CFC solicits Marines for charitable donations

Pfc. Kevin Crist
COMBAT CORRESPONDENT

The Combined Federal Campaign is here and federal employees will have the opportunity to donate to the charities of their choice.

“The CFC is a once-a-year solicitation that combines over 2,800 different charitable organizations,” said Tom Spencer, the associate director of the CFC in San Diego. “It gives people an opportunity to give.”

The official campaign is annually scheduled to begin Sept. 1 and end Dec. 15; however, payroll deductions can continue year round, explained Spencer. Volunteers come together to make the CFC possible.

“We encourage our volunteers to donate first in order to give them a standing ground to be able to talk to others about donating,” said Spencer.

The San Diego CFC is the third largest donating area in the nation, according to Spencer.

Charities include the Wounded Warrior Battalion, the Marine Corps Heritage Fund and the Postal Employees Relief Fund.

The San Diego CFC appeals mostly to the United States Marine Corps, the United States Navy, the postal service and federal employees.

“Of the 2,800 different charities, anyone can find a reason to donate to one of them,” said Spencer. “Some of the charities just strike home for some people.”

There are four different ways to donate: cash, check, payroll deductions or online, and a donor can make a payment as low as $2 each paycheck.

Spencer explained that the San Diego CFC made approximately $6.6 million last year and hopes to raise $7 million this year.

Unit representatives are available for those who want to donate.

Back to school blood drive

Lincoln Military Housing is sponsoring a special Back to School Blood Drive on Thursday, Sept. 22, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., at the MCAS Miramar MILCON Clubhouse in the housing area, 2300 Elrod Ave. (near Mills Park.)

All units collected support the military wherever it is needed. Each week, units of blood travel to locations such as Afghanistan and onboard Navy ships in support of the troops. In addition, units are used for patients at the Naval Medical Center San Diego and also the Naval Hospital in Camp Pendleton. Up to three lives can be saved with each donation.

To make an appointment on line for the Miramar Housing Area blood drive, please visit www.militarydonor.com and type “miramarhousing” in the sponsor code. Appointments help make the process fast, easy and convenient.

All donors will receive a T-shirt. Call LaShawn Hunt at (858)586-1039 for more info.

For more info about how your blood donation benefits the military and the troops overseas visit: www.militaryblood.dod.mil.

NOTE: Those who deployed to Iraq or Afghanistan are deferred for one year after their return to the United States due to travel to a malarial endemic area.

practice active shooter hazard procedures.

The notional scenario was a call to PMO in response to an angry Marine out-processing at the IPAC building. As PMO arrived on scene, shots were heard from inside. PMO then entered the building to disarm the assailant after thoroughly searching the premises, cordoning rooms and assisting victims with various gunshot wounds.

PMO, using different officers each time, ran through the hazard evolution four times. During the final run-through, an ARFF first responder team was dispatched along with San Diego County EMS ambulances to deliver "victims" to nearby hospitals.

"The purpose of the drill is to give PMO a situation as real as possible to deal with a mass casualty situation factoring in an active shooter," said Kevin Kelley, the anti-terrorism and emergency manager for Miramar. "We don't get over-detailed. That gives the role playing participants some free-play, so they have to actually deal with whatever decisions they make when they enter the building."

The fire alarms went off as the assailant fired blank ammunition in the building. Rather than turning them off because they were not scheduled in the exercise, officers, victims and medical personnel had to work through the distraction due to its real life possibility.

"We do this exercise annually to test current base hazard policies and procedures," said Capt. Christopher P. Lanum, the operations officer, Miramar Provost Marshal's Office. "Repetition of these drills allows us to fine-tune our methods and respond better to the real thing."

Although hazard exercises are practiced throughout the year, one large mass casualty scenario is held annually approximately one month prior to the Air Show to prepare for any potential threat.

Vikings train for FAC-A*Pfc. Kevin Crist

COMBAT CORRESPONDENT

Marine All-Weather Fighter Attack Squadron 225, also known as the Vikings, returned from training at Avon Park Air Force Range, Fla., Aug. 26.

VMFA(AW)-225, along with many other rotary and fixed wing agencies, practiced engaging in close air support of ground troops as well as honing their communication skills between the Joint Tactical Air Controllers and Forward Air Controller Airborne pilots from Aug. 1 to 26.

Maj. Jared Cagle, the assistant operations officer for VMFA(AW)-225 and a Greenleaf, Idaho, native, explained that simulated airfields and urban complexes at the range create the training environment. In the scenarios, a friendly unit on the ground would set up an outpost or convoy that would take an improvised explosive device hit, or would be fired at by mortars or a sniper in a portion of the urban area.

The unit would then call for indirect fire to suppress the threat while bringing in dismounted vehicles simultaneously with the overhead attacks, explained Cagle.

The ground units were able to drive through and create a mobile scenario, he explained.

"We had laser-guided bombs, simulated laser training rounds and simulated GPS-guided weapons, so it was a communications drill," he said. "We had multiple targets being engaged at the same time to allow that ground unit to pull up do their part, so communication was crucial."

Everything during the training was challenging, explained Capt. Richard Sterling Norton, a pilot with VMFA-225 and Santa Cruz, Calif., native.

"The biggest challenge during the training was dealing with the real world changes during the different scenarios," said Norton. "We would be briefed on a very specific plan of what is supposed to happen during the mission - and it doesn't always go exactly as planned. Maybe some asset checks on station early or late and we don't expect it, and the hardest part was being flexible and figuring out how to deal with those problems."

"It is definitely one of the busiest things I've ever done," said Norton. "We had to integrate all we learned and effectively employ everything together in a way that will maximize fire power on the target area and deconflict it from friendly units."

"We were in unfamiliar territory: there were target setups and ranges we were not used to so it was more realistic training for deployment," said Cagle.

Though the squadron is not scheduled to be deployed any time soon, the training ensures they uphold Marine Corps standards to be ready at a moment's notice.

3rd MAW Band sounds off for 'Pinedorado Days'

CAMBRIA, Calif. - More than 100 veterans, active-duty service members and their families applaud for the 3rd Marine Aircraft Wing Band following a concert at the American Legion Post 432 here Sept. 3.

CAMBRIA, Calif. - Gunnery Sgt. Jesse Barta, drum major of the 3rd Marine Aircraft Wing Band, leads the band during the Pinedorado Days Parade here Sept. 3. The band received the Best Musical Group Award for their performance in the parade.

CAMBRIA, Calif. - The 3rd Marine Aircraft Wing Band packed up their instruments and drove six hours north to Cambria, Calif., Sept. 2 to 4, to support the town's annual "Pinedorado Days," which consists of a music and art festival.

The American Legion Post 432 and the Lions Club of Cambria planned for the band's arrival for eight months and sponsored the entire trip.

"It was our privilege to bring the band to Cambria," said Greg Sanders, the commander of Post 432, and a Cambria native. "They are America's finest."

Post 432 motorcycle riders rode to the outskirts of Cambria to escort the band upon its arrival. Cambria residents greeted the band with waving American flags, salutes and cheering.

"From the moment we arrived, it was literally the warmest welcome we've ever had," said Sgt. David Street, a flute player with the 3rd MAW Band, and Detroit native. "It was a real 'proud to be American' moment."

The band's contemporary music section, or "Party Band," performed during a dinner at the Post 432 building Friday. The Party Band featured several soloists including Sgt. Armando Silva and Cpl. Carlos Sanchez, both trumpet players, Sgt. Erik Dewhirst, a trombone player and Sgt. William Fariss, a saxophone player.

On Saturday, the band marched in the Pinedorado Days Parade with more than five high school bands. They received the Best Musical Group Award for their performance.

Having Marines here to march in the parade is a wonderful event, explained Jim Bevan, the president of the Lions Club, and a Cambria native. Cambria residents are proud of their service and the heritage they carry on.

The band's final concert featured a small jazz section, or "Jazz Ensemble." The ensemble performed songs such as "L-O-V-E," which featured Dewhirst and Sgt. Jennifer Preston, a flute player, singing a duet. The entire band also performed songs including "Semper Fidelis" and "God Bless America," which also featured Preston singing.

The musicians ended the night with a slow rendition of "The Marines' Hymn." While the band played, Gunnery Sgt. Jesse Barta narrated a speech called "What is a Marine?"

"'What is a Marine?' is a solemn tribute to the Marines of the past," said Street. "While he [Barta] was narrating it, you could really feel the emotional tension of the veterans and their families. It was the best experience I've had in the six years I've been in the Marine Corps. We forget sometimes what it feels like to perform for the American public and how much they enjoy listening to us play. They showed genuine affection for us. It was a real treat to come up here."
