White Knights make history during CREE participation

The White Knights of Marine ledium Helicopter Sqdn. 165 Medium Helicopter Sqdn. 165 made 1st Marine Brigade history recently as it deployed all its helicopters and equipment to the field during the Combat Readiness Evaluation Exercise held here last week. The Marines of HMM-165 had no easy task creating a tactical airfield. The composite helicopter squadron flies 16 aircraft and carries with it more than 100,000 pounds of tools and equipment necessary for routine and non-routine maintenance of their helicopters. This is the first time that a squadron has supported an operation from a strategically located airfield instead of a hangar area. Helicopter squadrons have been reluctant to deploy ashare because of the massive support needed to move that large a unit, support that is needed elsewhere needed to move that large a unit, support that is needed elsewhere during an operation. The squadron moved from its simulated shipboard environment (west field) and redeployed to Camp Helemano, near Schofield Barracks, The Marines moved all of their dutsized equipment on treck, (simulating the landing from that would normally be used) and their emainder was flown to the new airfield. While the crews and mechaneis, were loading the great, the squadron was supporting the ongoing 37th MAU operation in the Schofield area. It flew medical evacuation missions and inserted patrols in the hills near Helemano, flying more than 200 hours in two days, putting both man and machine to the test. "We did this because most gear until it's needed, and that could be too late," said L4Col. Marv Blair, commanding officer of HMM-165. "We are deploying the youngest and most inexperi-enced squadron ever. I wanted to teach these Marines how to erect tents and field maintenance areas. They needed to learn the basics of being a field Marine," Blair continued. "Some of my troops didn't

"Some of my troops didn't realize that the security of our airfield lies solely in the hands of our personnel, with fittle or no help from ground units who will be busy on the front. They had no idea of what to expect out here. This was new to everyone. I think

This was new to everyone. I think they enjoyed getting some field time," he added. According, to the operation scenario, the squadron was transferred to shore because the USS New Orleans was tasked with patrolling the waters off Holm (Kauai). It had to make the patrol without the helicopters due to the distance between the to the distance between the islands and because the squadron was already committed to the operation ashore.

The site that was selected for the The site that was selected for the tactical airfield was a rolling plateau with tall green grass that had been rain-soaked for several days. The fear of helicopters getting stuck in the soft earth almost canceled the operation before it started.

The decision of redeploying was The decision of redeploying was delayed until the necessary intelligence information could be gathered about the location of the new airfield. The wet ground and the possibility of enemy counterattacks were forsaken as the Marines of HMM-165 headed toward Camp Helemano, about 10 kilometers from the front. While the aircrews were flying

The floral tributes were part of a special celebration hosted by LtGen. Charles G. Cooper, Commanding General, Fleet Marine Force, Pacific and Commander, Marine Corps Bases, Pacific, at which representative husbands and wives from all rasks at Camp Smith were recognized. In his remarks to the all-hands formation assembled for the occusion, LtGen. Cooper expressed his personal appreciation to all the spouses of FMFPac/MarCorBases, Pacific Marines and Sailors for their supports and loyalty which in turn contributes significantly to mission accomplishment. On hand for the ceremonies was the Fleet Marine Force Pacific Band. Their music included a special performance of "Fairest of the Fair," written by John Philip Sousa and inspired by his wife. When the ceremonies were concluded, the couples who had been chosen to represent the command were invited to the commanding general's office for refreshments. (Photo by GySgt. M.E. Bishop) each other the ropes.

Having friends who look out for you and who you look out for in return comes with being a Marine. Simply put, you count on the Marine next to you.

The sense of community you experience as a Marine isn't duplicated in the civilian world. It's more or less every man and woman for themselves. Which only makes sense when you think about it. After all, they don't have that much in common. They've never gone through tough training together. Very few have had to show their inner fortitude in difficult situations.

And those are probably some of the reasons why Marines have the pride they do. In themselves, their families, their Corps and country. Marines have a lot of experiences and training in common. Think about that if you're thinking about becoming a civilian.

You can count on the Corps.

Several enemy saboteurs were cuptured the first night without their getting into the perimeter area. The aircraft were well protected from attack by using camouflage nets over the holicopters to hide them from enemy aircraft. The Marines who normally fix and fly helicopters, were in the 'bush' stalking the enemy and establishing defonsive perimeters.

The redeployment operation and the CIREE were designed to test units who are about to deploy to the Western Pacific Readiness and effectiveness of the squadron was enhanced by the tactical deployment of the unit's assets to the field. "The exercise was a great experience," said Capt. Dave

The high-flying T-Birds came alive Sunday and doused the previously undefeated Wildfire 10-9 in nine innings at Pollock Field.

The women's softball league fans went wild as the T-Birds fought to a commanding 8-2 lead. but Wildfire hadn't established a perfect record without just cause. They tied the game at 8 in the sixth inning, and prepared to pluck the T-Birds.

No such plucking occured, as the women played aggressive defense. The game sprinted in 'combat'

KMCAS For the 10th time in 20 attempts, the "Super Squad" of the Third Marine Regi-ment at the Kaneohe Marine Corps Air Station has won the World Series of combat games at Quantico, Va.

world Series of combit games at Quantico, 'Va. The squad last 'month won the combat games for the third year in a row - a record which produced the squad's "Super" designation. The 14-man squad trained for six months before going into competition with eight 'other top ranked 'Marine squads. The competition was in six combat situa-tions, including the firing of mortars, automatic rifles and grenade launchers, the ambush of enemy positions, and moving around strange land. 'The squad was awarded 30 day leaves after winning the World Series of combat after winning the World Series of combat games and will return to the Kaneohe Marine Corps Air Station June 19 19.
