Boathouse provides vital service at K-Bay

By Sgt. Becki Butler

The K-Bay Air Station has its own small naval service. This little armada is sometimes incorrectly lumped together with Special Service's Marina functions.

Actually, Waterfront Operations (Navy Boathouse) is a section of its own, equipped with one Landing Craft Medium (LCM-6), two 40-foot Aviation Rescue Vehicles (AVR), and two 18-footers. And it is part of Station Operations and Maintenance Squadron (SOMS).

Navy Boathouse personnel consist of eight engineman, five boatswain mates, and an electrician. The officer in charge is Navy Warrant Officer Dave Thomas. They do all the maintenance and repair for their vessels; but their job doesn't stop there. They have saved many tax dollars by completely overhauling one of the AVRs inside and out and finishing it with a beautiful paint job.

SAR TEAM

The Navy Boathouse sailors' most vital job is serving as a search and rescue (SAR) team for the jet blast area in Kaneohe Bay. The Crash Crew alarm sounds, and it takes only one minute for the sailors to drop everything and get underway in their AVR. A downed pilot can rely on these speedy sailors to fish him out of danger.

The jet blast area is off limits for sailboats, someone is always stationed in the boathouse tower for surveillance. Occasionally, the Coast Guard calls them for assistance when sailboats are beached, caught in the coral reef or a buoy has broken loose in that area.

After stormy weather and with fishing nets in hand, the sailors patrol the bay and fuel piers, picking up debris and cleaning up pollution along the way. A distress call sometimes brings them armed with an oil containment boom which prevents leaking oil from spreading, and a cotton type material that acts like paper towels and cleans up the oily mess.

FEMALE BOS'N MATE

Other equipment aboard the AVR includes a mysterious looking box. The box was especially built to help the shortest sailor in the section reach the AVR wheel. Although petite Boatswain's Mate Third Class Wanda Locklear has to stand on her tip toes in order to maneuver the boat on patrol, she has the respect of her male peers.

The twenty-four year-old sailor has worked at the boathouse for four months, and she loves her job. "I prefer working in the out-of-doors, and if I'm lucky, someday I'll be assigned aboard a large Navy ship. I enjoy a challenge," she explains, "and the Navy has offered that challenge for me and given me confidence in my abilities."

"I wouldn't trade my job for anything", she concludes. The male sailors seem to have accepted the only female boatswain mate at K-Bay, agreeing she fits right in with the team.

With such teamwork, the mission is accomplished efficiently. Warrant Officer Thomas proudly comments about his shop, "My people are the best workers I've ever had!"

SOMS Waterfront Operations may be a small section at the Air Station, but knowing that they're always alert in case of emergencies, boaters and aviators should feel a lot safer in the sea.

Off-duty MPs help capture robbery suspect

Two off-duty Marine military policemen had their tour of duty extended an additional hour last Friday, but not on-base — off-base.

The two men, Corporals Joseph Estrada and Esteban Gallegos, were driving home at 6:15 a.m. after getting off their night shift. Heading down Kailua Road, past the Bank of Hawaii, the Marines heard some glass breaking.

They looked in the direction of the sound and spotted a man standing near the bank door. "The man just looked at us," said Gallegos, "so we looked back."

After the "I see you" confrontation, the MPs, realizing that the man "may be armed," jotted down the vehicle's license number and looked for a police officer. Finding one a block away, they reported the strange happenings at the bank.

That would have been the end of the involvement for anyone else. Not so for these Marines. The officer, Gordon Young, lost the suspect's vehicle in the traffic and the Marines had to point it out.

The man was finally apprehended and a white bank bag was confiscated from his car. He didn't have a chance to open it, but if he had, he would have found only cancelled checks and bank receipts. He did not touch the night deposit box.

Gallegos and Estrada filed a statement at police headquarters and finally went home after their impromptu extended tour of duty.

New CO at 463

Marine Heavy Helicopter Squadron (HMH)-463 got a new commanding officer last Friday when Lieutenant Colonel Steven Field assumed command of the "Heavy Haulers" from Lieutenant Colonel William Sinnott.

Lieutenant Colonel Sinnott, who has commanded the squadron since June 1975, will be reassigned to Marine Aircraft Group (MAG)-24 Logistics and Supply Section.

For LtCol. Field, the "Sea Stallion" Squadron is not unknown territory. He was executive officer of '463 from June 1975 until June of last year when he was promoted to his present rank. Since then he has been the MAG-24 logistics officer.

In previous assignments, LtCol. Field has served primarily with tactical helicopter units both in the States and overseas.

Before reporting to K-Bay, he was executive officer of the NROTC unit at the University of West Florida in Pensacola.

The new commanding officer's decorations include three Distinguished Flying Crosses, 24 Air Medals and the Navy Commendation Medal with Combat "V".

He is married to the former Carol Morthorst of New Albany, Ind. They have four children.

Applications due soon for FY78 WO program

Kaneohe Bay Marines hoping for selection to warrant officer in Fiscal Year 78 have a little over six weeks to submit applications to Headquarters Marine Corps.

March 15 is the deadline for all applications in the FY 78 Warrant Officer Program. A selection board will convene in April to pick regular and Reserve Marines for permanent warrant officer status.

All Regular Marines selected will be appointed to warrant officer at their parent command and then attend a 15-week course at The Basic School, Quantico, Va.

Marine Corps Bulletin 1040 of Nov. 22, 1976 indicates waivers for time-in-service will be granted up to a minimum of 5 years and a maximum of 20 years service. The move was made to include those Marines who were excluded from applying for the FY 77 Limited Duty Officer Program. That program will be selecting warrant officers (CWO-2 through CWO-4) for regular commissions.

HQMC officials said that time-in-service waivers are the only ones accepted by the board.

Active duty Marines are eligible to apply for one of 68 MOSs.

They are:

Navy Relief announces student loan program

The Navy Relief Society offers student loans to dependent children of Navy and Marine Corps personnel, active and retired, for attendance at college or for vocational training. Applicants must be under the age of 23 and have completed high school.

Beginning with the 1977 school year a student may receive $1,500 per year with total school loans for an individual up to $6,000. Requests are now being taken for the '77 school year, and approval will be based on the need of the student as determined by family size and income.

Applications need not be completed in every detail, since the determination of college selection may not be final at time of submission. However, they should be completed insofar as possible and must be postmarked prior to the deadline of March 15.

Requests for applications or additional information should be forwarded to the Navy Relief Society, Room 1228, 801 North Randolph Street, Arlington, Virginia 22203.

Registration is required for motocross/dirt bikes

The Station Commanding Officer has directed that all motocross/dirt motorcycles be properly registered with the K-Bay Provost Marshal's Office, and be maintained in safe operating condition.

To reduce problems in identifying owners of apparently abandoned motocross/dirt motorcycles; determining identification of stolen dirt bikes; and the potential safety hazards in operating uninspected cycles of this type, a registration and safety inspection program has been instituted.

Beginning Tuesday, the PMO will inspect and register all motocross/dirt bikes. Persons who own such vehicles aboard the Air Station have the entire month of February to get the bike registered. On March 1, the military police will issue citations to those who have not complied. If corrective action is not taken within five days of the date of the citation, the cycle will be removed from the Station.

Motorcycles will be registered with the Pass and Identification Section of the PMO, Building 576. Owners must renew the registration annually. The following requirements must be met for issuance of a decal:

(1) Applicants must possess a valid motorized current bill of sale or other type of proof, indicating their ownership of the vehicle.

(2) Applicants must possess a valid motorcycle license and have completed the Motorcycle Safety Course.

(3) The safe condition of the vehicle will be determined through inspection by the PMO.

Operators of motocross/dirt motorcycles will be required to wear helmets, eye protection and dress in accordance with guidelines set forth in the Station Order pertaining to street-driven motorcycles.

Operating restrictions are as follows:

(1) Dirt bikes will not be ridden to or from the motocross area or other designated areas. They will either be transported on another type of conveyance such as a trailer or pick-up truck, or must be pushed by hand.

(2) They will not be operated on the hard surface roadways, or other Station roadways open to motorcycles or other vehicular traffic.

(3) They will not be operated on Fort Hase Beach and those other beach areas used for sunbathing or swimming, nor operated on the Station horse trails.

Those who own and operate motocross/dirt motorcycles aboard the Air Station should check Station Bulletin 5800 of January 20, 1977, for details on inspection and registration, or visit the Provost Marshal's Office for complete information.

MABS traps 20,000th

20,000TH TRAP — With First Lieutenant Mike Rainey at the controls and Captain Dave Watson in the rear seat, this F-4J Phantom II from Marine Fighter Attack Squadron (VMFA)-235 makes the 20,000th arrested landing at the Marine Aircraft Group (MAG)-24 arrestment gear. The Launch and Recovery Section arrived here with the MAG in April 1968 and the 20,000th landing milestone was surpassed December 27, 1976.

By Sgt. Wil' Wilson

Neither rain, nor snow, nor sleet, nor hail, nor dark of night have kept K-Bay's Launch and Recovery crew from doing its appointed duties. The crew has in fact trapped more than 20,000 aircraft in its arresting gear for Marine Aircraft Group (MAG)-24 since launch and recovery operations were established here in April 1968.

It's a milestone of sorts for the 31 enlisted men and one officer who now man the Marine Air Base Squadron (MABS)-24 Launch and Recovery Section. Their job is a 24-hour a day, seven-day-a-week assignment, according to Master Sergeant Joseph Gobeil, NCOIC of this section.

"It's probably the most underrated section in the Brigade because nobody knows what it does," claims MSgt. Gobeil, who was quick to explain that his section is continuously performing maintenance on two sets of arresting gear for the MAG and four for the Station which are used besides regular training for emergency landings and during the night or rainy weather when arrestment is mandatory.

MYRIAD OF RESPONSIBILITIES

The section also maintains 370 tons of gear which can be mounted out for setting up sustained operations for an airstrip in the field. Most of this gear is palletized matting for establishing a Short Airfield for Tactical Support (SATS). This equipment also consists of arresting gear, airfield lighting, optical landing systems and heavy equipment, most of which are in operation on the airfield here.

The section is fairly flexible, according to Warrant Officer-1 Ronald Gaskell, officer-in-charge. Most of the work involves arresting airplanes and lighting West Field for helicopters and the optical landing system on the runway itself.

VERSATILITY

"We're not like other sections with many school trained people. Most of the men are 'Jacks of all trades,'" explained WO-1 Gaskell. "When there's a job to be done it's often easier for us to do it ourselves," he continued.

The versatility of the section is more easily understood by checking the variety and complexity of the jobs these Marines are engaged in. They work on diesel, gasoline and jet engines and also operate and perform routine maintenance on electrical equipment such as the optical landing system.

RETRIEVE ENGINE — Sergeant Michael Wright makes an adjustment on the diesel retrieve engine which rewinds the arresting tape after an aircraft has been successfully trapped by K-Bay's Launch and Recovery Section.

But of primary importance is the arresting gear and its hydraulic systems which have to be kept up. "We attempt not to deadline anything," explained MSgt. Gobeil, "When flying is down we work on it — sometimes all night to get it ready for the next days' flight operations."

The duty section, located in a shack between K-Bay's main runway and taxi-way, has to be on its toes at all times, according to Gobeil. "Anything can happen out there," he remarked, "and during night operations it is especially hairy."

When aircraft are coming in for an arrestment at night, the recovery crew will be watching the wing lights in relation to the runway lights. In this way, crew members can pretty much tell from experience whether the plane is on course or not.

If it rains, and arrestment is then mandatory, the recovery crew will spend much of its time pumping water out of the arresting gear pits so that no water will get into the diesel engine or the arresting gear.

The crew will also be called out to change the runway for incoming landings when the wind direction changes. Both during flight operations and immediately afterwards, there are preventive maintenance procedures which must be performed to ensure that when a pilot is in trouble on his final approach over K-Bay, he can count on a safe arrestment by the Marines at MAG-24's Launch and Recovery Section.

BLT 1/3 receives chilly welcome

By SSgt. Dave Treadway

FT. WAINWRIGHT, Alaska, Jan. 12 — When Leathernecks of Battalion Landing Team (BLT) 1/3 from K-Bay, headed for Alaska they knew it would be cold. But knowing, still didn't prepare them for the shock of the temperature change when they stepped off an Air Force C-141 jet at Ft. Wainwright in Fairbanks.

The thermometer read zero degrees and uncovered skin, unaccustomed to such treatment, quickly turned red. The Marines were equipped for the weather but merely having the proper clothing wasn't enough. The next few days would be spent learning how and when to wear it. Many BLT 1/3 Marines had never worn such huge mittens, giant boots or clumsy snowshoes. Some had never felt the crunch of snow underfoot or burning skin due to lack of heat.

"I mentally prepared myself to be cold," said Private Melvin Johnson, Headquarters and Service Co., "but when I stepped out in Alaska I wasn't prepared for this kind of cold." Corporal James Kelly, also of H&S Co., echoed his opinion, "It was unreal, man. I mean really cold. I'm from Indiana and have been cold before but I found out I wasn't prepared for this sudden change between Hawaiian and Alaskan temperatures. I'll get used to it though."

Corporal Robert Ortiz, Co. C, a native of Puerto Rico, explained his reaction to the cold this way. "I was ready to go back to K-Bay as soon as I got off the plane," he said.

And then for some it was like a homecoming. "I'm from Anchorage," stated Lance Corporal Stormy O'Briant, a mortarman from H&S Co., "and landing here was like coming home. I was tired of Hawaii because you can't make snowballs out of sand. You can do all kinds of things in the snow though. The fresh air really motivated me when I stepped off the plane!"

"The cold weather didn't bother me either," pointed out Lance Corporal David Ressegger of West Virginia, "It gets cold where I come from and I was tired of warm weather."

A strange phenomenon greeted the Hawaii-based group. At 7:30 a.m., when the plane landed, darkness still covered the world. The sun would not rise until 9:15 and would set not long after 3 p.m., totally ruining the concept of time as they knew it in Hawaii. The noon day sun was comparable to 5 to 6 p.m. in the "lower 48" as the other states are called.

Marching in the soft, white, fluffy ground covering, some Marines soon found, was no easy task. A cadence was tough to maintain when staying upright was the foremost consideration.

Protecting hands and face proved crucial since cold stiff fingers were of little value and a constant source of pain. More than one native of the "Great Land" smiled to himself as he watched a Marine, unfamiliar with arctic clothing, struggle to protect a red face.

Cold weather training in Alaska assured Hawaii Leathernecks of at least one thing, it would be cold!

Marines trade surfboards for snowshoes

By SSgt. Dave Treadway

FT. WAINWRIGHT, Alaska, Jan. 12 — First Marine Brigade Leathernecks of Battalion Landing Team (BLT) 1/3 swapped traditional footgear for foreign and unfamiliar inventions January 7 when they journeyed to Alaska and found out that wearing it was easier said than done.

Super insulated white VB boots capable of protecting feet at temperatures 50 degrees below zero replaced black spit-shined leather. Though they resembled balloons and appeared awkward, the new footgear was efficient as well as comfortable and, most important, warm.

Trail snowshoes, used for travel in deep snow, offered fewer advantages but, nevertheless, were necessary. Four feet long and weighing 20 pounds they were a problem to carry on a pack as well as to wear. Leg muscles, unaccustomed to such weight, became tired and sore after even just a short hike. Only more hiking worked out the stiffness and improved the situation.

Walking proved to be embarrassing, especially after a fall. Often a Marine, loaded with pack, rifle, and other unfamiliar arctic clothing, had to be helped back to his feet by his nearest comrade. Tangled VB boots, arms, legs and snowshoes were a common sight in the Alaskan snow for Hawaii Marines.

KEEPING COUNT — Corporal Thomas Kristof several items new to the Hawaii based Leathernecks in the Battalion Landing Team 1/3 during cold weather training at Ft. Wainwright, Alaska.

Seven feet of slippery fiberglass buckled to a boot provided another mode of transportation for Marines of Co. A 3rd Reconnaissance Battalion and helped them to keep "swift, silent and deadly" in their approach on an enemy.

Learning to master skis, however, wasn't easy for all. Several fell in the learning process and discovered that experience is a good teacher. Once they got the handle, Recon Leathernecks of warm Hawaii loved the smooth silent transportation and the advantage it afforded.

The cold, arctic, snow covered land presented a real challenge, one that BLT 1/3 Marines welcomed, accepted, tackled and then hurdled in typical "Gung Ho" fashion as they prepared for Exercise "Jack Frost."

TRAILING BY TWO — The scoreboard shows 1st Radio Battalion trailing BSSG by two points as Mike Dunning, 1st Radio Battalion, attempts to tie the score with a basket against Anthony Williams. Dunning scored 21 points for 1st Radio for a 72-50 victory.

Boxers fight tonight

Tonight is the night. The bell sounds at 7:00 p.m. at the Boon-dock Theater for the first bout of the 1977 Fleet Marine Force Pacific Boxing Tourney. Eleven boxers from various Oahu-based commands will test their pugilistic skills against the best from the West.

Coaches R. Rogers and R.O. Miller from Marine commands in Iwakuni and Okinawa, Japan have eight western Pacific finalists anxiously awaiting tonight's competition. Both coaches from the Far East feel confident their boxers will take the tourney. "We have several fighters with good speed, aggressiveness and ability," commented Miller.

Heading the Okinawa card is Hosea Spreewell weighing in at 165 pounds. This 24 year-old righthander has an impressive record behind him. He took the All-Marine title in his class in 1974, the North Carolina Golden Gloves that same year and was an All-Marine runner-up last year. Teammate Joe Putkowski has 18 fights under his belt. Having fought with the Police Athletic League (PAL) in his hometown Staten Island, New York, Putkowski has been undefeated in his last six bouts.

Representing the home front is this year's Hawaii State Golden Gloves Heavyweight runner-up Nunzio Ramirez. He made an impressive showing against this year's heavyweight champ Togafu Sefulu. Also slated to appear, Ronald Strode, last year's Hawaii State AAU champion at 132 pounds, is expected to go all the way in this tourney," admitted Coach Orestes Verge.

Rounding out the card for the local fighters is John Plunkett at 156 pounds. He was a member of last year's boxing team along with Howard Parker weighing 156 pounds, and Roland Corino stepping on the scales at 125. Corino is moving up to the 125 pound weight class in order to participate in tonight's action. Otherwise, he would have a bye at 119 pounds and go to All-Marine tournament uncontested.

Verge feels that local-based Marines will take the majority of the bouts Corino and Donald Welch putting on quite an exhibition. I'm confident that Plunkett will have little trouble in his bout against Arturo Campos from Iwakuni.

Tonight's card should be action packed with the spectators being the real winners. The bouts start 7:30 p.m., admission free.

1st Radio enters finals; Peters nets 22 points

By Sgt. Bill Jack

Teamwork is the name of the game in any sport with more than one player. Gone are the days when one person controlled a team's performance. Granted, an individual's actions might inspire his team to play better but that individual must rely on his teammates as they must rely on him in order to win.

This is an accepted style of play with everyone playing sports except maybe the court jesters from Headquarters and Service Company, Brigade Service Support Group (BSSG-H&S). They attempted to play a game of basketball against the cagers from 1st Radio Battalion Monday night and lost 72-50.

Whatever happened to passing the ball off to another player to shoot or the coach on the sideline charging his team on to victory? Before that team attempts to get on the floor again, someone should give them a few pointers on the basics.

Ball hogging is unfair to teammates, especially if the ball handler fails to score. What about the coach deserting the bench? That's a definite no-no.

Had it not been for Samuel Wells scoring 14 points, while teammates Dennis Walker and Al Womac kept the nets burning with 19 points and 15 points respectively, BSSG would have tallied only 10 points.

For 1st Radio, it was the final game of the season. They entered the playoffs leading Division One with a 9-1 record. Despite a few minor infractions, they appeared in top form against BSSG.

Andrew Peters led the way with 22 points scored followed by Mike Dunning with 21 points and Fred Jennings with 14 points.

Also in the playoffs are Marine Heavy Helicopter Squadron-463 (9-1); and Marine Air Control Squadron-2 (7-3) against the Division Two leaders, BSSG engineers (9-1), Marine Fighter Attack Squadron-235 (8-2) and Third Battalion, Third Marines (8-2).

The Armed Services Special Education and Training School (ASSETS) for children with learning disabilities is located aboard the base at Pearl Harbor. It is a licensed, private non-profit school whose purpose is to provide appropriate education for children in the elementary grades (ages 4-12) who have specific learning disabilities and whose needs are not adequately met in the public or private schools of Hawaii.

Classes are small with a maximum of eight children per teacher. Due to the low student-teacher ratio and complete individualization, entrance may be made into the program at any time during the school year. For further information, contact the school at 423-1720.

Cheap Thrills

He's Tim McCarthy

For the frosty lipped wizard of insignificant information, last Friday was the trivia king's dream delight. At 7:30 a.m. sharp the race began as the cool Marine's phone was buzzing with callers battling for the pole position in Glacier's game. As the late comedian Jimmy Durante would say, "Everybody's trying to get into the act." More than ever before, this was quite evident in the caller's relentless pursuit of the Cheap Thrills title. The iceberg kid counted at least eight buffs who were neck-and-neck for the lead. It looked like a photo finish until Hospitalman Tim McCarthy from K-Bay's Dispensary floored it and caught the checkered flag. Even the Leeward side put on their own race as Corporal W.K. Harris from Camp Smith's Service Company Office had the winning results. Here are the answers:

1. Randle P. McMurphy
2. "Rawhide"
3. Candlestick Park 4. "A Hard Day's Night" 5. Animals.

You know, it got to be so bad last week that the frost chilly Leatherneck had to retire his telephone and put its number in the trivia hall of frivolous facts. However, Glacier was totally flattered by the spectacle of the caller's trivial battle. How about one more time for old times sake? And that goes for the Leeward side too. If you got the will I got the "thrills" at 257-2431.

1. What popular singers wrote the musical score to the movie "The Graduate."
2. In the TV series "Rich Man, Poor Man" Rudy is the senator from what state?
3. What NASCAR driver was the first stock car driver to attain $1 million lifetime earnings?
4. Who was the late Janis Joplin's backup group?
5. What two actors turned down their academy awards?
