From the Commander's Desk...

Throughout the years, the change of command process symbolizes the free exchange of authority from one person to another. Always held in a public arena, it is freedom's way of telling the world that we exist in a society that values "order over overthrow" and a selection process for our leaders versus a dictatorial government.

Whether the change of authority takes place in our government, with a public swearing in ceremony - or in the military, the basic purpose remains constant. One person takes responsibility for a particular job and the burdens of that job.

Most people in attendance remember the fluttering flags, the upbeat music, and the many speeches of praise for the outgoing leader followed by hope for the incoming leader. While often these speeches go on too long – at a command school, the instructor warned us that no one remembers what you say, only how long it took you to say it – it is important to focus on the very act of a peaceful change of authority.

This privilege comes at a cost and generations paid in full to assure the peaceful and orderly transfer of authority. The symbolism of furling and unfurling the changing unit's colors remains the most visible moment of the process, but the reading of each unit's history gives the process meaning. In its own way, it remembers all those who previously stood in those ranks and their dedication to cause and country.

Remember, the change of authority you witness resulted from an orderly process of selection, not by riots or violence.

Brig. Gen. Philip R. Fisher
JSC-A Commanding General

Remember, this process puts someone in authority for a set period and the outgoing authority willingly passes authority to the incoming authority at the end of that time. Finally, remember, your service today assures your place in the history future generations read as they transfer authority.

Warrior's Call

I would like to take this opportunity to thank Sgt. Maj. William Hatten for filling my role while I was on R&R. This truly has been a busy month for the JSC-A team. It brings me great pleasure to recognize the great work of the 43rd Sustainment Brigade's Command Sgt. Maj. Varner, 87th Combat Sustainment Support Battalion's Command Sgt. Maj. Howard and the 529th CSSB's Command Sgt. Maj. Smith as they return to their respective homes. I wish them a safe trip and a warm reunion with their families. Job well done, Warriors!

We welcome the warriors of the 7th SB's Command Sgt. Maj. Escalona, 298th CSSB's Command Sgt. Maj. Ward and 530th CSSB's Command Sgt. Maj. Johnson, and the mission they will do for the people of Afghanistan and the sustainment community of the JSC-A.

This issue of the "Warriors Call" will focus on the JSC-A Sgt. Audie Murphy Club.

The JSC-A Sgt. Audie Murphy Club is the only Combined Joint Operations Area-Afghanistan and unit sustaining club in Afghanistan that I am aware of. The JSC-A club was established in 2010, under the leadership and direction of 135th Expeditionary Sustainment

Operation Outreach: Helping local Afghans

 Story by 1st Lt. Andrew B. Adcock, JSC-A Public Affairs

KABUL, Afghanistan – After a military career spanning some 30 years, U.S. Army Master Sgt. Danny K. Plunkett is on his second overseas deployment to the Middle East, and, despite the austere environment, is making a difference in the lives of Afghans at the grassroots level.

Plunkett is a member of the Mississippi Army National Guard's 184th Expeditionary Sustainment Command, headquartered in Laurel, Miss. The 184th ESC is currently deployed in support of Operation Enduring Freedom and assumed responsibility of Joint Sustainment Command-Afghanistan (JSC-A) in October. The Joint Sustainment Command directs all military logistics support for American and coalition forces throughout the theater of operations.

Based out of Camp Phoenix, Afghanistan, Plunkett serves as a mentor to the Afghan National Army supply and maintenance office under JSC-A. As a member of the NATO training mission, Combined

U.S. Air Force Staff Sgt. Stacey L. Haga, ISAF HQ PAO
U.S. Army Master Sgt. Danny K. Plunkett poses with a group of Afghan children during a recent humanitarian mission to deliver blankets, clothing and food to a local village on Feb. 17.

Command and subordinate units. The club has had and continues to have members from all MOSs (not just sustainers). We welcome all Soldiers to be members, regardless of unit. The club has in the past held a benefit run and has contributed some $3,000 to a National Wounded Warrior Organization.

Currently, the JSC-A Senior NCO president is Sgt. Maj. Ruby Murray of the 7th SB, out of Fort Eustis, Va. Her high-spirited drive and dedication will take the club to new heights. If you are a Sgt. Audie Murphy member looking for a club, you have found it. If you are a non-member and have what it takes and you want to be a servant of your fellow Soldiers, contact Sgt.

Maj. Murray at this email address woowoo.murray@afghan.swa.army.mil.

The original Sgt. Audie Murphy club was started at Fort Hood, Texas, early in 1986. There were several key people at Fort Hood (officer, enlisted, civil service, and a Killeen civilian). These personnel were instrumental in getting this club up and running.

Audie Murphy was just about everything but a cowboy. Born in Texas, Murphy left school after the fifth grade and home at the age of 15. He enlisted in the Army just shy of his 18th birthday and became the most decorated Soldier of World War II. In fact, Murphy earned the Congressional Medal of Honor for standing down a German attack in France in January of 1945.

The Sergeant Audie Murphy Club is a private U.S. Army organization for enlisted non-commissioned officers (NCOs) only. Those NCOs whose leadership achievements and performance merit special recognition may possibly earn the reward of membership. Members must "...exemplify leadership characterized by personal concern for the needs, training, development, and welfare of Soldiers and concern for families of Soldiers (FORSCOM Reg. 600-8, paragraph 1)."

If an NCO meets these prerequisites, the Soldier may then be recommended by his non-commissioned officer chain of command to participate in the rigorous board examination process.

NCOs, do you want to be the best Warrior among Warriors. Take the challenge.

"You lead from the front."

‘Resolute’ Brigade assumes sustainment mission in Afghanistan

Story by Staff Sgt. Alexander Burnett and Spc. Krista Payne,
 7th SB Public Affairs

KANDAHAR, Afghanistan - It is an occasion attended by so many Service members. Soldiers, Sailors, Marines, Airmen, civilians and coalition partners all gather in a small tent with the rain pouring outside to bid farewell to one unit and welcome another.

The 7th Sustainment Brigade assumed control of the sustainment mission in Afghanistan during a transfer of authority ceremony with the 43rd Sustainment Brigade at Kandahar Airfield, Afghanistan, Feb. 28.

The ‘Rough Rider’ brigade assumed control of the sustainment mission in Afghanistan March 22, 2010, establishing themselves as the first sustainment brigade to control logistical operations in southern Afghanistan. The six battalions controlled by the brigade would be designated Task Force Rough Rider and consisted of Soldiers, Airmen, Marines and Sailors.

During their tenure, the 43rd Sustainment Brigade was responsible for driving nearly 12 million miles in convoys across the country of Afghanistan, dropping over 24 million pounds of supplies, moving over 2,400 pallets and shipping 15.5 million pounds of mail. They also partnered with eight Afghan National Security Force units and provided $1.9 million in Commander’s Emergency Response Program funds to the surrounding communities of the Kandahar Province, said Col. Ed Daly, the 43rd Sustainment Brigade commander.

“These Soldiers have been knowledgeable of ANA regulations and regularly makes recommendations on improvements to supply and maintenance procedures. His recommendations are then reported to higher logistics commands on a weekly basis.

When asked to describe his mission, Plunkett commented, “Every day I have to travel by convoy to the ANA base where I work. Each day I see children digging in trash heaps for food or anything they might be able to use for clothing or burn for heat. I see a lot of poverty. By working with the Afghan National Army, I have learned that these people are seeking the same things in life as we do in America. They want to provide for their families and hope for a better future.”

During a recent humanitarian mission, known as

Operation Outreach, Plunkett worked with his ANA mentors to deliver blankets, clothing, fuel, food and candy to a local village.

“Today I got the chance to go visit one of these poor villages, just like the ones I pass each day, and give a few things that will make their lives a little bit better,” said Plunkett. “It really makes you humble to think how blessed we are in the U.S.A. Our trash would be a treasure to some of these people over here. I saw children, dirty, and with no shoes, some dressed in what we would call rags.”

Stateside, Plunkett works full-time for the Mississippi Army National Guard in the surface maintenance office.

“I hope that one day the children I see every day will have a country to live in that is free of bombings, killings and so much hurt,” said Plunkett. “I hope that one day, we can look back on all we have done here and say that it was worth it.”

From the Inspector General's office...

By Lt. Col. Mathyn D. Williams

“Watch what people are cynical about, and one can often discover what they lack.”

- General George Patton Jr.

As stated in last month's JSC-A newsletter, the Inspector General (IG) “advises the commander on existing conditions relating to the performance of the mission and the state of discipline, efficiency, morale, esprit de corps and economy within the Army, ARNG or USAR.” To do this, the IG must work to ensure the commander, and his subordinate commanders are part of the process to address or solve problems and are not left out of the equation. Therefore, if you are thinking of coming to the IG to get help with a problem, there are some processes that you need to follow.

First, be sure you have a problem, not just a peeve. For example, are the cooks turning out lousy chow or was it just one bad meal? Next, give your chain of command a chance to solve the problem, as many problems must be addressed to the chain of command for resolution anyway, and it is far better to go through them before you come to the IG, rather than afterward. Many issues can be corrected by bringing attention to your first level supervisor and working through the chain of command, rather than from the top down. However, if you have addressed your issues or concerns to your boss, and still feel that your problem is legitimate, yet has not been corrected, then you should request to see the next level and next in progression, etc. A person should also understand that there might not be a fix in place as soon as they think it should be, and a corrective action might not be the one that the complainant wants, but rather, the one that the command element deems appropriate. For example, providing every person or section with a vehicle to conduct business with might be addressed by making arrangements for a bus to start making runs, or one or more vehicles might be procured for each section to share, etc.

If, after going through one's chain of command, the complainant feels that the IG's assistance is needed, one should try to contact their ‘local’ IG first, not an IG from another unit or back in CONUS. When an IG is contacted outside of the locally assigned IG, that IG will usually merely find out what unit the complainant belongs to and then pass the complainant’s issue to the local office. Also, IGs at higher commands (such as the USFOR-A to JSC-A OCONUS relationship or the JFH-MS IG to 184th ESC in CONUS relationship) will normally refer the case to the local IG for action. In the current deployed situation, Soldiers aligned with the JSC-A command will contact the command or Assistant Inspector’s General office located at Kandahar Airfield (KAF). These IGs are Lt. Col. Mathyn “Matt” Williams or Sgt. 1st Class Jonathan “Jay” Golden.

When you come to the IG with a problem, always be honest and don’t provide misleading information. IGs will discover the truth quickly in most cases and there are penalties for knowingly providing false information. Also, the IG cannot accurately advise you if you are not truthful and forthright with all of the pertinent details and chain of events related to your problem. It is advisable to actually sit down and type or write down your issue and see if it makes sense to you before you file a complaint. If you cannot articulate an argument that would convince yourself, then don’t expect the IG to work some sort of magic to convince the commander that you are right.

As IGs, we are bound to use the regulations and policies that have been established to set the standards or direct actions, so we cannot simply make things up as we go to help someone get their way. Also, keep in mind that IGs are not policy makers. If you believe that a policy is flawed you can submit proposed change requests on a DA Form 2028, but you cannot simply expect the IG or command element to exempt you from policies that are written for the benefit of the entire unit and larger military community. Finally, keep in mind that IGs can only recommend, not order a resolution. Only commanders can order; the role of the IG is to “advise” the commander, not tell the commander what to do. If after considering all of this, please contact your local IG office, Lt. Col. Mathyn D. Williams, DSN 318-421-6568 / Email mathyn.williams@afghan.swa.army.mil or SFC Jonathan J. Golden, jonathan.Golden@afghan.swa.army.mil.

Lifeliners aid local clinic

Story by Spc. Michael Vanpool, 101st SB Public Affairs

BALKH PROVINCE, Afghanistan – Soldiers of the 101st Sustainment Brigade visited a local hospital in the Dehdadi District here to evaluate the building and necessity of medical supplies and equipment, Feb. 22.

The project is part of the continuing Commander’s Emergency Response Program of the 87th Combat Sustainment Support Battalion, 101st Sust. Bde., and a partnership between the U.S. Soldiers, Afghan National Army and the local government in Dehdadi.

“We visited the clinic to assess the structural and medical needs to help create a CERP project for the local population to provide healthcare support for the community,” said Maj. Deidre Lockhart, officer in charge of medical operations, 101st Sust. Bde.

The 87th CSSB CERP team coordinates with the population of the Dehdadi District to find ways to improve the community. “Every month, we go to the sub-governor’s meeting with the village elders,” said Sgt. 1st Class Nakya McDaniels, CERP team paying agent. “Other than education, they all talked about this hospital.”

The hospital has the capabilities to support about 50 people, yet supports nearly 200,000 people throughout the Dehdadi District as the only hospital in the district, McDaniels said.

“Right now, they have limited area, limited operating room space, no mom and children equipment,” Lockhart said. “They are limited in support of their own population. We have to help the locals as much as possible.”

A majority of the equipment at the clinic is about a decade old, Lockhart said. “They really need incubators and bili lights to help the children, because the area has a horrible infant mortality rate,” she said.

The CERP team plans to provide up-to-date medical equipment, as well as the skills to sustain it. “They need a medical maintenance plan,” Lockhart said, “Now they take the equipment back to whoever gave them the equipment. We’re looking to give them equipment that will require less maintenance to make them self-sufficient.”

The team also assessed the ability of the hospital to power the medical equipment. “It’s outdated, corroded

The hospital also needs more space to provide medical care for the thousands of locals in the Dehdadi District. There is not enough space for the hospital to expand out, but the CERP team plans to expand up, O’Bryant said.

“We went to check the structures to see if the hospital could hold and support a second floor, instead of tearing it down completely,” said Sgt. 1st Class Jerome Parker, CERP team purchasing officer.

The CERP team plans to expand the clinic, without disrupting its operations during the construction. “They don’t have the room to move somewhere else in the mean time,” Parker said.

The local population will be hired by the CERP team for the improvements to the hospital. “The contractors are from this area and know how important it is,” McDaniels said. “They may subcontract to hurry up and get the hospital up and running.”

The development of the hospital is being funded by the CERP team with the operations controlled by the clinic and local population. “We’re trying to get them to build their own medical industry, so they can trust their own government, own healthcare system,” Lockhart said.

Selfless service - Put the welfare of the nation, the Army and your subordinates before your own.

Selfless service leads to organizational teamwork and encompasses discipline, self-control and faith in the system.

This concept is instilled in Service members from day one of initial entry training to the day of retirement.

With contingency operations still in effect, the question leaders should be asking subordinates is, "What is in it for me?"

This may seem like a selfish question especially in the Army where teamwork, team building and selfless service are a few of our core values. However, this question should not be used to selfishly seek gratification or go against the Army values, it should be the concept leaders address to subordinates in order to seek their goals, values and ambitions.

To fully understand, every Service member has a goal or an ambition to be what they want to be in the future. However, it takes the leader to seek out what Service members want in order to assist them in their quest of fulfillment.

This concept coincides with self-actualization in Maslow's hierarchy of needs and can be used to help junior ranking Service members reach their full potential.

When Service members feel they are working towards their inner goals, their team unity will be elevated to a level beneficial to them, their unit, and the Armed Forces.

So, the next time you are sitting with a junior Service member ask them, "What's in it for you," and help them reach their objectives.

Lt. Col. Rowells wins online competition to join Woods at Omega Dubai Desert Classic Pro Am

Source: GULF NEWS

DUBAI: A U.S. Army officer serving in Afghanistan has won the lucky draw to play with Tiger Woods during the Omega Dubai Desert Classic Pro Am at the Emirates Golf Club on Feb. 9.

Over 16,000 amateur golfers from all over the world registered online for the Tiger Woods Pro Am Competition that offered "the chance of a lifetime" to play alongside arguably the greatest golfer of modern era in the traditional curtain-raiser to the European Tour event.

Lt. Col. Michael Rowells, the winner of the competition, was picked by Mohammad Yahya of Dubai, a long-time sponsor of the tournament, in the presence of Mohammad Juma Bu Amim, Vice Chairman and CEO golf in DUBAi, the promoters and organizers of the Omega Dubai Desert Classic.

It's just a great coincidence that the winner of the online competition happens to be an army officer like Woods' late father Earl, who himself had retired as a lieutenant colonel from the U.S. Army. In fact, the pet name "Tiger" was borrowed from a Vietnamese soldier and friend of his father.

Lt. Col. Rowells, who plays off a decent nine handicap, will join Woods along with two other amateurs in a marquee four-ball during the Pro Am, and he is looking forward to the experience of a lifetime.

Support Operation's Corner

By:

*Maj. Danny J. Scanlon
Capt. Kelly S. Carey*

The Joint Sustainment Command-Afghanistan (JSC-A) Support Operations (SPO) directorate is comprised of highly experienced logisticians who provide management and oversight over the services that are required to sustain the war fighter. The JSC-A SPO chief, Col. Craig M. Weaver, is responsible for synchronization of sustainment in order to ensure all ground and air transportation, service and supply activities, human resources and munitions support are provided. All of this is linked together by organic and contract services. Sustainment operations cannot function without the vital support of contracts and the funding that pays for them and that is why the operational contract support (OCS) branch exists.

What is OCS? To many junior officers, OCS is associated with physical pain and the mental torment of officer candidate school. But in the world of logistics, OCS is known as operational contract support. Not to be confused with "contracting," OCS provides oversight and planning for all contract activities within the JSC-A. It does not, however, write contracts.

Lt. Col. Milton L. Griffith serves as the OCS branch chief and his team provides planning support to all the SPO branches and every subordinate unit. They also provide oversight for all contracted activities within the JSC-A. The branch is comprised of five logisticians that perform liaison functions in order to facilitate the coordination of requirements and plans with U.S. Forces-Afghanistan, Defense Contract

Management Agency, Central Command Contracting Command, Regional Contracting Centers, Logistics Civilian Augmentation Program (LOGCAP), and Rock Island, Ill.

OCS is a team effort so let's meet the rest of the team, which has over 117 years of experience in the military combined. Maj. Danny J. Scanlon, with 23 years of service, is the deputy branch chief responsible for synchronizing the daily operational schedule and coordinating all staff activities. Additionally, Scanlon is the primary planner and point of contact for major contracts such as Host Nation Trucking (HNT), National Afghan Trucking (NAT) and Afghan Regional Trucking (ART). He also serves as the branch chief in his absence.

Chaplain's Message... by Petty Officer 2nd Class William McCall

What does “over the hump” really mean? According to the website, www.thefreedictionary.com, over the hump implies going past the most difficult or dangerous part of something.

As I was asked to write this article, it was “suggested” to write something to the effect of the 184th Expeditionary Sustainment Command being over the hump. The first thing that came to mind was complacency.

In the military, we have a phrase for complacency – Complacency KILLS. Does it always? No. Complacency in the office or at the wash rack is most likely not going to kill you. However, letting simple rules and regulations slip on a daily basis can turn into bad situations very quickly. The most seasoned workers are often called upon to do the difficult tasks, and get the work done quickly and efficiently. They are recognized and rewarded for their ability to solve problems. They also are rewarded for doing the job quickly with no fuss and teaching younger Service members “the tricks of the trade.” Unfortunately, they skip tiresome and time-consuming safety rules. Most of our rules and regulations are written in blood. Someone has gone before you and used the same unsafe method and chopped a finger or two off, and now there are safety guidelines in place to allow you to keep all of your phalanges.

As a Sailor coming to war with the Army, I had to attend the Navy Individual Augmentee Combat Training Course located at Fort Jackson, S.C. Our drill sergeant instructors taught us how to line up in formation, speak and shoot the Army way. During our indoctrination brief towards the end, the command master chief said a few words. He talked about how Sailors like to leave ammunition in the weapons and make their way back to the barracks’ clearing barrel and discharge the firearm in the clearing barrel. We all laughed and thought – that will NEVER happen to me. Guess what? On the way to the barracks on the last day of the training cycle, a Sailor did just that. She somehow slipped past the range barrels and made it back to the clearing barrel outside of her barracks with a round in the chamber. Complacency enabled this Sailor to walk up to the barrel, place the weapon on fire and pull the trigger. BANG! Fortunately, the round was a blank and the situation ended with no injury. Needless to say, this Sailor was completely embarrassed and had to answer to the command staff as to why she did not follow the rules.

Although we may not clear our weapons everyday and have an opportunity to experience a negligent discharge, attention to detail is key. Let us not have to learn from experience that SOPs and guidelines are created to keep us safe. We may be over the hump, but the 184th ESC is still in Kandahar, Afghanistan. Know your individual roles and responsibilities for every situation pertaining to you and your section. Be vigilant and God bless.

overseeing and reporting all direct support requirements for the JSC-A. Cannon has the additional duty of Joint Acquisition Requirements Board (JARB) administrator for the JSC-A, and is responsible for ensuring requirement packets from the JSC-A and its subordinate units are staffed, prepared correctly and ready to be reviewed for validation by the U.S. Forces-Afghanistan (South) JARB.

Sgt. Maj. Joseph J. Elder, by far the senior member of our team with over 32 years of service, is the operations noncommissioned officer-in-charge, responsible for performing all coordination activities and ensuring that branch status reports and accountability reports are submitted correctly and in a timely manner. Additionally, Elder serves as the contract officer representative (COR) of the General Dynamics Information Technology contract which augments the JSC-A with 38 contractors.

Finally, Capt. Kelly S. Carey, with over 20 years in service, is the external support officer responsible for overseeing and reporting on all LOGCAP or external support requirements within the JSC-A. Additionally, he serves as the "in-theater" training officer for OCS, currently teaching the two-day "in-theater" COR class three to four times monthly and the Acquisition Requirements Packet Orientation Course once a month. These classes are available to all United States government and Uniformed Service members who will serve as CORs or prepare requirement packets.

The goal of JSC-A is to improve the overall sustainment process. In order to accomplish this effort, the command relies upon the SPO branch to serve as the logistics nerve center to synchronize and optimize multiple efforts across the Combined Joint Operations Area-Afghanistan. While the sustainment of the CJOA-A is in fact a joint effort conducted by the Department of Defense, the reality is that uniformed personnel are not performing the majority of life support activities so the alternative solution is to overcome the gap in support capability by contracting services which free up Soldiers to perform other critical war fighter operations.

The OCS branch is "Ever There" to provide critical planning, reporting and oversight on all the contracting requirements for the JSC-A necessary to insure that our war fighters are equipped with everything they need to successfully complete their missions and assist the Afghan people in creating a more secure, stable and viable foundation upon which to build their future.

March

*As we look back over the months,
We pick up the pace of our March.
Counting down the days we have left,
We pick up the pace of our March.*

*Remembering the time away from our families,
We continue to March.
Step by step, day by day, taking on each mission,
We continue to March.*

*We are halfway through this time away,
Soon we'll be marching away.
Hoping these last few months pass very fast,
Soon we'll be marching away.*

*As we mark off the days on the calendar,
We look forward to our final March.
Boarding that plane headed for home,
We look forward to our final March.*

KANDAHAR AIRFIELD, Afghanistan – Spc. James D. Walton, of the 184th Expeditionary Sustainment Command (ESC) boosts morale of unit Soldiers by providing a taste of home through his unique waffle and pancake breakfasts.

“We are grateful to have Spc. Walton be a part of our team,” said 184th ESC 1st Sgt. Olan M. Manning. He makes our Soldiers happy by offering a home cooked breakfast which is a welcomed break from the food served at the dining facilities here.”

Walton, a Hattiesburg, Miss., native, is assigned as a Supply NCO

(non-commissioned officer) in the Headquarters and Headquarters Company (HHC) of the 184th ESC. His daily responsibilities include accounting for all equipment inventories and ensuring supply orders are fulfilled timely so the 184th ESC can be mission ready to complete sustainment operations throughout Afghanistan.

“Supply is a part of the backbone of this unit,” said Walton. “It’s very important we make sure other sections have what they need to complete their mission here.”

Walton has served in the Mississippi Army National Guard for more than 14 years, and served one year with the Air Force reserves. Walton said he joined the military because of his father, Swayze Walton, who served in World War II as a sergeant in the U.S. Army, and his two brothers who both served in Vietnam.

“All my family was in the Army and that is what I wanted when I joined,” said Walton. “I knew I wanted to make a career out of it. Even though I had a 22-year break, the military never left my mind.”

During his 22-year break from the Army, Walton worked as a project manager at Albey Custom Painting. Walton originally joined the Mississippi National Guard in 1976 and served 12 years. He reenlisted in 2007. Currently, he is deployed in support of Operation Enduring Freedom on Kandahar Airfield in Afghanistan.

Walton said he decided to start cooking breakfast because he did not like the food provided by the dining facility and did not want to go hungry. Walton further explained that once he started cooking breakfast for himself other unit

Soldiers would join him. Cooking breakfast for unit Soldiers soon became an ongoing occurrence.

“In the beginning, I started to cook breakfast by section on Fridays where everyone could get a taste of home cooking,” said Walton. “But then as word started to spread, more and more people would show up and I wasn’t going to turn anyone down. So, now I cook breakfast three times a week and sometimes more if asked.”

The home-cooked breakfasts are made possible because Walton’s wife, Karen, sends most of the mix used to cook the reoccurring breakfasts. Walton also is supported by the people who eat the pancakes and waffles because their family members stateside send supplies, as well, explained Walton.

“I enjoy cooking waffles and pancakes here for the Soldiers,” Walton said. “It gives them a little piece of back home cooking. When I see a smile on their face and receive a thank you, it is all worth it.”

Members of the unit appreciate the efforts that Walton puts into his breakfast meals.

“I enjoy what Spc. Walton does cause some mornings it’s just good to be able to walk to work and have a little taste of home,” said Cpl. Benjamin J. Pharris. “It breaks the monotony of the day to day life of being away from home.”

Walton plans on continuing to provide a home-cooked breakfast, three times-a-week, as long as he has the supplies handy throughout the rest of the deployment.

Surgeon's Section...by Col. Gordon S. Moshman

The last few weeks in Kandahar, Afghanistan, have seen cool wet weather, one day of some sleet, multiple days of rain with secondary flooding, mud and “gumbo” accumulation. The weather forecast for the next few weeks looks like the cool spell we are currently experiencing will lift and the relatively warmer weather will return. Historically, the wettest months have been February through April.

With the warmer weather and with standing water comes the threat of malaria. To be fair, most of the malaria in Afghanistan is in the eastern part of the country near the flooded fields along the rivers moving east to lower elevations in Pakistan. However, it is still a factor in Regional Command-South. Malaria is of four different types spread by a mosquito vector which feeds at dusk to the early evening time frame. What concerns us most acutely is the falciparum variety which can be overwhelming and result in cerebral malaria and, if not recognized, rapidly fatal. To that end, I have tried to reinforce Central Command's directive to maintain proper malaria chemoprophylaxis. Most of us are taking or should be taking doxycycline 100 mg daily. This is a tetracycline compound no different than what is often given long term to teenagers for facial acne or to adults for another skin condition called acne rosacea.

I often hear how this medicine is bad for us or can cause condition “X” or condition “Y”, but everything in life is a trade off. The benefit is protection from the various types of malaria. The most common adverse effect of this medicine seems to be associated with a photodermatitis or skin reaction to the sun. Occasionally, it is not tolerated for gastrointestinal reasons even if taken with food. Also, occasionally, it is associated with a yeast infection, most commonly in women. In those cases, mefloquine 250 mg weekly is then prescribed as an alternative.

We are directed to take the doxycycline for four weeks after leaving Afghanistan for the continental United States, or the mefloquine for two weeks after. Besides these prophylactic measures, there is another medicine called primaquine which is to be given for 14 days at 15 mg of the base with and in addition to the doxycycline or mefloquine. This latter medicine treats the extra-erythrocytic phase of two types of malaria, plasmodium vivax and plasmodium ovale, where the parasite effectively “hides” in the liver rather than appears in the blood. Service members who have deficient levels of an enzyme called G6PD (Glucose 6 Phosphate Dehydrogenase) are not offered this dosage because of a severe hemolytic reaction where the red blood cells are broken down causing severe anemia. They can, however, be offered an attenuated dose of 45 mg of the base weekly for eight weeks under consultation with a tropical medicine or infectious disease expert. All Service members are checked for adequate levels of G6PD early in their military career and those deficient are notified and notated accordingly in their medical records.

There have been documented cases of Soldiers returning from Afghanistan, not taking the recommendations seriously, and some 150 days later coming down with clinical malaria. In the states, it is not the first thing on a clinician's mind when approached by a patient with chills and fever, so the diagnosis is often not made immediately. The disease can progress and when the diagnosis is made, the regional maintenance supervisor at Travel Center of America. He ensures the stores stay operational and keeps a good preventative maintenance schedule on all the equipment. Also, after deployment, Walton will be resuming the role of assistant fire chief and medical officer of the Volunteer Fire Department of Flora, Miss.

Walton married his wife, Karen, in 1989, and they have six children; Brigette 32, Debra and Jessica both 29, Thomas 25, who is also in the Army as a staff sergeant, Robert 24, Brandon 22 and 13 grandchildren. Two more grandchildren are on the way.

Walton said he misses his family the most while he is on deployment and that his wife, Karen, and his kids is what keeps him going.

“I look forward to being with my wife again,” said Walton. “Also, I am looking forward to just spending some quality time with all the members of my family. I am sure the kids are growing up so much while I am gone.”

184th ESC Family Readiness Group Update

The FRG for the 184th has been in full swing since deployment. Monthly meetings are held at the Hattiesburg Armory and at Ridgecrest Baptist Church in Madison, Miss. Statewide meetings have included a fun trip in October to Mitchell Farms Pumpkin Patch in Collins, Miss. Families had a great time picking pumpkins, feeding animals at the petting zoo, taking a hay ride and playing fun kids games.

At Christmas, a potluck lunch was held at the armory and kids received gifts from Santa. Families were treated to $25 gift cards to Wal-Mart from an anonymous donor. More than 15 boxes were sent with candy and goodies for Christmas, including a tree for the unit to enjoy in Afghanistan.

On Feb. 12, the FRG held a Yellow Ribbon Event in Ridgeland, Miss. Families went to the Mississippi Arts and Crafts Museum and enjoyed lunch with the Mississippi Murder Mystery Theater.

The FRG has sent many boxes to the Morale Tent with goodies and decorations for Valentines and Mardi Gras. We are working on boxes for Easter.

We are working hard to increase communications with our families. A Facebook account has been created and we encourage families to request to join at the 184th ESC FRG. Regular updates are posted on Facebook.

E-mail updates are also sent out. If we do not have a current e-mail address for you and you would like to be added to the list for e-mail updates, please e-mail Ellen Bond at ebond1984@att.net.

We encourage everyone to get involved. Upcoming meetings are:

Safety

By: 1st Lt. Rodney L. Hall Jr.

Over the past few months, there has been an increase in slips, trips and accidental falls. Here are some simple ways to reduce your risk:

- Practice good housekeeping – keep work areas clean and free of spills or debris; clean or draw attention to spills immediately and clean up or report any debris as soon as practical.
- Wear proper footwear for environmental conditions, such as ice, snow and rain.
- Change light bulbs as needed – report flickering or burnt out lights to ensure properly lit workspaces.

- Use a flashlight – if you will be walking through or working in a dim environment, bring your own source of light to help you identify hazards.
- Be a cautious carrier – don't carry a load that will obstruct your view while walking and make sure you have a clear walkway to utilize before picking up large objects.
- Take your time – if you anticipate slip or trip hazards, walk with caution and make wide turns at corners.

Always use your best judgment and be cognizant of the hazards during weather changes in your work area.

With these steps, you can better ensure your safety and reduce your risk of tripping hazards.

parasite burden is substantial and the disease is serious. No one needs this kind of problem, not the Service members or their families. There is some possibility that some of these recommendations may change such that daily or weekly prophylaxis will be conducted year round in RC-East as it is now, but in RC South, medicine will be given from March into November, with the primaquine or “terminal prophylaxis” provided in theater, rather than waiting to receive it after returning home. No prophylaxis will be given during the winter months. However, that decision may be months off. In the interim, I ask all to take seriously the recommendations put into place to prevent malaria.

As I prepare to return to my wife, my children, my dog, my practice and my life on the ranch in Nebraska, it has been an honor and privilege to work with a group as competent and professional as the 184th Expeditionary Sustainment Command/Joint Sustainment Command-Afghanistan. I truly wish all of you and your families the best. God bless and stay safe.
