CG, FMFPac receives "Gray Eagle Award"

Story by SSgt. Steve Manuel

Lieutenant General Andrew W. O'Donnell, commanding general, Fleet Marine Force, Pacific, became the thirty-second naval aviator to receive the coveted "Gray Eagle Award" during ceremonies held Tuesday at the Pearl Harbor Officer's Club.

The traditional passing down of the symbolic trophy from the retiring holder, Navy Admiral Maurice F. Weisner, Commander in Chief, Pacific, was hosted by the Hawaii Chapter of the Association of Naval Aviation with Assistant Commandant of the Marine Corps, General Kenneth McLennan, in attendance.

The awarding of the "gray eagle" began in 1961 at the Golden Anniversary of Naval Aviation Ball held in Washington, D.C.

The elegant award, a model of a silver eagle landing on the flight deck of a wooden replica of the old USS Langley, the Navy's first aircraft carrier, bears the inscription, "The Venerable Order of the Gray Eagle — The Most Ancient Naval Aviator on Active Duty."

General O'Donnell's aviation career began in July, 1944 when he was commissioned a second lieutenant and designated a Naval Aviator following completion of the V-5 Naval Aviation Cadet Program. He has served in the First, Second and Third Marine Aircraft Wings, and has served as an exchange pilot with the U.S. Air Force's 613th Tactical Fighter Squadron.

His decorations include three Distinguished Flying Crosses, seventeen Air medals, the Legion of Merit with Combat "V" and the Purple Heart.

Street Scoop

What would you like to see in the Hawaii Marine?

Corporal Pat Lyons, Station Life-guard, Headquarters and Headquarters Squadron: "I would like to see an editorial and feedback column in the Hawaii Marine concerning Marine Corps policies."

Diana Trevino, dependent: "I would like to see a story that gives the complete information on the dispensary, such as the way it is run concerning emergency cases and until what time is a doctor available."

Lieutenant Colonel John Alexander, Station Operations and Maintenance Squadron: "I would like to see more recognition of junior Marines and sailors for their performance and contributions to the Corps, especially in areas of positive leadership."

Lance Corporal Carol Shafer, Marine Air Base Squadron-24: "I would like to see more human interest stories and personality features in the Hawaii Marine."

Captain Stephen McMahon, G-4, 1st Marine Brigade: "I would like to see more information about what is going on in the rest of the Marine Corps, especially throughout WestPac and the West Coast."

GATE CLOSURES

From time to time, it becomes necessary to close air station gates, for control purposes. An example would be if an alarm were sounded at the exchange after working hours. Marines and their dependents are reminded that the Military Police are carrying out their assigned orders and need our help and understanding.

If you have a bona fide emergency on your hands, such as an emergency trip to Tripler Army Medical Center, let the sentry know so that he may help get you on your way.

In the meantime, be patient. Your impatience or lack of cooperation may net you a longer wait. Mahalo.

SUNSET PARADE/ UNIFORM PAGEANT

Marine Barracks Hawaii will host a Sunset Parade and Uniform Pageant Wednesday honoring the Marine Corps' 204th birthday. The special ceremony is open to the public and will be conducted aboard Naval Base, Pearl Harbor at the Marine Barracks Hawaii Parade Field.

The ceremonies will commence at 5:15 p.m. with a concert by the Fleet Marine Force, Pacific Band. The parade will officially begin at 5:35 p.m. Anyone wishing to attend is requested to be seated by 5:25 p.m.

PARENTS' R.A.P.P.

The Armed Services YMCA Outreach is presenting Parents' R.A.P.P. (Rap About Parenting Problems), on Tuesday, Nov. 20 at Hale Ohana (near 7-Day Store), Bldg. 455 from 7 to 9 p.m. Susan Cleveland, director of the Child Care Center and Preschool on Marine Corps Air Station, Kaneohe Bay will be the guest speaker. Child care will be available for the evening at $1 per child. Transportation is also available. For more information or to reserve child care and transportation, call 254-4719.

COMMISSARY STORE CLOSED

The Commissary Store will be closed Saturday, Nov. 10 in observance of Veteran's Day.

The Commissary will be open for normal working hours on Tuesday, Nov. 13.

LEATHERNECK RUNNING CLUB

The Marine Corps Association, parent organization of Leatherneck Magazine and the Marine Corps Gazette, will mark this anniversary of the Marine Corps with the beginning of the Leatherneck Running Club.

Colorful running club patches and 8" x 11" certificates suitable for framing will be awarded to MCA members after they log in 500 miles, with mileage beginning on November 10.

Mileage will be on the "honor system" individuals are required to keep a log of their runs beginning on November 10, then send a letter to Leatherneck Running Club, Marine Corps Association, Box 1775, Quantico, Va. 22134, to certify the number of miles run.

The club is open to members of the Marine Corps Association and to Leatherneck and Gazette subscribers.

Complete details and a reproduction of the club patch appear in the November issues of both magazines.

PRAYER BREAKFAST TOMORROW

A prayer breakfast, sponsored by the Full Gospel Businessmen's Fellowship International, will be held at K-Bay's Windward Enlisted Club tomorrow at 8 a.m.

Call today for reservations at 254-2662 or 247-6145. For more information, call Staff Sergeant Wallace at 257-2740. Prayer breakfasts are held on the first Saturday of every month at the Windward Enlisted Club.

WOMEN'S AWARENESS GROUP

The Women's Awareness Group, led by Jane Ing and Anne Moon, is currently being offered every Monday morning from 9:30 to 11 a.m. at the Family Services Center. Group discussion emphasizes self-awareness, enhancement of self-image and self-expression while dealing with topics pertinent to group members. Topics are to be chosen by the group and may include such issues as coping with temporary separation, roadblocks preventing personal fulfillment and effects of culture shock.

FAST AND CONVENIENT — Sergeant Michael Ruwen, of Household Goods and Transportation, completes travel arrangements with Scheduled Airlines Ticket Office (SATO) representative Judy Silcox. The SATO representative is located in the Household Goods and Transportation Office, Bldg. 209 and is open Monday through Friday from 7:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. According to Mrs. Silcox, the SATO representative can make any travel arrangements that a travel agent or airlines ticket agent can make. If you have a question about what SATO can do for you, call 254-1548 or 254-1549.

OPPORTUNITIES FOR COMMUNITY INVOLVEMENT

In an effort to enhance the beauty of the island of Oahu, the city and county of Honolulu Parks and Recreation Department is seeking volunteers from the military and civilian communities to serve on the mayor's beautification committee. The city and county is looking for interested citizens, who are willing to give of their time and talents to initiate and coordinate projects that will enhance the community and bring it closer together.

Members of the military community at Kaneohe Bay are also invited to serve on the Kailua Neighborhood Board's Planning and Environmental Committees.

Interested personnel should contact the Joint Public Affairs Office at 257-3319.

It is important to remember that as individuals we may only be stationed in Hawaii for three years but by becoming involved in committees such as these, we can enhance the quality of life for those who follow us.

LOCAL SPOT BID SALE

The Defense Property Disposal Service will hold a local spot-bid sale of 250 items of government surplus at 9 a.m. Tuesday.

The sale will be held at Bldg. 4 of the Pearl City Junction area, located one block Ewa of Waimano Home Road in Pearl City. Items offered include household furniture.

All items may be inspected from 7:30 a.m. to noon and 12:30 to 3:30 p.m. today and Monday and from 7:30 to 9 a.m. on the day of the sale. For more information, call 455-5171.

RECYCLING NATURE — Lance Corporal Larry Steakley of Company A, 3d Combat Engineer Battalion, drops a load of bulldozed earth into the start of a huge pile while helping to clear the Waimanalo Bay State Park's front entrance. The Marines and the Army teamed up during the four-week project to clear the area.

A CLEAN SWEEP — Four weeks ago the area shown above was overgrown in small trees and weeds and used as a favorite dumping ground on the Windward side of Oahu. Marines from Company A, 3d Combat Engineer Battalion stationed at K-Bay and soldiers from the Army's Schofield Barracks gave the park a facelift.

'Sherwood Forest' gets facelift

To someone who has never visited Sherwood Forest, the label might sound inviting. However, the "Sherwood Forest," a nickname for the Waimanalo Bay State Park, located on Oahu's Windward coast, was far from inviting, especially at night. Its unsightly appearance was so appalling that the Waimanalo Council of Community Organizations (W.C.C.O.) decided to do something about it.

The council sought assistance from Marines of the 1st Marine Brigade at Marine Corps Air Station, Kaneohe Bay. On October 8, they began saying good riddance to bad rubbish (Sherwood Forest).

This was the start of something good as 25 Marines from Company "A", 3d Combat Engineer Battalion of the Brigade's Service Support Group (BSSG) and a few soldiers from the U.S. Army's Schofield Barracks in Wahiawa, began a beach clean-up of monumental proportions.

Using five bulldozers, a couple of 550 graders and three Army trucks for hauling, they commenced clearing the Waimanalo Park entrance area of all rubbish and vegetation, under the direction of Marine Chief Warrant Officer-2 Antonio Silva also of the 3rd Engineer Battalion at K-Bay.

Silva said, "I thought it would take us about two weeks to get the job done, but after we started, we found old refrigerators, abandoned cars, even a toilet and all sorts of rubbish."

The park area to be cleared covered only about 16 acres. But, since the park had a headstart in becoming the favorite dump on the Windward coast, it took the men four weeks to successfully complete the job.

Hawaii is well known for its 'hang loose' motto and when it came time for the Marines to take a break, eat lunch and hang loose for a while, the community came to help out in an appetizing way.

"When some of the people found out the guys were eating C-rations for their meals," said Mrs. Audrey Wagner of the W.C.C.O., who organized the lunch program for the Marines, "the entire community and merchants in Waimanalo and outer communities started sending food for the Marines."

"Even the fast food stores that most of the Marines visit out in Kailua chipped in. The bakery here in Waimanalo provided them with pastries in the mornings, the local stores sent cases of sodas, and I made sure they had plenty of ice-water," she concluded.

The Marines didn't seem to mind helping out in the least, as Private Mark White commented, "Doing this sort of thing is good, because we have a few people who are still learning how to operate some of the equipment, including myself, and this is good training for all of us."

Of course the Army couldn't let the Marines take all the credit as members from Schofield Barracks were also there at the start of the Windward Beach cleaning project. "We've been here every day helping out with three of our trucks for hauling some of this stuff out of the park, along with maintaining our trucks in good working condition," said Sergeant Lorenzo Ferguson of Schofield.

Mrs. Rose Lahi, president of the W.C.C.O. stated, "We will continue working with the state department to maintain the newly cleaned area so it will no longer be known as the 'Community Dump.'"

Mrs. Lani emphasized, "I want to get everybody working together. There are approximately 39 organizations that, together, make up the W.C.C.O. and we all want to take away the 'Sherwood Forest' label from the park and our community."

CENTRAL MICHIGAN UNIVERSITY

Central Michigan University offers Master of Arts degree programs in Management & Supervision and Community Leadership in Hawaii. The CMU's academic advisor, Doctor Howard Hevern, will be at K-Bay's Joint Education Center every Thursday from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. He will provide academic advising to current and prospective students in CMU's MA programs. The CMU office at K-Bay will be open from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. every Tuesday. For further information please contact the CMU Center Representative at 254-2694 (Tuesdays) or 841-5011.

CLEP HOME STUDY COURSE NOT RECOGNIZED

A telephone solicitation campaign is currently being conducted by an organization offering a home study course preparing students to take the CLEP test. This organization is not sponsored or sanctioned by the Joint Education Center or the Education Officer. This organization has not sought nor been granted authorization to solicit Marines aboard Marine Corps Air Station, Kaneohe Bay.

EMBRY-RIDDLE AERONAUTICAL UNIVERSITY

Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University is proud to acknowledge the accomplishments of two of the university's students from Marine Corps Air Station, Kaneohe Bay. Staff Sergeant Don Hendrickson, formally of Station Operations and Maintenance Squadron, ATC Division and Warrant Officer-1 Thomas Zerner of the Marine Air Traffic Control Unit, have completed all requirements for the Bachelor's Degree in Professional Aeronautics. Staff Sergeant Hendrickson graduated with honors: Magna Cum Laude. Warrant Officer-1 Zerner has started courses with Central Michigan University in pursuit of a master's degree.

VMFA-235 returns home

Marine Fighter Attack Squadron (VMFA)-235's Death Angels returned to the Marine Corps Air Station, Kaneohe Bay, Friday, Oct. 26 aboard KC-130 Hercules aircraft after a six-month WestPac deployment.

Death Angels' aircrews took a little different route on their return, however, before ending an odyssey that started at Kadena Air Base, Okinawa, Japan.

Original plans called for the squadron's F-4J aircraft to stop first at the Naval Air Station (NAS) Agana, Guam, Typhoon "Tip," northwest of Guam, caused a change of plans and the squadron first touched down at Clark Air Base in the Philippines. From there, the Death Angels took off for K-Bay via Guam and Wake Island.

Their journey did not end when they first landed at Kaneohe Bay, however. They still had additional legs to travel and several days later, departed for Marine Corps Air Station, Yuma, Arizona. There, the squadron turned over half a dozen of their Phantoms to Marine Fighter Attack Training Squadron

(VMEAT)-101. Three other Phantoms continued to NAS, Miramar, California where they turned the planes over to Navy squadrons. Four more Phantoms flew to NAS, North Island, San Diego, where they were turned into the Naval Air Rework Facility.

After turning in their aircraft, some of the Death Angels departed for leave in the continental U.S., while the remainder of the aircrews boarded a KC-130 Hercules for their return to Kaneohe Bay.

Child abuse doesn't always show, it can leave emotional scars as well

Story by 2dLt. Debbie Harris and Cpl. Anne Prezell

A badly bruised, barely conscious child is brought into the hospital's emergency room. His mother says "he fell out of bed."

A hungry child wanders onto the school grounds on a wintry morning. He is two hours early. He has no coat or lunch money.

A child is dropped at a day-care center at 6 a.m., as usual, and picked up at 9 p.m., as usual, seven days a week.

The list can go on and on. In recent years, military and civilian authorities have been taking a serious look at child abuse. How does a community combat it? How do they prevent it?

In the last decade most states have legislated child abuse reporting laws, placing a greater responsibility on all citizens; but especially on professionals, for protecting children by reporting child abuse and neglect.

Not all people who abuse children are considered criminals. "The problem with many child abuse cases, from a criminal lawyer's point of view, is that it is difficult to prove intent to harm the child," said a police legal advisor.

"You must try to make a case based largely on circumstantial evidence," he added. "If an injured child's parent says the child was hurt when he fell out of bed, it's hard to prove otherwise."

Criminal charges are rarely filed against abusive parents in the military. According to Major John Janega, Base Staff Judge Advocate's office at Camp Lejeune, N.C., the major reason is the same as with civilians — the difficulty in proving intent.

Statistics show that, nation-wide, reported incidents of child abuse and neglect have increased since the reporting laws were introduced. It isn't the number of incidents that has increased, authorities say, but rather a public awareness coupled with a re-evaluation of what actually constitutes child abuse.

"The term can be misleading," says Navy Commander B.A. Schroder, a nurse practitioner in pediatrics. "We tend to think of child abuse as being acts of physical violence, when this is not always the case," she said. "Abuse is often psychological or emotional."

The scars left by the emotional form of abuse are just as real as those left by a brutal beating, Schroder maintains. There is a social stigma attached to the term "child abuse," according to Schroder. "Misparenting" is probably a more appropriate term, she says.

Although there is no set formula for misparenting, authorities agree there are many factors which make some families more susceptible to the problems than others.

Ignorance of child development, money or marital problems, are some of the factors, as are explosive tempers, over-discipline, unwanted children, youth, drug or alcohol abuse, live-in fathers with no emotional attachment to the children, and social isolation.

According to a medical social worker, social isolation is particularly relevant for military families. "There is built-in tendency toward social isolation on military bases," Larry Gray said. "The predominantly young families come from all over the country. Most don't know anyone and some have a very difficult time making new friends. It can be a traumatic experience," the social worker added.

The large number of deployments from some Marine Corps bases contributes to family upheavals. The problem is one that policy-makers at Headquarters Marine Corps have been wrestling with for years. Only last November, they announced that overseas dependents restricted tours to WestPac would decrease, thereby, officials hoped, allowing for more family stability.

Though deployments can contribute to situations that breed family violence, the separations, in themselves, are not the greatest determining factor in military child abuse cases.

Regardless of the stability of the community, many families have built-in flaws and frustrations that can lead to crisis. And children often bear the brunt of their parents' frustrations.

"In some child abuse cases, one or both parents have a history of being abused themselves as children," Gray explained. "Some parents have a strong belief in the value of severe punishment as a deterrent to misbehavior or as a learning tool."

The problem with punishment, most authorities agree, is that it does not always teach appropriate behavior. Nancy Cowperthwait, coordinator of a successful parenting education program near a large Marine Corps base, distinguishes between discipline and punishment.

"Discipline is a consistent thing," she said. "I believe in teaching children the consequences of their mistakes. This is guidance all children need in order to grow and develop as adults. Discipline is a learning experience for a child; harsh punishment is not. Punishment is explosively and impulsively inflicted on the child with few lasting benefits."

Good parenting, Mrs. Cowperthwait says, is more a learned skill than a trait people are born with.

Youthful parents, another factor cited by experts as contributing to child abuse, is also one that comes into play in military communities where the population consists largely of young men and women in their prime child-bearing years. A good number of them are teenage parents.

"Many of the abused and neglected children we see are the product of young marriages," Cmdr. Schroder said. "The parents themselves, are almost children in some cases. I have counseled 14- and 15-year-old mothers who simply don't know how to care for a child."

Regardless of the reasons parents or other adults abuse children, the fact remains that children suffer; and unlike adults, have practically no recourse when they are battered.

Commander Schroder chairs a joint military-civilian Child Advocacy Program Committee, consisting of social workers, doctors, chaplains, lawyers, and educators, who verify reported cases of child abuse and recommend courses of action.

Often, counseling is recommended for one or both parents. Children receive immediate medical attention, and in extreme cases, are separated from their parents.

"It's very difficult working with abusive parents," Cmdr. Schroder related. "I have to deal with my feelings. I sometimes want to treat people violently. It's hard not to feel antagonistic toward them. But we can't lose ground."

Despite every effort of medical authorities, sometimes a child does not survive to see a solution to his family's strife. "When a child dies as the result of abuse, it's a helpless and heartbreaking feeling," said Cmdr. Schroder. "In the back of my mind, I always feel I could have done something more."

If an abused child is the victim of his parents, it must be realized that the parents are victimized themselves. Mrs. Cowperthwait, who has helped rehabilitate many abusive parents, points out that in families where abusive incidents occur, not only the child but all the family members suffer.

Even though the common feeling among the concerned may be to lock the abusive parent up and throw away the key — or worse — this is not the solution.

"Police action, though necessary at times for the child's protection, can do little for him or the parent in the long run," she said.

Authorities agree that the solution to the problems that cause families to erupt should be worked out by the families themselves, if at all practical. The idea is to keep the family unit intact. Mrs. Cowperthwait believes that in all but the most severe cases, the goal is achievable.

"Foster care, although necessary sometimes, can be as traumatizing as a violent household for a child," she said. "Many children actually prefer to stay with their parents, even in violent situations, because it is 'home' to them."

Is there any way to predict when a parent may abuse a child — a way to detect the potential abuser? Commander Schroder thinks there is, but it isn't easy, she says.

"The ideal method is to survey every family. But that is impossible. We can observe the ones we see from time to time in doctors' offices here," she said.

Teachers and day care workers are in a position to observe children almost daily. "An established pattern of unusual behavior can lead to an investigation, which may determine that the child is being abused at home," Cmdr. Schroder said.

Field training and operational commitments Marines have, can add stress to family situations that may be unstable to begin with. But the military community is better equipped than most civilian communities to head off potentially tragic situations, says one authority of child abuse.

"The military reporting system for reporting child abuse cases has advantages over its civilian counterpart," said Maj. Janega. There are a number of services readily available for the military, such as Red Cross, Chaplains, lawyers and military hospitals, in addition to services available in civilian communities," he explained. "Almost every serviceman is familiar with at least one of these services, and will contact one if the need arises."

Reporting abuse or neglect is a vital first step in helping eliminate it. Often a tragedy is necessary to jolt people into action, and then it may be too late.

The Naval Investigative Service and the Criminal Investigation Division are authorized to investigate suspected cases of child abuse on most Marine Corps bases, but civil intervention varies from state to state.

In North Carolina, for instance, if court action is necessary, an arrangement for an injunction and the removal of the child from his home may be made — whether the incident occurs on or off base.

Most local service organizations rely heavily on trained volunteers, as well as paid professionals, to keep families together. The concerned citizen who "polices" the community is the biggest asset, however. Little can be done if no one gets involved and reports a case.

Social Services

Their aim is to alleviate child abuse causes

Story by Sgt. Richard MacDonald

Marine Corps families in Hawaii, according to figures released by the State Department of Social Services and Housing, accounted for nearly 60 cases of reported child abuse/neglect last year; 42 of these were confirmed cases.

The military in Hawaii comprises 16 percent of the population, yet accounts for 27 percent of the state's child abuse/neglect cases.

The growing awareness and concern in the Kaneohe Bay military community is coupled with an ever-broadening system of social service programs aimed at alleviating and preventing the causes of child abuse.

Reports of child abuse here surface from many sources. Professional personnel such as school and day-care teachers and medical personnel are mandated by law to report any suspected cases. Sometimes, however, it is the parents themselves, a service member's military unit or a concerned neighbor or citizen who makes the initial report.

The base Provost Marshall Office (PMO) is usually the first agency on Marine Corps Air Station, Kaneohe Bay to take action on a reported call of child abuse (257-2123). Appropriate action is then taken to ensure the welfare of the children involved, and a blotter entry is made.

"When the report involves non-service members, as in the case of dependent wives," explained Captain Carl King, provost marshal, "the investigation is turned over to civilian authorities and we assist them as needed. When the case involves a service member, either the Naval Investigative Service or the Criminal Investigation Division probe the child abuse case."

The investigation report, once complete, is then forwarded to the service member's commanding officer (CO). "If the CO determines the case warrants criminal prosecution," stated Major Frank Holder, deputy staff judge advocate (DSJA) here, then the SJA office will handle the resulting legal and court proceedings."

Child abuse cases must also be reported to the Child Protective Services (CPS), the state investigative agency for child abuse, located at Kapiolani Children's Medical Center (947-8650). Susan McPherson, CPS social worker, said that CPS initiates the state's probe to determine the extent of the problem involved. "This is where our base social services usually enter the picture, added Dick Sweet, social worker for the Air Station. "The CPS workers will refer their counseling and social service recommendations to myself at Family Services (257-3606) or Abbey Arnold, program director at Outreach (254-4719). We then conduct a home visit to see which of the many social service programs would be most helpful to the families involved."

Outreach has been helping air station families for some time. However, it was not until October 2 that the agency first opened its 'Hale Ohana' doors at K-Bay near Family Services. Outreach's 'Save Our Sanity' or S.O.S. is the primary social service program for the prevention and treatment of child abuse on the air station. The S.O.S. group is advertised for parents 'who have already lost their cool' or 'who are about to lose their cool' with their children.

"The S.O.S. group," explained Abbey Arnold, "is conducted in a non-judgemental, accepting and supportive atmosphere. We understand the incredible and sometimes overpowering nature of stresses involved with raising children. Weekly group sessions, personal history interviews, home visits, individual counseling, the telephone support system, free transportation and child care, as well as the linkage services (i.e. chaplain, legal aid, welfare, housing, public health, alcohol rehabilitation, etc.), are all available to help parents deal with their stress and to help them learn more effective parenting skill."

Major Howard Hoffman, director of the Counseling Assistance Center (257-2066), stated, "The Kaneohe Bay military community has the largest and most varied social service task forces on any base in the Marine Corps. The command here strongly backs these services because they, in effect, support the welfare of the community, its families and the individual service member achieving the highest possible job performance."

"The people in these social service agencies really care. They are reaching out to the parents of this community, be they troubled, scared, isolated or just desiring to socialize with other parents in discussing more effective ways to raise their children."

Child abuse is an undeniably serious problem in this community as in others. We are fortunate, however, to have a wealth of legal and social service agencies and agents who can and will help families deal with their problems, whatever their form or cause.

FROM THE OFFHAND — Applying the BRASS principle, (Breathe, Relax, Aim, Squeeze and Shoot), Staff Sergeant John Mock of the 25th Infantry Division, Schofield Barracks, prepares to send a round down range during the 1979 National Rifle Association's Regional Championships. Keeping score for Mock is Captain Barbara Barrick.

Rifle Championships

Army captures eight honors

Although tormented by a blistering sun and intermittent, pelting rains, 64 shooters from the mainland and Hawaii did not lose their competitive spirit as they met October 20 and 21, for the 1979 National Rifle Association's Regional Championships aboard Marine Corps Air Station, Kaneohe Bay.

Sponsored by the K-Bay Rod and Gun Club, members of the Marine Corps, Army, Army Reserve and the civilian community, joined together for the largest and only high-powered rifle match in the Hawaiian islands.

Of the 12 possible top honors, Army Reserve shooters captured eight, the Marines latched onto one, regular Army shooters nabbed one and two honors went to a civilian.

Specialist Five Thomas Whitaker, a weekend warrior from Montebello, California, was in the weekend limelight when he tied the National Record in the Open Class (any rifle, any sight), and broke the national record for the service rifle. Firing an M-14, Whitaker shot a perfect score of 200 with 16 x's.

The top team honors were earned by the Army Reserve team, "Christophers" with a total of 1903-41 x's. The shooters for the Army team are Major George Cagwin of Mill Valley, Calif., Captain Fred Obermiller of Canton, Ohio, Command Sergeant Major Wayne Christopher of Irvine, Kentucky and Sergeant First Class Michael Ellway of Caldwell, Idaho.

In the individual matches, Sergeant First Class Richard Curry, a reservist from Fostoria, Ohio, took the slow fire aggregate and the most prestigious award, the grand aggregate. Curry's scores were 588-28 x's and 979-37 x's, respectively.

The first Marine to capture any honors was Major Bruce Wincentsen of Camp Smith. Wincentsen's score of 397-9 x's earned him the top honor in the rapid fire aggregate category.

The high master shooter was Captain Bruce O'Brien, an Army reservist from Oklahoma City, Okla. Regular Army Staff Sergeant Rojelio Arredondo of the 25th Infantry Division at Schofield Barracks, captured the high expert trophy. Their scores were 977-41 x's and 937-14 x's respectively.

The second Marine to receive recognition during the championships, was Sergeant Stanley Tyler of Marine Barracks, Hawaii, with a score of 896-6 x's. Tyler captured the high sharpshooter's award.

Joel Pakk, a civilian from Honolulu, earned two honors with his showing. Firing a 923-14 x's, Pakk won both the high marksman title and the high civilian award.

The final trophy awarded, went to Captain Barbara Barrick, an expert shooter with the Army Reserve in Vancouver, Wash. Barrick's score, a respectable 918-16 x's, gave her the high women's title. Incidentally, Barrick was the only woman shooter.

Regardless of how an individual finished during the championships, both the N.R.A. and the K-Bay Rod and Gun Club awarded either trophies, medals or certificates.

Marine Bks. tastes defeat

Marine Barracks vs. 2nd Brigade

"It was a hard fought, well played game," noted Barracks coach, Staff Sergeant Jim Cuppy, "but in the end they just out gunned us."

A close game throughout, it was the rushes of Running Back, Specialist Four Hugh "Rino" Williams, that gave the 2nd Brigade Warriors the edge Saturday, as the Barracksmen faced their first loss, 30-20, during their meeting at Schofield Barracks in the Eight Man Tackle Football League. A 5'9", 210 pound power house, Williams racked up 275-yards in 32 carries. Accompanied by a brick wall front line of Offensive Guards Specialist Four James Allen and Sergeant Billy Hardee, and Center SSGT. Doug McCarroll, the Barracks defense which was so formidable during the rest of the previous games of the season just didn't have the strength to restrain the Warrior ground attack.

Offensively however, the Marines did keep their previous form. Quarterback, Lance Corporal Earnie Cole, completed 12 out of 18 passes for 155-yards, and three touchdown connections: a 25-yarder to Running Back Corporal Gil Nimmons (plus extra point conversion); an eight yarder to Offensive End L.Cpl. Aa'Nout Berry; and a 20-yard toss to Offensive End L.Cpl. Brian Boomer.

And that's how it went. The game that determined this year's Eight-Man Tackle Football champions to be the 2nd Brigade Warriors.

Marine Ground vs. 45th Support Group

A blocked punt was the only action the Army saw in the end zone Friday night, as the Ground Pounders of K-Bay showed no mercy in a 35-6 whipping at Schofield Barracks.

Although the offense scored the points, it was the Marines defense that won the game. Safety L.Cpl. Stan Sharp caught the only interception of the game, but for the Army quarterback it was painful all the way. Leading the attack was Defensive Ends Sgt. Charles Davy and L.Cpl. Earnest Moore; Linebackers Cpl. Leslie Brown and Cpl. Esikia Nester, and Noseguards Cpl. Daryl Lee and L.Cpl. Joe Thomas, who logged nine sacks for 81-yards. And even when the Army running backs got a hold of the ball it was the Marine defense all the way, as the defense tallied up 31 unassisted tackles and 29 assisted tackles.

Offensively, the Marines were as deadly on the ground (148 total yards) as in the air (230 total yards).

Scoring-wise, Running Back Cpl. Abraham Jones led the charge with a six yard scramble into the end zone for the game's first score of the day and had 11 carries for 87-yards. Quarterback Cpl. Ruston Gunter struck next on a 22-yard touchdown pass to End L.Cpl. Darryl Cornwell, who was five receptions for 79-yards on the day. The next time the Marines had the ball, Gunter put his own feet into action, when after a 36-yards completion to Running Back Cpl. Larry Brown, he sprinted two yards for a score, and only moments later logged his second touchdown when reserve Quarterback L.Cpl. Jack Ryan pitched out to him for 15-yard march into the end zone. Ryan then tossed a 50-yarder to Running Back Kinte Holemes, setting up a 36-yard touchdown pass to Cpl. Wagner for the game's final score. Throughout the game, Center/Kicker Sgt. Brian Turner booted all the extra points.

Marine Air vs. DISCAV

Marine Air ended its part in the 1979 Eight-Man Tackle Football League, as they dropped game five to DISCAV, 46-2. A blocked punt by Linebackers Kevin Andrew and Gunnery Sergeant Peter Gonder made for the only air score, closing their season at three wins, five losses.

Upcoming Clashes

This is the ninth and final week of Tackle Football '79, with Marine Barracks facing off against 45th Support Group, tonight at 7 p.m. on Stoneman Field. At the same time the Marine Groundsman will bump heads with the Ft. Shafter Panthers in the Shafter Bowl.

HEADED FOR THE CUP — Displaying golfer's courtesy, University of Hawaii student and last year's champion, Cindy Flom, tends the pin as First Sergeant Doris Denton of Headquarters Company, Brigade, stokes her putt to the pin during the 15th annual Ladies Invitational Golf Championship. First Sergeant Denton's caddy is Sergeant Mike Joy, also of Headquarters Company.

Golf tourney held

Vying for lead positions in four flights, 147 women golfers from throughout the islands converged on the air station's Klipper Course October 18 and 19, for the 15th annual Ladies Invitational Golf Championships.

Following a musical opening by the Fleet Marine Force, Pacific Band just shortly after dawn, a shotgun start put the first foursomes into play.

The Klipper, a 5,602 yard, par 72 course, proved a worthy match for the ladies, who fired near par scores both days.

Lynn Wynn, from the Oahu Country Club, was the Low Gross Champion, with 73 and 76 stroke efforts. Low Net honors went to Sonoko Armenio of Mid-Pacific Country Club. Armenio's handicap of 30 strokes (a "C" flight competitor), combined with her 94 and 91, was enough to narrowly secure her the victory.

Aside from the championship honors, other honors were awarded daily. In the daily net category, Sophie Capna of Pearl Country Club, fired a 98 with a 35 handicap, while Sonoko Armenio's 91 with a 30 handicap on Friday was enough for first.

The longest drive was held on hole 7 this year, with "C" flight Ginny Fulkerston and "B" flight Lavelle Charlton as the Thursday leaders. On Friday, Ellen Shuford of "C" flight and Dottie Blanc of "B" flight, took first place.

The tournament, sponsored annually by the K-Bay Ladies Golf Association, was planned by golfers Louise Thomas and Dottie Blanc.

As far as winner's trophies went, no trophies were given. Instead, the ladies were given 14K gold charms and pieces of jade.

Sportsnotes

The Hawaii Marine Baseball Team is now forming and any interested Marines from the brigade, station Camp Smith or Marine Barracks are encouraged to call Special Services Sport Director, Dan Dufrene, at 257-3108/3135. Both coaches and players are needed, with the following positions being critical: pitcher, catcher, short stop and center field.

The 10 kilometer Marine Corps Birthday Run will be held Wednesday and anyone interested in entering should contact the Special Services Sport Department at 257-3108/3135.

Attention Boxers!!! Regardless of branch of service, anyone who is attached to the brigade, station, Camp Smith or Marine Barracks is invited to participate in the Marine Corps Air Station, Kaneohe Bay, Boxing Smoker tomorrow at 7 p.m. in Hangar 103. Weigh-ins and registration will be from 5 p.m. until the first bout.

The Hawaii Marine Varsity Basketball team posted their second victory October 25, as they upset Ft. Shafter 80-73 at Ft. Shafter. The Marines' next game will be at home, Hangar 103, Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. against the Hawaii Pacific Athletic Club. In other Varsity Basketball action, Marine Barracks faced their first defeat, as the Hickam AFB team thundered past, 125-67. Look in next weeks Sports Notes for Varsity Basketball standings.

The "Battle of the Sexes" has hit Marine Corps Air Station Kaneohe Bay, as the Women's Softball League champions, "HyTunz" has been challenged by the Men's Recreational Softball team, HMM-165 "Trons." The game will be played tomorrow on Pollock Field. Warm-ups begin at 1 p.m.

The 3d Annual Toys for Tots Fun Run, sponsored by Hawaii's own 4th Force Reconnaissance Company will be run on November 18 at Kapiolani Park. The run, a 75 kilometer (9.3 miles) distance, will begin at 7:30 a.m. The event is open to all with a registration fee of one unwrapped new toy worth a minimum of $3. For information, contact 1st Sergeant Terry Wade or Sergeant Loretta Linn at 471-0203/0204, Mon.-Fri. 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Paradise Park offers specials

Nestled in the verdant Manoa Valley on Oahu, just 15 minutes from Waikiki Beach is Paradise Park.

A $3 million development covering 15 acres; featuring five ethnic gardens, over 500 colorful and exotic birds, a variety of shows and exhibits, many types of fruit trees, hua and bamboo jungles, an array of native flora, a gift shop featuring quality imports from throughout the world, and a Polynesian Restaurant with an unsurpassed view of Manoa Valley and its thundering waterfall.

A visit to Paradise Park is a total involvement experience. It's exactly what the visitor expects to see in Hawaii — the Hawaii that can't be found in Waikiki. Until now the wild natural beauty of Oahu's upper valleys and mountains have been visible only from a distance. The Park, in short, makes the previously inaccessible beauty of Manoa easily accessible to all.

But Paradise Park is more than a visitor attraction, for it's long range goals are to preserve the valley's ancient, cultural heritage. From earliest recorded history, the valley was a place of high esteem as a resort and recreation area. Kamehameha the Great used it often for outings, as did many other chiefs and their families. In addition, Kamehameha used the caves in the cliffs in which to hide while preparing for the battles in which he finally brought Oahu under his control.

Queen Liliuokalani and Queen Kaahumanu both maintained homes in Manoa Valley.

Along Manoa stream (which travels through the Park) not only walked and rested Hawaiian royalty, but also three famous American authors — Mark Twain, Jack London and Robert Louis Stevenson.

Hawaiian agriculture, today's basic industries, began in Manoa Valley. The first sugar cane, pineapple and coffee were all planted here. Visitors may see these plants along with rare colorful flowers at Paradise Park.

Manoa is called the "Valley of the Rainbows." It's a thrilling sight to see Manoa crowned with the rainbows and visitors may on occasion see the double rainbow.

In 1845 a Chinese burial ground was established in what is now called East Manoa. These grounds are still in use and widely known on Oahu for the ancient Chinese rituals followed there in honor of the dead. Many valley youngsters have watched and listened in awe as the procession, with gongs, fireworks and music, proceeded through Manoa.

You will visit Oahu's only accessible rain forest and wander through an ancient Hau jungle. While other attractions have recreated it's jungles, nature has created Paradise Park.

This is our Hawaii, towering bamboo reaching towards the heavens, sparkling pools, an immersion into the Hawaii you've seen in posters, its ancient legends revealed to you as you pass among the jungle trails... your Hawaii... it is truly Paradise.

During November the Park is offering a special discount on admission to military people in observance of Armed Forces Month. With proper military identification, the admission fee will be 75¢ per person for I.D. holder, spouse and children 12 years and under. (Regular admission prices are $4.25 for adults and $2.50 for children 4-12 years.)

The Polynesian Restaurant, overlooking lush Manoa Valley, is also offering a discount on the regularly priced $4.95. Polynesian Buffet Extravaganza which includes salads, fruits, jello, fish tray, 3 hot entrees, fried rice, gon to mein noodles, warm butter rolls and a refreshing beverage. Proper identification reduces the price to $4.00 for adults and $2.95 for children 12 years and under.

Also, the Gift Shop, located in the lobby, is offering a 10% discount on all merchandise for those with proper I.D.s.

Worlds wander at Planetarium

A new show, "Wandering Worlds," is open at the Bishop Museum Planetarium. Some of the startling revelations regarding the planets that have come out of recent space explorations are features of the show.

No period of history has brought us more information about the nearby heavenly bodies than that of the last ten years.

Space vehicles of ever-increasing sophistication have been flown by, or landed upon the moon, Mercury, Venus, Mars, Jupiter, and Saturn. Confirmations of expected conditions upon those worlds, and their satellites, have been far outnumbered by surprises — conditions entirely unexpected. Heavy cratering of the surface of Mercury, unbelievably high temperature and pressure on Venus, a world shrouded in dense clouds of sulphuric acid, were revealed early in the space era. More recently, Mars has been found to be a world of spectacular surface canyons and gigantic volcanic mountains. The swirling clouds of Jupiter are projected in detail by space cameras, but the family of large moons of Jupiter presents the greatest surprises.

Many of these surprises are illustrated and explained in the new show.

In addition, Planetarium astronomers will show the sky of 1982, a year in which the planets will nearly all lie on the same side of the sun. This situation has been falsely anticipated as possibly influencing the sun's activity sufficiently to produce secondary effects upon the earth. Scientists are in full agreement that the condition will produce no measurable effect upon the earth, and probably none upon the sun.

The planets will be seen wandering daily in the Planetarium through December 2nd.

For show times and other information, call Bishop Museum 847-3511.

ZIGGER ZAGGER — This hot band will be performing at both the Windward SNCO Club and the Windward Enlisted Club. They appear at the SNCO Club tonight, November 9, 23 and December 1. They will bring their music and show to the Enlisted Club on November 15, 16, 22, 29 and 30. Don't miss this top band.
