in enemy activity since the last time the Widomaker squadron was in the area.

"Over the last nine months we've conducted a lot of different operations," Capt. Matthew Ruckman, B Troop's Commander, said. "We've learned a lot in that time and I'm certain that we will be able to get back in there and take the fight to the enemy."

The more things change however, the more they remain the same, and while the Widomaker AO is expanding, the squadron has not yet been relieved of its primary mission of guarding the Corps Main Supply Route.

"This task is vitally important, not only to the Baghdad Area, but to all Coalition operations throughout Iraq," said the squadron commander commenting about the importance of the unit's MSR security mission. "Maintaining freedom of movement for coalition forces on the MSR allows friendly units to both sustain themselves logistically and conduct the tactical maneuvering necessary to defeat the insurgency. As such it remains a top priority for both the leaders and the soldiers of 1-75 CAV."

Everyone in the squadron views the upcoming mission as an opportunity to build upon the accomplishments made over the last nine months and is anxious to finish out their tour in Iraq on a high note.

"We patrolled this new area of operations for about three months, previously during the deployment, successfully destroying numerous weapons caches and detaining over 30 insurgents," said A Troop's Commander, Capt. Jeff Lewis. "We also have several months of experience patrolling MSR Tampa, in which we reduced the number of daily attacks in our AO by over 50%. I am confident we will capitalize on our previous experiences and be successful once again in our new area of operations."

In spite of all the changes, there has been one constant throughout over nine months of continuous full spectrum operations and that is the indomitable spirit of the Soldiers of 1st Squadron, 75th Cavalry Regiment.

"No matter what mission is thrown their way, whether it's patrolling a deadly stretch of highway or hunting down terrorists in the Iraqi countryside, the Soldiers of 1-75 CAV take it all in stride," Lt. Col. Lee Walters said. "Missions may come and go, but the pursuit of excellence is the enduring operation in TF Widomaker."

Strike Force (Continued from Pg. 8)

make or break a Soldier's morale. He is selfless, plain and simple. And that's not just in his daily Army duties...everything he does is selfless."

As the months wore on, Hunter continued to impress his leadership on the battalion. He logged hour after hour assuming all responsibility for any air operations conducted by the battalion. It never mattered what time of the day the air operations would occur, Hunter would be there. He would personally load aircraft with supplies and ensure that the soldiers outside of the wire were well taken care of.

The Soldiers of the battalion were always his primary concern, no matter what. Although his assigned job was to maintain smooth operations at the TOC, he never failed to put effort into helping the Soldiers of the battalion, both at the TOC and outside of the wire.

He even managed to sneak onto the commander's Personal Security Detachment, just to make a trip outside of the wire, when his job would normally keep him operating inside of the wire.

"He just cares about Soldiers in general" said Sgt. 1st Class Berieault, the battalion operations sergeant major. "He's always working his butt off. The guy is always on top of things. Half the time, he's putting in more hours than anybody else here, and in the end, he just really cares about the Soldiers. It doesn't matter if there in the wire or out, he just simply cares about all of the Soldiers".

When Hunter deployed with the battalion, he, of course, looked forward to getting the job done in Iraq, but he also, like the rest of us, dreaded leaving his wife behind. Their relationship is a special one that most people only dream of. To make matters worse, she was pregnant with their first child. It was shaping up to a very long deployment. As the months rolled by, he began looking forward to heading home for his mid-tour break.

As that day approached, it became obvious that it was going to be very close to the birth. I personally remember the day that he left out. He was like a little kid, just excited to be going home to be with his wife and child. His wife had gone into labor while he was still airborne and on his way. After giving birth to a beautiful little girl, she was released from the hospital with just enough time to head out to Nashville, and to pick him up at the airport.

He had assumed that he would be heading to the hospital when he landed, but instead, he was greeted by his wife and their new daughter, Madisyn Hunter. It was easily the best day of his life, the icing on the cake for a great vacation home. Eight months into the deployment and that little girl is his favorite topic of conversation. Not a day goes by with him showing off his latest photos. That little girl is the apple of his eye, and his little princess.

Just a few days ago, Hunter chose to take the final step in his career. He signed the paperwork for his final reenlistment in the Army. Quite a crowd was on hand as SFC Jeffrey Hunter raised his right hand and repeated the oath that he knows so well. It's an oath that means the world to him, and is apparent in everything that he does. He takes it very seriously.

*We Will Never Forget
Our Fallen Eagles*

SPC David Babineau
June 16, 2006

PFC Kristian Menchaca
June 16, 2006

PFC Thomas Tucker
June 16, 2006

