Mainland milk hits commissary

by Sgt. Christopher Wood

Mainland milk is now available at the Commissary Store here, at a cost substantially lower than local milk.

A half-gallon of mainland 2 percent milk averages 89 cents, compared to $1.35 for local milk. Additionally, mainland whole milk goes for 94 cents a halfgallon compared to local at $1.37.

Local milk prices might fall slightly due to competition with mainland dairies, but no substantial drop is foreseen. "I would imagine that local milk prices would go down, but they'll never be comparable to mainland prices," said Harlan Kurisu, Commissary Store officer. According to Kurisu, local milk prices can be traced to the high cost of transporting cattle feed from the mainland.

With the cost differential in mind, Kaneohe's commissary began purchasing mainland milk in June, using its counterpart at Pearl Harbor. "We're dependent on what the Navy Commissary can give us," Kurisu said. "Right now, we receive 300 gallons of homogenized milk and 200 gallons of 2 percent milk per week. I doubt that our totals will go very much higher than that."

Such a share program is necessary because the commissary here, which sells 2,400 gallons of milk per week, could not sell approximately 3,300 gallons. "Our original intent was to share with Hickam Air Force-Base because they were afraid to bring in a full load," Kurisu said. "But they're still hesitant about bringing it in. In the meantime, I've been told that the Navy Commissary will support us all the way.'

So far, Kurisu said, the share program has worked well. Except for the original shipment, all mainland milk placed on the commissary's shelves has sold out. Mainland milk has a shelfbuying it."

life of 10 days - it takes five days for the milk to get here - while locally-produced milk can remain on the shelf for eight days. "My biggest worry is the shelf-life of the product," Kurisu remarked.

"Although the milk is good 10 days beyond the shelf life, customers would be wary about Hawaii state regulations require that local milk be on MCAS El Toro - What began as a leisurely drive from San Diego back to El Toro on July 27 quickly turned into a lifesaving effort for two SNCO Academy students.

Staff Sergeants Tom Murray, H&HS, MCAS, Yuma and Alf Gerich, EOD, Brigade Service Support Group, MCAS Kaneohe Bay, were riding in the northbound lane of Interstate 5 near the San Onofre nuclear power plant when they saw a car hit a truck.

The car, driven by a Marine from 1st Marine Division, Camp Pendleton, went off the highway and overturned. The truck flipped on its top on the highway and spun around. "We saw all of the action in front of us and pulled over to lend whatever assistance we could," Murray said. "The first thing I saw was a couple of kids lying on the highway who had been thrown from the camper shell of the truck. At the same time, Gerich was helping Wanda Vogliardo of Sun City, Calif., who had been thrown out of the truck's cab," he said.

Both Marines noticed that the truck's driver, Charles Vogliardo, had been ejected from the truck through the sunroof and was pinned under the vehicle.

"Things started happening real fast after that," Gerlich said. "We ran over to the car, helped the two guys out of it, and flipped the car over so we could get at their jack."

lifting the truck with the jack. They then decided to try to lift the truck by hand with the help of Michael Critelli, of Riverside, a friend of the Vogliardo's who was driving another vehicle.

"I almost freaked out when I looked up and saw a car headed straight for the truck," Murray added. "I yelled to the other guys and jumped to the side as the car struck the truck.

'Gerich and I got away in time. but Critelli got a blow to the head as the truck bounced into him after being hit by the other vehicle...to make matters worse, the driver never stopped. We found out later though that the California Highway Patrol located him," said Murray.

The men resumed their efforts to extract Vogliardo from under the truck and managed to lift it high enough so that one of his daughters, who was a passenger in Critelli's truck, could pull him from under it. They then positioned all of the victims along the road, treating them for shock until paramedics and CHP units arrived.

"In all of the excitement, we had forgotten about our friend, SSgt. Dwight Nelson, HMM-262, MCAS Kaneohe Bay, who was asleep in the car," Gerlich said. "He helped us treat the victims and clear debris from the highway after the victims had been transported to hospitals," he

> "After people had cleared the area, we found ourselves standing around with four children and an extra truck," Murray said. "We told the CHP officers we'd take them to the hospital and try to contact a family member.

"Most of the early morning Saturday was spent at the hospital. After finding out that everyone would be OK, we decided to take the kids home to Sun City," Murray said. "The

The Marines got the children to their home in Riverside County, fixed them breakfast, and helped calm their nerves until other relatives arrived.

Their unselfish willingness to aid the accident victims and their family was reflex to them. According to Officer Frank Checkwood, an accident investigation officer for the Oceanside area of CHP, the situation could have been a lot worse if the Marines had not hospital released two more stopped to lend a hand.

According to statistics, crimes involving homicide, rape, robbery and aggravated assault were down 14 percent from last year. Aggravated assaults, which are crimes causing serious injury, remained the same with only two incidents reported.

"This decrease in crime is due to a command's emphasis being placed on the crime situation. said LtCol. A. Lardizabal, Provost Marshal. "There is also an aggressive enforcement and investigative effort at the Air Station resulting in increased identification and apprehension of troublemakers.

Lardizabal feels that the Marine Corps is getting a better quality Marine, and the Marine who cannot adjust will receive an early discharge.

One area not showing a decrease is larceny of private property. "This is because it's too common for Marines to leave their valuables unsecured," said

Most larcenies are crimes of opportunity, according to Lardizabal. A Marine who unknowingly leaves his valuables unsecured or unattended is providing an opportunity for a thief to strike.

"It would take only a minute to lock up valuable property and not give the would-be rip-off artist an open invitation," Lardizabal

Marking property has been a proven deterent for larceny, but it's up to the individual to prevent the opportunity. Marking personal possessions makes the Military Policeman's job a little easier in recovering stolen property. The Military Police Department here has some of the most modern equipment used in dealing with crime, including a computer print-out record of all stolen items, which is distributed to the Honolulu Police Depart-

"There must be a continuous effort by the MPs, command personnel, as well as residents of the Air Station, to make the Air Station a very unhealthy place for crime," Lardizabal concluded.

by LCpl. Karen Izbinski

lncoming wounded! Incoming wounded!, yelled a corpsman as he pointed to the CH-46 helicopter making its approach into the landing zone. Stretcher bearers rushed the wounded Marines from the helo to a waiting ambulance.

A short drive over rugged terrain, the Marines were in the hands of those waiting to help—doctors and Corpsmen of the Brigade Surgeons' Field Medical Facility.

This scene, typical of those viewed by millions on the weekly TV show M*A*S*H, was repeated as members of the 1st Marine Brigade's Medical Company packed their supplies and moved to a field environment behind the Boondocker.

As the simulated wounded began arriving, members of the medical unit got an idea of what it's like to perform their duties in a wartime field environment. Besides quickly sorting out patients who required immediate lifesaving attention, the doctors and Corpsmen had to contend with high tent temperatures.

"When we went to the field last year," said Chief Petty Officer Leo Simpson, Co. A, 3d Med. Bn., BSSG, 1st Marine Brigade, "We checked the temperature in the operating room tent for five days, and from noon to 2 p.m. the temperature reached 124 degrees Fahrenheit."

Although performing major surgery in a field environment can be tiring and stressful, the Medical Company personnel did their job and did it well. "They definitely learned to put their skills to use in a totally different environment," said Simpson, "it's always good to see everyone so motivated, especially during field training."

During the month-long training exercise, medical personnel practiced their skills on simulated wounded, attended classes and had an opportunity to "tell it to the Marines" during the open house portion of the exercise.

Although the Brigade's medical company is only 36 strong now, during war its ranks would go to 94. The increase includes Hospital Corpsmen, Medical Service Corps Officers, Medical Officers, Nurse Corps Officers, Marines and other qualified personnel.

The Marines would perform essential services as operating electrical generators needed for the operating room or serving as stretcher bearers. "During war, a medical company is capable of performing 1,050 major surgeries without resupply," said Simpson.

Equipment taken to the field became part of the training exercise. Besides moving supplies and equipment, tents had to be erected to accommodate patients and store the supplies.

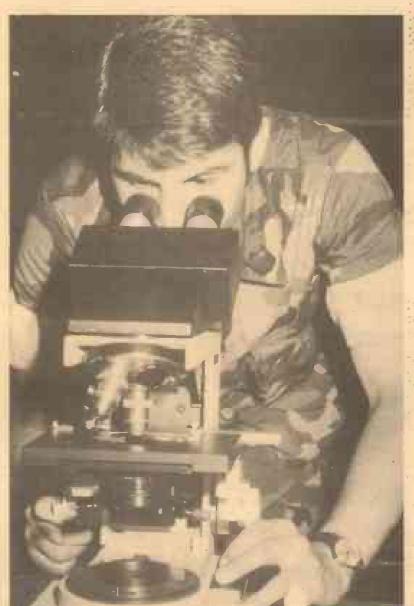

"When moving the Medical Company, setting up the surgical shock treatment tent would be first to receive the wounded," said Simpson. The unit would be prepared to treat patients within an hour of hitting their destination point.

It took the peacetime Medical Company approximately three days to set up the field medical facility, but during a war, they could set up in about 18 hours, according to Simpson.

Setting up the facility the right way is important. If it's not set up properly, it could cause confusion—something that can't happen during a lifesaving situation.

Training of this kind is held every two years; however, Navy Corpsmen aren't always available to participate. "Although 70 percent of all Navy corpsmen will see FMF duty," said Simpson, "some Corpsmen will never experience this type of training because of their duties. More than 200 Corpsmen are assigned to line companies.

"When Marines go to war, they can rest assured that they'll receive the best medical care possible. Not only from a unit such as Co. A, 3d Medical Battalion, but also from Corpsmen on the front lines with the Marines in combat."

A JOB WELL DONE - BGen. O.K. Steele, Commanding General of the 1st Marine Brigade, contratulates HMM-265, winners of the Chief of Naval Operations Aviation Safety Award for 1983.

Safety pays off at '265

Safety awareness paid off for HMM-265 Aug. 3, as they received the Chief of Naval Operations

Aviation Safety Award for 1983. BGen. O.K. Steele, Commanding General of the 1st Marine Brigade, presented the award during a ceremony at Hangar 101, mimicking a July 3 safety award presentation to another MAG-24 squadron, HMM-262.

Presentation of the award to '265 was delayed until the squadron returned from a Western Pacific deployment, but that did nothing to quell the brigade commander's enthusiasm. "This aviation safety award is not a matter of happenstance,' he told the '265 formation. "It is the result of an extraordinary amount of work on everyone's part, from naval aviators to air crews to the Marines who work in the maintenance section. I congratulate you all."

Equally enthusiastic was LtCol. Mike McElwee, '265's commanding officer. "We were one of only five squadrons in the Fleet Marine Force, Pacific to receive this award," he said. "That's a very small percentage of all squadrons that might have earned it.

"It's not just an award for flying safely," he continued. "Many things are taken into account, including the operating environment, the intensity of the operations, the number of times you fly at night, and whether you fly off ships or not. We did all of those things in 1983."

One reason for the squadron's safety success is the attentiveness of its troops. "It's a very good squadron," said Cpl. Michael Sistok, who, as a CH-46 crew chief has a great deal of safety responsibility. "It has good pilots, good air crews, and good maintenance people. The safety officer keeps everybody in line, and I think that winning the safety award is a great achievement."

MAG-24's capture of two safety awards is seen by McElwee as both a great and remarkable achievement. "Statistically, we probably have a better safety record than other MAGs," he said. "That's somewhat surprising because the Air Station here is a unique environ. ment where jets and helicopters intermingle and operate together. You don't see it to this extent anywhere else in the Marine Corps.'

Soon after the safety award winners were announced, '265 had two safety mishaps, including one that could have been very serious. "We had two Cobras fly together while in formation," McElwee remarked. "It was pilot error. The pilot was unattentive to what was going on, and by the time he looked up, the helicopters had intermeshed rotor blades. They landed with

A less severe mishap occurred after the squadron returned to the Air Station, where they found the skies more congested than they remembered. "One of our helicopters smacked a bird with its rotor blades soon after our return from deployment, McElwee said. "In the last few months, the MAG has had five bird strikes. That tells us that the incidents of bird activity seem to be increasing.

"There's not much you can do about that," he continued. "It's bad to try to outmaneuver one bird. It's best to let him try to outmaneuver you. We think they're probably better flyers than us.'

Still, '265's helicopters don't need the acrobatic flying abilities of a black frigate. With pilot caution, skillful maintenance, perform its mission admirably -

Marines make mountains

Story and photos by SSgt. W.S. Sanders

Earth may have been created in six days, but it took three Marines here two months to create a terrain model of Delta Corridor, a training area at Marine Corps Air Group Combat Center, Twentynine Palms, Calif.

The model was constructed for use as a training aid by 2nd Battalion, 3d Marines in its combined arms exercise to be conducted at Twentynine Palms during August.

"It was tedious work," said SSgt. L. Helfin, terrain analysis support team chief and veteran terrain model builder from Brigade G-2. "Every phase of the building required meticulous correlation with the map to ensure accuracy."

Helfin was assisted by LCpl. S.J. Spingler, also from G-2, and Cpl. M.S. McDonald, from Regimental S-2.

The materials used for constructing the model included: a map of the area, 16 sheets of ½ inch cardboard 4' x 8', 15 pounds of papier-mache, three pieces of 4' x 8' plywood, customizing pin stripes (used for roads), paint, hundreds of nails, and three buckets of sand.

"We constructed a 1:50,000 scale map of the desired terrain model area and requested through the operational chain of command that Fort Shafter's 29th Engineer Battalion photographically enlarge this product to a scale of 1:18,500 to be used as a plastic transparent map," said Helfin. "We then placed carbon paper beneath the transparency and traced the desired contour line onto a piece of cardboard,' Helfin continued. "Each contour interval desired had to be traced onto a separate piece of cardboard. Each piece was then cut out, numbered according to that the terrain facsimile accurately depicted the transparency.

After the cardboard had been assembled, papier-mache was used to create the details of the terrain to include ridges, gullies, depressions and peaks.

"Once the papier-mache had dried, we began the detail work," said McDonald. "This work included painting, defining the roads, building scale buildings; and laying the sand."

An extra feature was added to the model making it unique to the military. "We incorporated a grid system," said Helfin. "Personnel can locate themselves on the model through the use of grid lines and correlate the terrain model with any military map of the area.'

For Spingler and McDonald, constructing this model was a new experience. "I had no idea what to expect when I was asked to assist in the construction," said McDonald, "but each day was challenging and it was exciting to watch it develop."

When I was assigned to assist in this project, I had an idea of how it would be constructed hough I've never constructed one efore," said Spingler. "It wasn't as easy as I expected. It took days and days of tracing contour lines, cutting out and assembling the ardboard pieces with meticulous attention to detail. I'm proud of he finished product."

The Brigade possesses nine terrain models of Hawaii training areas. "This terrain model of the Delta Corridor is the first model made for use outside of the local area operations," said Helfin.

Using the terrain model does have its advantages according to the 3d Marines' training officer. "With a map you have to visualize what you're looking at,"

said 1stLt. J.C. Gauthier. "But with the model in front of you, you can appreciate the terrain you are moving over."

With the Delta Corridor terrain model completed, Helfin and his crew are preparing for their next project. "The next model will be of the Kaena Point/Dillingham area followed by a model of the Air Station," Helfin concluded.

Leaflet details mental health woes

The Mental Health Association in Hawaii, an Aloha United Way agency, is offering a free leaflet entitled "Mental Health: A World of Difference." The leaflet explains some of the early warning signs, causes and treatments of mental and emotional illnesses.

One family in four in Hawaii is affected by the mental illness of a member of their immediate family. An estimated 60 percent of all who see general medical doctors have an emotional rather than a physical cause for symptoms. Many health authorities consider mental and emotional illnesses to be the nation's and the state's numberone healt h problem.

Because more and more persons with mental illnesses live at home and continue work during treatment, it is important for their family members, friends and co-workers to be good listeners and help out with practical daily living, housing and transportation problems. Interested and caring attitudes and actions give the person with emotional difficulties a sense of belonging and renewed selfconfidence, essential ingredients of recovery.

For a free copy of this leaflet, write to the Mental Health Association in Hawaii, 200 N. Vineyard Blvd., Suite 507, Honolulu, HI 96817; or phone 521-

Cherry Point served as the pickup and return station for more than 2,000 10th Marine Amphibious Brigade Marines of Camp Lejeune, N.C., who participated in mountain warfare training that took them through NAS Fallon, Nev., enroute to Bridgeport, Calif.

For Cherry Point the operation provided the test platform to see if

Travis Airmen handled the first phase of the transport

The separate phases of the operation required Station Marines to continuously support 148 transport aircraft on a 24 hour-a-day schedule working with Air Force counterparts from the two commands.

During this time, the four-man Rapid Jet Refueling Section pumped more than two million gallons of JP-5 aviation fuel into the outbound planes, while more than 5 million pounds of equipment was moved onto and off the large transports.

"The professionalism of these Marines was in keeping with the Corps' tradition," said Air Force Lt. Col. Donald Crummy, operation coordinator for the Travis participants. "The attitude of the fuel pit operations personnel was outstanding and the coordination and cooperation of all the Air Station personnel was magnificent," he said.

The operation was more than just, an inspection for the Air Force. It put Cherry Point Marines to the test of handling additional air traffic and strain on transient facilities, while maintaining a projected one-hour turn-around time. The extra activity didn't adversely effect

The dining facility Marines also kept step with high-paced schedules by providing hot meals four times daily for the hundreds of participants. The cooks were not only challenged with having to prepare larger amounts of food, but also saw a drastic increase in the number of boxed lunches heading for the flightline.

Perhaps the team most aware of the increased air activity was the Visiting Aircraft Line. "The VAL people were really put to the test," said Marine LtCol. H.G. Hutchinson, officer in charge of Airfield Operations. "Around the clock operations like this kept them busy taxiing aircraft in and out of the pits as well as handling their normal transients.'

"It was a good learning experience for all my Marines," commented Hutchinson, "We proved to ourselves that Station support personnel can effectively handle a strategic mobility exercise of this magnitude.'

The Marines were not alone in Korea and Vietnam. The Corpsmen were there, and so were the Dental techs and doctors. They provided Marines with dental treatment and assisted their medical colleagues in treating casualties.

By 1972, Dental Corps personnel were providing Marines and sailors with a balanced program in the clinical services of dentistry. By supporting the Marines in Vietnam, the dental company proved itself to be "a highly

"The greatest satisfaction I get," said Lt. Richard Bex, Dental Corps officer, Naval Regional Dental Clinic, "is seeing someone smile after I've performed the necessary treatment they need, and hearing 'gosh, it wasn't that bad after all.

CHAMPUS denying claims

HQMC, (MCNews) - Individual Marines have the responsibility of making sure their dependents are enrolled in the Defense Enrollment Eligibility Reporting System; and failure to do so, according to ALMAR 137/84, will result in the denial of medical care through CHAMPUS and of nonemergency medical care through military health treatment facilities.

Two denial policies went into effect this summer both using the DEERS data base to determine eligibility for military health benefits. On July 16, CHAMPUS began denying claims for dependents not enrolled in DEERS; and on Oct. 1. dependents not in the DEERS data base will be denied nonemergency medical care at military facilities.

The denial of CHAMPUS care for members not enrolled in the system will last for six months.

To avoid problems associated with the denial of medical care an audit of personnel records has been recommended. To assist in that audit, reporting units have been mailed enrollment listings which have information currently in the DEERS system for members of their unit. Dependents not currently enrolled must be added by forwarding a newly completed DD Form 1172 to the DEERS processing center.

If a dependent has a valid identification card they will be in the DEERS system since the same form to get an ID card is sent to DEERS.

Emergency care will not be denied, but if it is determined that the individual treated was ineligible for care, the patient will be billed for services.

Newborn dependents will not be denied care for the first four months after birth, and a threemonth grace period will be established upon identification card expiration to permit an update of DEERS data/reinstatement of eligibility.

Marines stationed overseas who have dependents residing in the United States will have until Jan. 1, 1985, to enroll their

"Dear sir, not only am I a concerned citizen but also concerned Marine . . . I think we (the Marines) should be more concerned with voting than just a few posters and an occasional two-liner in the base newspaper. Let's face it, we're all at least 18 (I'm 21) and up until now I have never voted. In fact, my wife of three months will do the same . . . I think the Marines as a group should lead the percent of

I whole heartedly endorse the views of this young lance corporal, and applaud his initiative and strong sense of duty. Federal Post Card Applications, which are available through unit voting representatives, make it convenient for everyone to vote. 160 participate in Windward Triathlon aboard Air Station

by Sgt. L.C. Brooks

The theme from "Jaws" blared from the loud speakers near Hangar 101 Sunday as approximately 160 athletes prepared for the first phase of the Windward Triathlon held here.

The event consisted of a onemile swim in Kaneohe Bay, a 50mile bike ride through Kaneohe toward the north shore and, finally, a 10-mile run on the Air Station.

A couple of participants suffered setbacks as they raced from the bay to their bikes for the second leg of the race. One found his bicycle wouldn't work, while another found her cycling shoes missing and had to improvise by wearing track shoes.

Ruben Chappins of Honolulu was the first man across the finish line in 3:53:23. "I knew I was really close to the other swimmers because I could see heads bobbing. But I also knew I would have a quick leg on the bike," he said. "All I wanted to do during the ride was take it easy and push against the wind on the way back. I did get off the route a little, but I kept my composure. The run was nothing more than a Chappins doesn't foresee competing in the Ironman this fall. "I'll be competing in the 'Hawaii Loves You Triathlon' in December and the 'Kauai Loves You Triathlon' Jan. 6. The purse at each race is $50,000," said Chappins with a glint in his eye. "I just don't think I'll have enough time to recover from them if I compete in the Ironman this fall." Chappins won the Tinman Triathlon last month.

Kelly Beck, however, the second place male winner in 4:55:29, does plan to go to the Ironman. Kelly, who first came to Hawaii with hopes of becoming a professional surfer, turned his attention to triathlons after being inspired by the 1982 Ironman. He hasn't competed in an Ironman yet but this triathlon was in preparation for the one in

"I came out of the water here in 31 minutes. In the cycling, I passed everyone before the turn around point except Ruben. That's why I was surprised to be the first one back, I thought Ruben was still ahead. I had stomach cramps during the run and Ruben stayed with me up to the eight mile point," said Beck.

Not far behind was Ruth Hunt from Hong Kong, the first woman who finished in 4:25:40. She experienced an obstacle, or two, en route to the finish line. "I had to hussle today," said Hunt. Someone took my riding shoes; and then, 30 miles into the bike race, with another 20 to go, my axel snapped and I had to ride the remaining miles with a wobbly front wheel." Hunt is in Hawaii to. train for the Ironman, and the Windward Triathlon was "just an extra little bonus" for her.

The coolness of the morning prevented head complications and enabled the athletes to only compete with their known adversaries - water, pedals and

Most of the participants in Sunday's triathlon are preparing for the International Ironman Triathlon on the Big Island this fall. And while the Tinman last month was a sprint and the Windward a steady pacer, the Ironman is guaranteed to be the ultimate love for true triathletes

Marine Greco-Roman wrestler wins silver

LOS ANGELES - Marine Sgt. Greg Gibson found himself standing on the awards platform at the XXIII Olympaid. As the silver medal was placed around his neck, thunderous applause rocked the Anaheim Convention Center, site of Greco-Roman Wrestling competition.

For Gibson, raised in northern California and educated at the University of Oregon, the medal is the culmination of a five year struggle for recognition. After trying unsuccessfully in 1978 to get drafted by the San Francisco 49'rs and the Seattle Seahawks. Gibson decided to join the Marine Corps "for the challenge it

Since 1979, he has been a member of the Corps' Wrestling Team at Quantico, and he has steadily improved on his skills as a wrestler while gaining invaluable experience in international competition.

After Olympic team selection process and a demanding training camp high in the mountain resort of Big Bear, Calif., Gibson arrived at the Olympic Village, at the University of Southern California, where he joined his fellow Olympians in the inspiring Olympic Opening Ceremony. His time f r recognition had arrived.

On Aug. 1, the fifth day of the Games, Gibson met his first opponent in the 100kg (220 lbs) weight division, Yoshihiro Fujita of Japan. who began the match quickly by scoring a takedown over Gibson in the first few seconds. After that, Gibson seemed to have no difficulty with his opponent. Gibson ended the match early in the second round by piling up a 12-point advantage over Fujita, winning the match on "technical superiority," 14-1.

The next day, Gibson again won convincingly in his match with Fritz Gerdsmeier of the Federal Republic of Germany, a much stronger wrestler than Fujita'.

At the start of his contest, Gibson, 30, tried successive throws to establish his vaunted opening offensive tactics. He describes his ferocious initial attack as an attempt to crush his opponent's self-confidence early in the contest.

A pattern was emerging. however, as Gibson again got off to an uncharacteristically slow start, contrary to his basic strategy. In spite of the slow start. however, he had established a 5-0 lead by the end of the first round.

The next round began with the two combatants thrusting for advantage, using "pummeling techniques" in their attempts to gain a hold. Gibson eventually turned his overwhelming physical power to his advantage, taking final control of the match with a 6-1 victory.

Having worked his way into the Group Finals (semi-finals), Gibson found himself up against one of his toughest rivals. The Yugoslav, Josef Tertelje, who was a silver medalist at the 1982. World Championships in Kiev, U.S.S.R.

Wrestling for the right to advance to the final, Tertelje went ahead early, 2-0. During the last 50 seconds of the last round, Gibson was finally able to score a 2-point take-down to tie the match at 2-2. With a delirious crowd cheering him on, the Marine sergeant finally scored a one point roll with only eight seconds remaining. Gibson won his match 3-2.

"I wore him out" said Gibson. "Conditioning is my big thing and has been the main reason the U.S. team has done so well," he said. Practicing in the high altitude of Colorado Springs and Big Bear has made wrestling here in Los Angeles a lot easier. My strategy was go out early and be aggresive and try to bring him

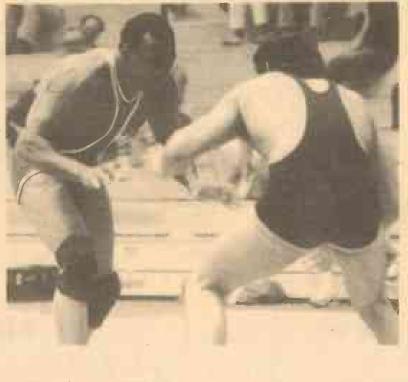

The finals was Gibson's last obstacle to the gold. His opponent Andrei Vasile of Rumania. One problem for Gibson was his 'gimpy" knee, which has been a problem for some time.

The crowd at the Convention Center was in a jubilant, festive mood, anticipating another exciting Gibson victory. His arrival on the arena floor was greeted by a flag-waving, ear splitting ovation.

The Rumanian and Gibson's knee were to prove too much for the Marine. Only 10 seconds into the first round. Gibson went down in pain; his knee buckled under him. After what seemed an eternity for the crowd, Gibson got back onto his feet. Their applause could not save him, though, and he never seemed able to recover.

"I thought if I got on top of him I'd be able to turn him. But I never had a chance.'

Greg Gibson lost his final match 12-0 in the second round. The recognition he sought, however, has come to him from the crowd he thrilled with his heroics and from the silver medal he wears with justifiable pride.

Computers add sophistication to tactical games

hy Tom Condon

The genesis of many games has been based on martial techniques and skills. Jousting, chess, the Oriental game of "Go" and even 'cowboys and indians." sharpen the reaction and thinking of the players. Computers have brought a new sophistication to games for training military officers and

The greatest advantages seem to be the compression of space and time. Using the Tactical Warfare Simulation, Evaluation and Analysis System (TWSEAS), Marine Commanders can practice on computers simulating a battlefield three times the size of California and a force of 50,000 troops. Officers and enlisted staffs playing the game from computers at Camps Lejeune, Pendleton and Quantico can wage battles, move forces, issue orders, and react to situations.

"The great thing about it." a Marine spokesman said, "is that the players can learn their weaknesses and develop their strengths."

Since the results can be quickly evaluated and analyzed, learning is immediate. "It's not like playing a game alone." according to a Marine spokesman. "If you make a mistake and casualties are taken, for example, it's personally embarrassing." Fortunately, on the computer battlefield, the casualties are not real and the game can he replayed so mistakes can be corrected.

The Army has developed computer war games for strategic and tactical training. Since 1981 the Army War College in Carlisle, Pa., has had computer games as part of the standard curricutum. Students compress a 30-day battle into two days, practicing the operational and logistical elements of large-scale battles. Future battalion commanders and staff officers hone their techniques on computer games at the Army's Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, Kan. An impressive array of electronic aids assist the complex training of battalionsize units at the National Training Center. Fort Irwin,

The Air Force uses an electronic blackboard to teach a variety of courses. One instructor can teach classes at 18 different centers. "It's clear that students learn just as well when they can't see the instructor as when they can;" according to an Air Force spokesman. Computers also reduce training costs. Flight simulators are used to train pilots of various aircraft and build skills in less time and at less expense.

Computers are helpful in training mechanics as well. For example, a computer can induce 294 faults, any three at one time, into an Army Chinook helicopter. Mechanics, crew chiefs, and flight crews must analyze the problems and correct them. "This is just another example of the practical, everyday use of computers today," a spokesman

Marines triumph in hobie cat races

Story and photos by Sgt. Christopher Wood

A Marine duo became champions at the Hawaii Hobie Cat Association state finals held at Bellows Air Force Station, Aug. 11-12, in a performance that was just about "purr-fect."
Doug Garcia, SOMS Air Traffic

Control, and his new bride, Anne, sailed their boat "Just Married" to a first-place finish in the association's "B" Fleet, an achievement for them since the pair had just moved up from the beginners' "C" Fleet one race

"It's unusual to have such success right away," Doug said. "Usually, when you move up into a new fleet, you get hammered for the first couple of races. But by winning "B" Fleet so soon, we'll have to move up to "A" Fleet before long," he said.

Hobie Cat racing season goes from Jan. 1 to mid-August, but for the Garcias it's a year-round routine. "We race about every two weeks during the season," Doug said, "but we also sail quite a bit. on our own, mostly on Kailua Bay, sometimes on Kaneohe Bay.

"We just like being out here," he continued. "You can go to one end of the beach, look around and see Hawaii, the beautiful water, and all of these pretty sails . . . it's just great. Some people sit around and don't do anything in Hawaii. We get out here, look at the waves, the wind, the sun, and it's beautiful."

For some people, however, the high cost of a boat is a deterrent. "Just Married" cost $4,000, plus $700 for the trailor. "But that's your only investment," Anne said. "You don't have to pay for gasoline, and unless you break something, that's all the money you'll have to spend on your boat.

The Garcias met at a Hobie Cat banquet two years ago and have been sailing together ever since. Their recent marriage was unannounced until they showed up with their new boat with "Just Married" emblazened on the side.

Despite their marriage and Hobie Cat success, married racing couples aren't all that common. "There's a lot of tension," Doug said. "You tend to argue on the boat, and there could be some hard feelings. But we have a good marriage and don't worry about it. Besides, I don't fight anybody who can hit harder than I can," he said with a laugh.

Doug was hit pretty hard Aug. 11, but not by Anne. "We were on the fast run, and a wave knocked me off the boat," he said. "It caught the boat broadside, and I was dragged behind. My weight turned the boat over. Needless to say, we didn't do our best in that

All in all, it wasn't one of Anne's favorite experiences either. "I was scared." she exclaimed. "It was really bad. All I could think about was 'where's my skipper? He's down in the water.' I guess we were tense because this was the state championships. Maybe it was good that he got knocked off because it cooled us off a little bit." Anne said

Keeping a cool demeanor is important on the boat, whether watching waves or the competition. "You watch the people behind you," Doug said, "and you watch to see what the guys in front of you are doing. If someone starts differently than vou do, then you try to see which route is; the best. You concentrate on all of the things that will make you go the fastest without turning over." If you're very far ahead, you start talking about other things,"

Anne said, "such as 'what do you want for dinner?' or things like that. Then you start messing up." After their triumph Aug. 12, the duo retired to the beach for a picnic in the sun, and to think about the next race.

HOBIES ON THE BAY - Members of the Hawaii Hobie Cat Association compete during the state finals Aug. 12.

SAILING - Doug and Anne Garcia sail on their boat "Just Married" during the Hawaii Hobie Cat Association's state finals at Bellows AFS.

Marine excels during karate competition

Story and photos by SSgt. W.S. Saunders

"Easy victories are cheap. Only those worth having come as the result of hard fighting."

These words of Henry Ward Beecher were best exemplified by a Brigade Service Support Group Marine during an Armed Forces Karate Tournament held in Honolulu recently.

Sgt. Ron Dargon, Headquarters and Service Co., BSSG, placed first in the black belt fighting and weapons, third in the open fighting division, and won the overall grand champion-

"The competition was tough and brutal," said Dargon. "That's the best way to describe that tournament."

Dargon had to fight eight people in his quest for the grand championship. "In the championship round, all of the first place finishers from each weight division had to fight one another, from lightweight to heavyweight," said Dargon.

"My greatest challenge came in the military division," Dargon continued. "My first opponent was a sailor I had beaten in a previous meet. The next opponentwas from the Air Force. He was trained in the Korean style of fighting. He was more of a kicker, like the Tae Kwon Do style of karate, which involves a lot of kicking."

"My match with him was real tough," said Dargon. "As a matter of fact, we fought so long that the scorekeeper fell asleep on the clock. We fought beyond the normal time period and when it was over, I advanced to the next opponent."

Dargon won the military division by defeating Dallas Grady, from the Coast Guard Reserve.

Dargon's only loss came in the open fighting division. "I was beaten once in the open division," said Dargon. "In this division, most of the competitors were local fighters. I took third in that division."

During the competition Dargon sustained an ankle injury. "My ankle had swollen after fighting in the military division," said Dargon. "When it was time to fight for the grand championship, I jumped around a little and my ankle felt pretty good although still a little sore. I fought two more fighter's and won the grand championship."

Dargon's interest in karate developed at an early age. "I took up the sport in the 5th grade," said Dargon. "During my high school years my desire for the sport was put somewhat on hold. When I came into the Corps I got back into it and I've been going strong ever since."

"My goal is to be highly rated and well known in the martial arts world," said Dargon.

Dargon, a third degree black belt, is ranked number one in Hawaii for black belt fighting and weapons. He also conducts classes on martial arts in the main gymnasium on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.

Golfers selected for All-Marine team

by Cpl. Terry Linn

AWASE MEADOWS, Japan — Skill, a little luck and being a golf course marshall at Awase Meadows Golf Course may have given Tom Mullen the edge needed for victory in the open division during an All-Marine golf selection tournament held here, July 23 to 26.

The tournament was designed to select the top two open and top senior players for advancement to the All-Marine competition in Hawaii, slated for Aug. 20 to 24, according to Chuck Wilhelm, assistant manager for Awase Meadows.

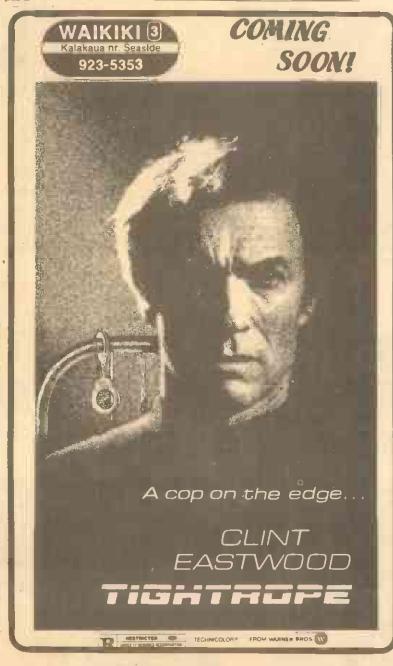

Following the first round,
Mullen held a four stroke lead over second place contender,
Mike Wallaker, Marine Corps

Base (MCB) Property Office, in the open division while Rod Felan, Purchasing and Accounting, MCB, held a two stroke edge over Lee Karmvik, Headquarters Battalion, 3rd Force Service Support Group.

At the end of the third round, Mullen held a five stroke spread over Wallaker and Karmvik took a 10 stroke lead over Felan.

When the scores were tallied at the end of the final round of play, Mullen had won top honors while Wallaker settled for second, and Wilhelm placed third for the open division.

The senior division saw Karmvik hold his lead to capture first while Felan came in second and Jerry Scoggins of Public Affairs Office took third place.

MARS contacts families

Armed Forces personnel overseas can get closer to their families and friends back home by calling MARS.

No, not the planet. The Military Affiliated Radio System (MARS). MARS is a worldwide network of amateur, professional and military radio operators.

Although the network's primary mission is providing military communications under emergency conditions, it is best known for voice communication links between service personnel and their hometowns.

Naval personnel serving with the Sixth Fleet in the Mediterranean, for example, can contact the MARS station at Norfolk, Va., using shipboard equipment. By using another MARS station, or the commercial telephone system, they can be hooked up with family or friends. The only cost is for use of the commercial phone system.

On the other side of that are MARSgrams - written messages of 25 words or less - which are always free of charge because they are sent exclusively through the MARS system.

To call or send personal messages home from overseas, contact your base, post or ship's communication's people todetermine if they operate a MARS; station or are able to locate one.

Your family and friends can use the MARS system to reach you overseas by contacting their nearest military base communications office. Calls often have to be scheduled in advance, and MARSgrams can take from a few. hours to several days to get through. That means speedier communications channels' should be used for important messages. You should keep this in mind when setting your priorities for calls.

MARS members, as part of their primary mission, donated more than 800 hours of their time' to the Arizona National Guard during widespread flooding last year in Tucson.

MARS was also quick to react to the May 1983 earthquake in Coalinga, Calif. An Army MARS affiliate member in Fresno set up an emergency network to relay preliminary details of the. disaster to the MARS station at, the Presidio of San Francisco. Other California members soon hooked into the network, relaying information into and out of the disaster area. (AFPS)

All-Marine boxers clash at Camp Lejeune

JAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. -Pough, solid action highlighted 1984 All-Marine Boxing Trial als, July 26, at the Goettge morial Field House as 18 'iters presented their strengths rie for championship titles.

The Marine Corps Base mp Pendleton boxing team marched out of the Field House with six titles and another Camp Pendleton Marine, Sergeant Tir 10thy J. Williams of 1st Marine Division, captured the middleweight title.

After Sergeant Ramon E. arcia took the 112-pound bout in unopposed fight, Lance Proporal Stephan A. Martinez aptured the 119-pound bout. He turned back Lance Corporal I. Cormier of 2d Marine Division. Corporal Edward J. Prentiss continued the Pendleton victory string when the referee stopped the fight in the second round against Private First Class Ramon S. Armendariz of Fleet Marine Force, Pacific, in the 125-pound contest. In an all-Pendleton fight, Lance Corporal Dontae M. Brown hested teammate Corporal Thomas J. Baeza in the light welterweight tilt.

Camp Leheune Marines claimed three titles including defending clashes from Lance Corporal Michael A. Crawford in the lightweight (132-pound) division and Sergeant Charles Dread in the heavyweight (200 pound) tilt. Crawford fought a tough and pesty Corporal Eugeneabdul H. Akram from Camp Pendleton and Dread turned back Lance Corporal Anthony R. Crawford of Camp Pendleton. Private First Class R.D. Covington captured the super heavyweight event (201pounds and up) unopposed.

Two San Diego fighters earned gold medals. Sergeant Jerome Hill outslugged Sergeant Alfred Garcia of Marine Barracks, Naval Weapons Station, Charleston, S.C., in a powerful fight. In a bit of irony, Seaman Harry A. McKee, reigning All-Navy champion, eliminated Corporal Tony Jackson of Marine Corps Air Station, Yuma, Ariz., in a strongly-fought three-round, light-heavyweight bout.

Following the fights, selections were made for the All-Marine boxing team. All victors were automatically selected. Additionally, the losers of the July 26 bouts were selected.

Happy Hour is from 5 to 6 p.m. Peter's top war-god father, Mars, into battle 40 request line plays from 6:30 p.m. to spread fear among the enemy, to 1:30 a.m. in the Moongate Lounge. phobias are unreasonable, live band plays in the main uncontrollable fears. ballroom. The club is open until 2 a.m. and the beer garden is open from 8 to 9

About 18 million Americans have them, sometimes to the point of being incapacitated. And even more people are afflicted with anxiety, which isn't fear of anything specific, but a vague uneasiness about what may

Fortunately, there are ways to conquer simple fears and phobias. One of these, desensitization therapy, exposes the victim to the thing that is feared until the terror burns itself out. Many people, however, feel that the cure is worse than the phobia.

A gentler remedy is to unlearn fears by keeping busy doing something enjoyable when afraid. Some psychologists suggest that patients retrain themselves with activities which keep them physically and/or mentally active in the face of the

For example, consider the classic case of Peter, a young patient of psychologist Mary Cover Jones during the 1920s. Peter's problem was an unnatural fear of rabbits. If one got close to him, he would panic.

Jones decided to teach him to replace the fear response with something else, so she cheered and relaxed him with his favorite foods, and then moved the rabbit closer with each meal.

It worked, and fear of rabbits became part of Peter's psychological history.

Some people believe that to conquer fear, you must discover its cause.

But one researcher could discover a cause for fear in only 10 percent of his phobic patients. The reason, he decided, is that many fears - like other psychological problems - stem not from one cause but many.

Lt. Cmdr. Stephen J. Kelly, Deputy Director of Mental Health and Rehabilitation for the Department of Defense at the Pentagon, explained that "since a phobia is a learned phenomenon, it often can be controlled and even cured by therapy."

He said treatment is available at hospitals and dispensaries on major military installations.

What Are You Afraid Of?

People have fearful, or "phobic," reactions to a wide range of things. A particular color might induce near panic (chromophobia); small objects (microphobia) might do the trick; so will fire (pyrophobia). Here's a short list of some of the lesser known phobias. See how many of them you can identify:

a. aquaphobia 1. glass 2. ideas

b. ballistophobia 3, sexual love c. bibliophobia

4. water d. zoophobia 5. self e. thermophobia

f. ideophobia 6. missiles g. ergasiophobia

7. books h. crystallophobia 8. animals

i. autophobia 9. work j. erotophobia 10. heat
