Fitness Report Audit Program begins; HQMC mails Master Brief Sheets

Washington, D.C. — Marines received word in November 1985 that, as the first stage of the Fitness Report Audit Program, a Master Brief Sheet will be mailed to HQMC on an chronological listing of all fitness reports entered into the Automated Fitness Report System, is used as a performance summary in the selection and promotion process.

The decision to provide Marines with a copy of their MBS was one of several changes made to the overall Performance Evaluation System after an in-depth review was concluded early last year.

When the Commandant made results of that review known, he emphasized the integrity of a system that has served the Corps well for many years. At the same time, he called for administrative improvements in the reporting process: removed some of the distance between the Marine being reported on and the reporting senior and cut the ties between fitness reports and performance counseling.

MBSs will be sent on a monthly basis, based on the last digit of a Marine's social security number, which will include an audit sheet and instructions.

It is then the Marine's responsibility to verify personal administrative data and ensure that there are no gaps in the reporting periods. Assistance is available at local units for those who need it in auditing the MBS or in making corrections to discrepancies.

In stage two of the Fitness Report Audit Program, Marines entering the promotion zone will be mailed copies of their Official Military Personnel File eight to 10 months before their selection board convenes. This will allow them to make a complete audit of their performance records by comparing the OMPF with the MBS.

Many of the administrative errors that hampered the promotion process in the past will be eliminated by this involvement of both Marines and their chains of command.

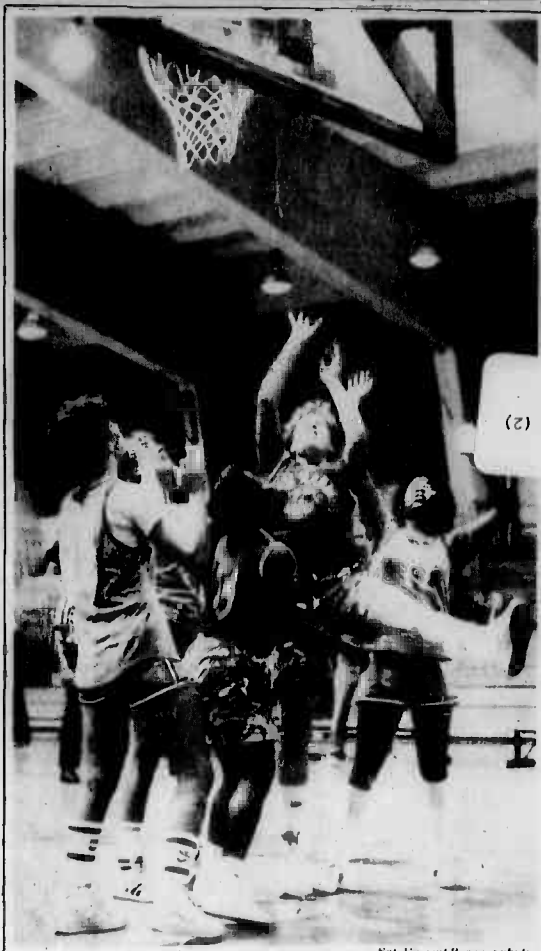

Mailout schedules for the MBS are:

January, last SSN digit ending in 1; February 2; March 3; April 4; May 5; June 6; July 7; August 8; September 9; and October 0.

Marines who are in transit during the time they would normally receive their MBS will receive the sheet once they are established in their new unit.

Those who desire their MBS for filing a petition with the Board for Correction of Naval Records, or the Performance Evaluation Review Board, should contact the Career Counseling and Evaluation Branch at AUTOVON 224-1734/2335 or (202) 694-1734/2335.

News in brief

Uniform regulations

In recent weeks, many Air Station and 1st MAB Marines have been seen off base wearing camouflage utilities or flight suits.

According to Air Station Order 1020.4C, camouflage utilities or flight suits can be worn only on official authorized duty, and from your place of residence to the Air Station and back. No stops en route are authorized. The order doesn't allow those who use public transportation to wear cammies or flight suits, and temporary lodging is not considered a place of residence. In addition, cammies or flight suits are not allowed in the Station Theater, bowling alley or swimming pool after 6 p.m.

Summer Fun

Special Services is planning an eight-week summer fun program here to be held at Mokapu School June 16 to Aug. 8. Cost is $100 for the first youth and $75 for each additional youth per family.

The program will include arts and crafts; individual and team sports; swimming; movie days; nature studies; excursions; and special events. Tentative registration dates are March 3 to April 4.

Partial payments, one half of total amount, will be accepted. Full amount is due April 4.

For more information, call 254-2963.

Airline discounts

Discount fares of up to 67 percent off regular coach class fares are being offered by World Airways to military members, some government employees and their family members.

Advanced tickets purchases are not required. No minimum or maximum stays and no change, cancellation or stop-over fees are necessary for purchase of discounted tickets; however, a valid military or dependent ID card is required.

World Airways currently flies to Baltimore, London, Frankfurt, Honolulu, Kansas City, Mo., Newark, N.J., Oakland, Los Angeles, San Francisco, and Orlando, Fla. The fares apply to active,

National Guard, retired and reserve service members; paid, full-time employees of the USO; officers of the National Oceanographic and Aeronautical Association; and employees of the U.S. Public Health Service. Widows and widowers are also eligible for the fares, but proper identification is required.

Spouses on domestic flights qualify for full military fare; accompanied children ages 2-11, 75 percent of military fare; unaccompanied children, 5-11, full military fare; and children ages 12-17, full military fare. Infants and children under age 2, who do not occupy a seat, travel free.

For additional information, call (800) 227-2297.

Readiness enhanced

Paperwork reduction underway

Washington, D.C. — The Marine Corps has joined in the Navy-wide effort to reduce paperwork and administrative duties.

Efforts by HQMC departments and FMF commanders have already resulted in ALMAR 279/85 being published, which eliminated 172 reports and reduced the frequency of submission for 49 others.

Additionally, ALMAR 5/86 directs that the auditing of the annual visual audit sheet will no longer be required by units and individual Marines. And ALMAR 10/86 calls for the elimination of unnecessary paperwork in Official Military Personnel Files.

"Our most important peacetime objective is achieving a level of combat readiness that will enable us to win in future battles," the Commandant told his commanders in ALMAR 279/85. "That objective must be emphasized by placing our most important peacetime duties in proper perspective. Administrative functions are justified only to the degree that they contribute to FMF readiness..." Gen. Kelley stated.

Field commanders have been encouraged to initiate similar administrative workload reduction efforts at the local level following the guidance contained in MCO 5214.2C, Information Requirements Management in the Marine Corps. The order instructs commanders to make multiple use of reports, to reduce reporting frequency, cancel information requirements when no longer needed, and to suppress new requirements not justified.

Reinforcing the Secretary of the Navy's claim that "...our ultimate success will depend on compliance at all levels," Gen. Kelly has alerted commanders that the Inspector General of the Marine Corps will include administrative workload reduction efforts on his checklist during future command inspections.

The attack on paperwork stems from the findings of a Secretary of the Navy panel that studied the excessive administrative responsibilities of aviators. Substantial evidence indicated that Navy and Marine aviators spent an average of two-third of their time in nonmission-related administrative duties.

"The Chief of Naval Operations, the Commandant of the Marine Corps and I were shocked by these findings, and we are convinced that a similar situation exists throughout the fleet," Secretary of the Navy John Lehman said. Lehman has called for a 50 percent reduction in all administrative reports within the Department of the Navy.

Recommendations for administrative workload reduction from all Department of the Navy levels are being studied for feasibility on an ongoing basis.

SGLI increases

An increase in the maximum amount of Servicemen's Group Life Insurance from $35,000 to $50,000 is effective now.

The increase is automatic for active duty members, and all reservists, whether under full- or part-time SGLI coverage, will be automatically covered by the increase.

The automatic increase does not apply to retired reservists with SGLI coverage. They have until January 1, 1987, to apply for the additional coverage.

Coverage under the Veterans Group Life Insurance program has also been increased by the same amount, and is now extended to members of the Individual Ready Reserve and the Inactive National Guard. Eligible individuals may also have reduced coverage of $10, $20, $30 or $40 thousand.

The monthly premiums for SGLI/VGLI will remain at present rates; SGLI costs 8 cents per $1,000 coverage, or $4 per month for $50,000; VGLI premium for individuals 34 and under will stay at 17 cents per $1,000, or $8.50 per month for $50,000 coverage.

For individuals 35 years old and over, VGLI premium will remain at 34 cents per $1,000 or $17 per month for $50,000 coverage.

Veterans with questions concerning SGLI/VGLI should call the VA Regional Office, at 546-8962.

A word about CHAMPUS . . .

The Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services offers military families a good health plan. It shares most of the cost of care from civilian hospitals and doctors when you cannot obtain it through a military hospital or clinic.

Some Marines are unaware that CHAMPUS is not free; more importantly, that there are limits on certain types of care, and some types are not covered at all.

There have been cases where Marines have had to spend their life's savings to pay medical costs, which were far in excess of the allowable CHAMPUS expenses for the services rendered.

One way an individual who uses CHAMPUS can guard against the effects of rising medical costs, and catastrophic health expenses, is to obtain CHAMPUS supplemental insurance. This insurance picks up where CHAMPUS leaves off, and pays a portion of the medical bills that would otherwise be the Marine's responsibility.

Several types of plans exist from several different companies and associations. Active duty Marines, particularly those contemplating retirement, are encouraged to seriously consider obtaining supplemental coverage.

Girl Scouts from Troop 151, along with some adult helpers, restore one of the tire islands in the Nuupia ponds as part of a project to improve nesting sites for the endangered Hawaiian Stilt to earn their Wildlife Merit Badge.

Band of muddy Girl Scouts clean up Nuupia habitat

Story and Photos
By Cpl. Stephen Frank

Frighened by peals of laughter, several of the endangered Hawaiian Stilts that make their home in the Nuupia Ponds, here, took wing in search of quieter surroundings.

The source of the laughter was a group of Girl Scouts from Troop 151, comprised mostly of children from military families, who took to the ponds on Feb. 15 to take part in a wildlife project that would earn them their Wildlife Merit Badge; and at the same time, provide better nesting sites and greater protection for the Stilts.

The purpose of the project, said Dr. Diane Drigot, Station Environmental Specialist, was to improve nesting islands in the ponds, and help remove pests that destroy the Stilt nesting area.

The islands were built several years ago as an experiment to provide nesting areas for the Stilts; and served two purposes: isolating the birds from predators such as dogs, cats, mongoose and rats; and to help young Stilts reach the water easier since they begin feeding on their own immediately after hatching.

The girls also helped chop up and remove mangrove trees, a pest species which is constantly overrunning the mud flats at the edge of the ponds where the Stilts nest and feed; which reduce their ability to reproduce, and also makes them vulnerable to attack by predators.

"We're working on this project in order to earn our Wildlife Badge," stated Kristin Braaten, a Girl Scout cadette who helped organize and supervise the project.

"By working to help wildlife, you get to learn about it."

"It's important to learn about the fish and birds that live around here," said Ana Diener, another cadette who worked with Kristin, "since a lot of them could become extinct soon."

Along with helping to improve the nesting areas for an endangered species, the girls were also required to identify several species of bird and fish native to the area; identify a species imported to the area, such as the mongoose; and investigate some of the causes for those species being endangered, such as pollution, predators, and man's encroachment. They also learned about dealing with the conservation of wildlife.

"This was a good opportunity for the girls to participate in a Girl Scout program and help the community at the same time," said Susan Braaten, the leader for Troop 151.

"This was also a chance for the girls to get some hands-on experience with wildlife, which is rare. This troop has just about adopted the ponds since this is our third year doing this. It's sort of a tradition. All the girls complain about the mud and the hard work; but the next year, they look forward to going back out," said Braaten.

The day wasn't just filled with back-breaking manual labor, although several of the girls would have aches and pains to remind them of the project. For most, the highlight was the mud fight at the end of the day.

Late that evening, after the mud fights and the screams had quieted, and after the troop had left, the Stilts returned. What they found were new homes and feeding sites, and a better chance to live and perpetuate the species.

What the Scouts got was a badge to be proudly worn, and a greater awareness of how fragile our world really is and how much impact they can have on it.

'Can do, Will do'

Seabees celebrate 44th year

'Can Do... Will Do." And they are still doing it, the Navy Seabees, that is.

In March 1986 the "sailors in green" will celebrate their 44th birthday. Versatile since the day of their founding, the Seabees have endured the hardships of war and the upheavals of peacetime, adapting their skills to whatever arises.

"In 1986, as in every year, the Seabees will deploy throughout the globe, supporting the Navy in peacetime and improving readiness by sharpening military and construction skills," said RADM. John Paul Jones Jr., commander of the Naval Facilities Engineering Command, and chief of civil engineers.

The Seabees were founded in 1942 by Adm Ben Moreell, then Navy chief of civil engineers, in response to an urgent need for qualified and experienced engineers and construction workers who were combat-trained.

The pioneering Seabees built roads, runways, and landing structures for advanced bases in the Pacific. While the United States and Japan fought throughout the Pacific Islands, the Seabees assisted the Marines in cutting through jungle growth to prepare for the arrival of their shipmates by sea and by air.

Currently, there are 12,000 active duty Seabees — military construction men and women — located around the world. They are equipment operators, construction mechanics, engineering aids, builders, steelworkers, utilitiesmen and construction electricians.

"Today's Seabees are smaller in number, yet just as dynamic as our predecessors," said EQCM M. John Hughes, Naval Construction Force, master chief. "The world is our turf. Seabees are serving on all seven continents, in 55 countries."

Seabees participated in West African Training Cruise, a six-week deployment to Mauritania, Sierra Leone, Togo, Zaire, Equatorial Guinea and Cameroon. While there, they built an open-air market and two schools; made repairs to a school; and made electrical and mechanical repairs to a children's ward of a hospital.

The reserve Seabees have proven over the years that they are ready to respond wherever duty calls. During recent years, they have supported the Navy at numerous locations, including back-to-back deployments to Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, to assist an active duty Seabee detachment in improving that vital outpost. Seabees are worthy custodians of the reputation built by their predecessors. They stand ready to fulfill their official motto: "Construimus Batumimus — We Build, We Fight."

With characteristic ingenuity and enthusiasm, the Seabees of the '80s are creating an impressive peacetime record, deployed around the world, helping those who need help, and doing what has to be done with their traditional flair.

14th Dental Co

Navy reservists do 'class 1' job

By Sgt. Joe P. Jascor

Nine Navy reservists of the 14th Dental Company, 4th FSSG, arrived for a two-week stay here Feb. 1, from cold New York, Pennsylvania and Missouri to fulfill their annual training.

"Our main objective on this ATD was to get as many Marines as possible 'class one' qualified," said Reserve

Cmdr. Clayton H. Johnson, commanding officer, 14th Dental Company, Det. 1, home-based in Kansas City, Mo.

"All Marines before going on deployment, should be in 'class one' status. This simply means that there is nothing wrong with the individual's teeth," explained Johnson. The five dental technicians and four dentists worked on more than 300 Marines during the two week period.

"We have an aggressive hunch in this detachment," Johnson said. "Our people made the most of this short visit and we saw it as a great opportunity to provide dental care for the 1st MAB," added Johnson.

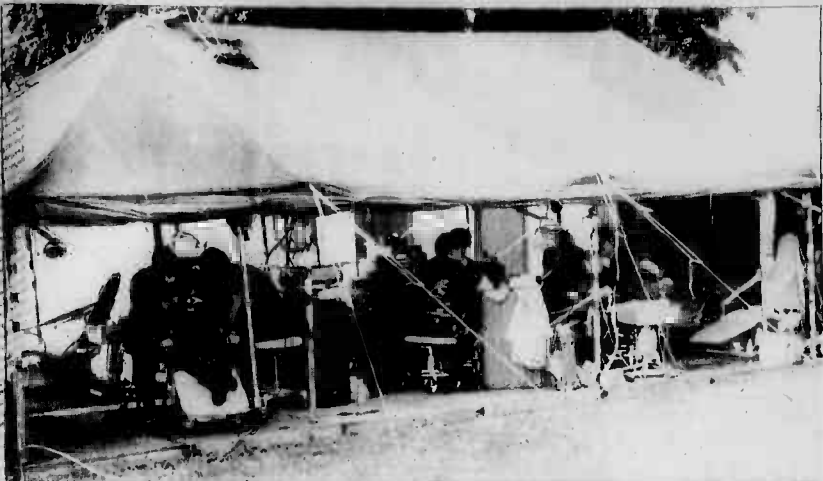

Coordinating the exercise with the 14th Dental Co. was the 21st Dental Co. here.

"The 21st Dental Co. was more than helpful," said Johnson. "They screened and gave each Marine a preexamination before sending them to us." The reserves set up shop in tents adjacent to the Dental Clinic and used all in-the-field dental equipment.

"The equipment here is similar to the machinery back home at the office," Johnson said. "Our repairmen, along with the 21st company's repairmen, kept the machinery working so we could keep up the pace."

"The Naval reservists helped out our staff tremendously by getting the Marines caught up with their dental check-ups," commented DTI M.D. Rosenberg, a lab technician and public affairs representative for 21st Dental.

The reservists departed Feb. 15 and, after two weeks in Hawaii the general consensus was that they were definitely not ready to go back to the snow!

Naval reservists from 14th Dental Co., 4th FSSG, use field dental equipment.

Reserve Cmdr. Kenneth M. Kucharz, 14th Dental Co. Det. 2, from Stanton Island, N.Y., selects the proper tool to check a Marine's teeth.

The Posture Statement

USMC photo

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following article is the conclusion of the Marine Corps' FY-87 Posture Statement given recently by the Commandant of the Marine Corps to Congress:

Tactical mobility

Other priorities include ground and air tactical mobility. Gen. Kelley cited increased capability of assault amphibians and product improvement to further enhance the firepower, mobility and survivability of the AAV-7A1 until the follow-on vehicle, the advanced assault amphibian vehicle, is fielded in the late 1990s. The light armored vehicle program is underway, with the mission-role vehicles currently being delivered.

A new family of ground transport vehicles is also entering the Marine Corps service. The Commercial Utility Cargo 5/4-ton vehicle and the High Mobility Multi-Purpose Wheeled Vehicle will fill the light vehicle fleet requirements. The medium fleet consists of the M939, 5-ton truck series, while the 16-ton tractor and four-rear body variants will make up the heavy vehicle fleet.

A significant program that will provide ship-to-shore tactical mobility is the Air Cushion Landing Craft scheduled for introduction at Camp Pendleton later this year. The Marine Corps needs at least 90 LCACs for a meaningful capability.

Ground tactical mobility is enhanced by the MV-22 Osprey, a tilt-rotor aircraft. Gen. Kelley noted tremendous progress in the development of the Osprey which is now in the full-scale development phase. He further noted that he fully expects the Osprey to meet urgent operational requirements when it begins replacing the CH-46 in 1991.

The Osprey combines the features of a turbo-prop and helicopter. With air speeds in excess of 250 knots, an unrefueled range of 2,100 nautical miles, and an ability to lift 24 combat loaded ground troops or 10,000 pounds of cargo, it will give a boost to surface lift and assault capabilities of the Marine Air Ground Team. The potential for this aircraft, Gen. Kelley stated, is absolutely unbelievable.

Supporting the medium lift of the MV-22 is the CH-53E, the most powerful helicopter in the free world. The Commandant supports continued procurement of the CH-53E which is vital to maintaining the future heavy lift capability.

The CH-53E provides amphibious assault lift to include the M-198 Howitzer and the LAV. The CH-53E can also retrieve every aircraft in the tactical and assault inventory, including another CH-53E.

Equally critical to attaining a high state of readiness is the quality engineer, maintenance and medical support vital to the amphibious forces' mission. Five initiatives are underway to provide the combat engineer with a rapid means of off-setting enemy minefields. A sixth system will increase the number of combat engineers to support ground

Another combat service support enhancement is the rapidly deployable medical facility that will provide medical support until it is replaced by the first Combat Zone Fleet Hospital in 1987. Of the 23 modular field hospitals with capacity to hold 1,000 beds, two 250-bed hospitals will support the Maritime Pre-positioning Ships Program while the remainder will be part of the overall continuum of care for medical support.

"In all of our programs, we are maintaining vigilance over our procurement systems to ensure that maximum value is received for each dollar spent... We want the taxpayers to know that we are spending their tax monies judiciously and that we are getting the 'biggest bang for their buck,'" the Commandant stated. "We simply do not tolerate waste, fraud or abuse."

Strategic deployment

Funding limitations will continue to mold crisis response and reinforcement roles. However, the Commandant noted the Navy-Marine Corps team has made significant strides since 1980 with programs designed to enhance the Nation's force projection capability.

Of continuing interest to the Marine Corps,

Gen. Kelley said, is the vital area of amphibious lift. Congress has authorized the buy of two WASP-class LHDs, the keystone of the lift program; and eight Whidbey Island-class LSDs, critical to the life of the LCAC.

Although a total of 16 ships has been authorized or programmed since 1980, only two of the Whidbey Island-class LSDs, have joined the fleet. Accordingly, the Commandant strongly supports the service-life extension program of Austin-class LSDs which will add another 10 years to this capable class of ships.

General Kelley cited an urgent requirement for a hospital ship program that provides a flexible dimension to combat casualty care. To meet this need, two San Clemente-class tankers now being converted to hospital ships, with 1,000 beds and 12 operating rooms, are scheduled to be operational for FY-87.

A related shipbuilding initiative is the Aviation Logistic Support Ship Program, which provides vital intermediate maintenance support to both helicopters and fixed-wing aircraft in the area of operations. Two of these ships will be delivered in 1986.

Pre-positioning capability

The Commandant expressed his satisfaction with the success of the Maritime Pre-Positioning Ships Program. The first and second MPS squadrons are now operational in the eastern Atlantic and Diego Garcia, respectively. MPS-3 will deploy to Guam and Tinian by the end of September 1986. MPS provides combat equipment and 30 days of supplies for a 16,500 man Marine amphibious Brigade to carry out a variety of missions in a time of crisis. Gen. Kelley reported that MPS is proving to be an extremely valuable strategic capability.

Another strategic mobility enhancement that is making great strides is the pre-positioning of supplies and equipment in Norway. The MAB-sized Marine Air Ground Task Force is a versatile and formidable air-ground team under a single commander. This program provides rapid deployment to an area vital to the United States and her NATO allies, as well as providing a viable source of response and deterrence.

The Commandant said the Norway pre-positioning program remains a top defense priority for the Norwegians, and their contributions through host-nation support has greatly reduced the total pre-positioning requirements for the Marine Corps.

Training

The Commandant reemphasized the importance of a well-trained Marine. "We require the highest standards from our drill instructors and accept no deviation from these standards. Recruit training remains our most valuable training asset, and one of my top training priorities," he stated.

Follow-on specialized skill training and military formal schools prepare Marines for increased responsibilities and better enables them to effectively carry out their mission.

General Kelley cited improvements to the curriculum at the Amphibious Warfare School, which sharpens the war-fighting skills of experienced company grade officers. Likewise, majors and lieutenant colonels at the Marine Corps Command and Staff College fill key positions in a combined arms exercise and participate in joint Middle East exercises via satellite communication.

Additionally, selected officers participate in fellowship programs and conduct self-study and research in the area of national strategy. The Marine Corps trains collectively in a mission-oriented and innovative program that sharpens individual skills and leadership abilities. To maintain a high state of readiness, the Marine Corps participates in about 180 major exercises annually.

The battalion-size combined arms exercises are conducted each year at the Marine Air Ground Combat Center, Twentynine Palms, which permits the integration of live ordnance delivery with unit maneuvers. Two multi-purpose range complexes being developed at Camp Pendleton and Twentynine Palms will provide modern training facilities that will incorporate a variety of computer-controlled targets for ground and air units.

Training with allied counter-parts worldwide will continue on a regular basis. The Commandant cited the overall combat readiness of the Fleet Marine Forces as the goal of all Marine Corps training programs.

Operational commitments

Marine Air Ground Task Forces are globally deployed to support national policy. Marine aviation squadrons continue to increase Navy-Marine Corps interoperability and to offer each service the chance to perform in the other's environment.

Interoperability initiatives expand the earlier deployments of the EA-6s and the RF-4s aboard Navy carriers to include the F/A-18 and A-6E squadrons. In September 1985, two Marine Corps F/A-18 squadrons were deployed aboard the USS Coral Sea and current plans call for two Marine F/A-18 squadrons to be deployed annually aboard carriers. Additionally, this year, two A-6E squadrons will be assigned to a carrier aircraft wing with one to follow in 1987 and one in 1988.

Reserve program

The underlying strength of the Marine Corps' sustainability is the reserve force. Gen. Kelley stated, adding that reserves are an integral part of the Marine Corps.

Units of the Selected Marine Corps

Reserves make up 25 percent of the total peacetime combat power of the Marine Corps. Upon mobilization of the Individual Ready Reserve, this capacity rapidly increases to 33 percent of the war-time manpower requirement. He reinforced his earlier comments by citing depth of experience and expertise as the reserve's greatest resources.

Operating in diverse geographical environments, 20,000 reserves participated in 18 major exercises, worldwide, in FY-85; and in FY-86, the schedule will be equally versatile and demanding.

The Commandant noted increased readiness and war-fighting capability of the reserves within the last decade and recognized their total contribution to the total force capability.

Special operations- terrorism counteraction

In view of global commitments and the continuing efforts of the Department of Defense to improve the special operation capabilities of the services, the Marine Corps revalidated that MAGTFs are clearly qualified to conduct a wide range of special operations in a maritime environment.

"Although a significant special operations capability currently exists within the Marine Air Ground Task Forces, particularly in our forward deployed MAUs, I have nevertheless directed an aggressive program to optimize a pilot program," said Gen. Kelley. This program will examine the organization, training and equipment of Marine Amphibious Units and designate those qualified as special operations-capable.

With spiraling terrorist activity and the need for greater internal security for embassies and consulates, the State Department has requested an increase in the number of Marine Security Guards which would permit the establishment of detachments at locations without MSGs. The Commandant expressed full support for this critical area of security.

Also in the path of the terrorist threat, are the Marine Barracks and the forward-deployed MAGTFs. The Marine Corps program to combat terrorism includes training in terrorism-counteraction and has been incorporated in selected Marine Corps formal schools.

"The cornerstone of the Marine Corps Program is my continuing belief that the best deterrent to terrorism is an alert, aware combat-trained Marine," Gen. Kelley said.

The Commandant concluded his remarks to Congress with a strong, confident statement. He said:

"When this nation needs a quality force to project amphibious power anywhere in the world, we are ready. One call gets it all," the Commandant concluded.

They're out for blood.

At first, it was only once a week. Then three times. Now they're out for blood every night. And they're not alone. They're just two of the thousands of people all over the country who are finally starting to do something about the disease that kills almost 32,000 Americans every year—and afflicts another 38 million. Black History Month

Educating young Marines

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following article is the last in a series, featuring black Marines and sailors at Kaneohe Bay.

By Cpl. Hugh Trask

Black History Month means something different for everyone. For some, the month reflects pride on the Afro-American heritage; for others, the month is a time to commemorate black Americans' contributions to our country.

To Capt. Mark Nall, deputy Provost Marshal for operations, this month is a time to educate people in the military about black heritage.

"Black History Month educates Marines about prominent black Americans throughout history. We can learn more about their contributions and talents," he said.

A native of Birmingham, Ala., Nall enlisted in the Marine Corps during January 1966.

After training as a machine gunner, he was sent to Vietnam for duty with the 1st Marine Division. In 1970, then a sergeant, Nall changed his occupational field from infantry to military police. In 1976, Nall was selected for the Warrant Officer Program and, four years later was commissioned a first lieutenant.

Nall admits that the month can be improved. "Maybe, we should ask young Marines what they need or want from Black History Month, and then implement it."

VALUABLE COUPON

Have medical insurance without the big premium.

Civilians might pay $50, $60, $70 or more each month for medical insurance. Whether medical care is needed or not.

Whereas, a Marine has absolutely no monthly, yearly or any other kind of medical-insurance premium to pay. If you use the military medical facilities, you may pay for a few meals but only if you stay over night. If you use CHAMPUS, you pay only a small percentage of the bill.

Premium-free medical insurance is something to think about if you're thinking about leaving the Corps. There, the premium comes right out of your pocket. Consider your other benefits like educational assistance, retirement, the pride of being a Marine and security. You'll find...

It's all yours in the Corps.

Rules for tax preparation outlined by IRS

Commercial tax return preparers must comply with specific requirements when making out their clients' returns, the Internal Revenue Service advises.

To protect taxpayers, paid preparers are responsible for providing a copy of the completed return to the client for his/her records when the client signs. Preparers are required to keep copies of prepared returns or a list containing taxpayers' names and identification numbers for three years. These records must be available for IRS inspection during this period.

Forms 1040, 1040A, and 1040EZ paid preparers are also required to sign and date completed returns and to provide their employer identification number on the return. Because of potential misuse, rubber stamps and signature facsimiles are not accepted by the IRS.

The handling of refund checks is also regulated. A penalty of $500 can be assessed against paid preparers who endorse, cash, or in any way negotiate a client's refund check. In addition, understating a client's tax liability can lead to a penalty of $100 for negligent or intentional disregard of regulations.

Deductions

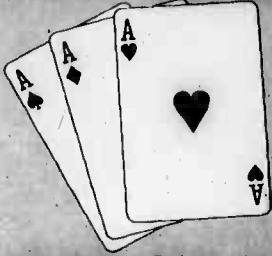

For those who itemize deductions, tax counseling and assistance fees paid to have tax returns prepared are deductible for the year they were paid. Thus fees paid to prepare 1985 tax returns in 1986 are deductible on 1986 tax returns.

Great Aloha Run

A line of Marines comes through the Aloha Stadium entrance during the Great Aloha Run.

2nd Bn., 3d Marines capture Sounds of Freedom Division in Hawaii's biggest run

Story and photos
By Sgt. Joe P. Jaseur

The Sounds of Freedom Division of the 1986 Great Aloha Run was won by 506 leathernecks from 2/3, Feb. 17, for having the largest military unit in the 8.25-mile race.

Along with being the winners in their division, the 2/3 Marines also came within seconds of their predicted finishing time for the race, which began at the Aloha Tower and ended at Aloha Stadium.

The military unit entries were also graded on their uniformity, military presence (cadence), esprit and enthusiasm.

"It was quite a job trying to get that many Marines together considering the busy schedule we follow," said Capt. D.C. Tippett, race coordinator for 2/3.

"Between deployments and pre-IG inspections, we were very busy getting the Marines prepared for everything."

Run preparations began for the Marines six weeks prior to race day. "We ran an eight-mile course here twice a week, said GySgt. Michael S. Hannasch, platoon sergeant for Weapons Co. "The troops did a good job on race day considering all the people getting in the way. They were highly motivated and kept the formation together."

Having run the eight-mile course here without worrying about obstacles, the 2/3 Marines forgot they would be running with more than 17,000 people. Even though the right side of the road was designed for military unit entries, many of the slower runners still hindered the Marines time.

"Our predicted time on the entry form was 80 minutes," said Lt. Col. G.A. Betta, commanding officer, 2/3. "The traffic of people was difficult to run in. So, by the halfway point, we were two minutes and 40 seconds off our scheduled time. At that point in the race, I had the word passed that we would really have to 'push-it' to the finish line." They finished in 79 minutes and 16 seconds.

"The reason we were able to pick-up the lost time was due to the staff NCOs and lieutenants who really took charge and pushed the troops to the finish. All the Marines did a super job.

These are some of the finest Marines I've seen in 26 years," said Betta.

After the race, all runners received a T-shirt, and complimentary refreshments.

All the money collected from the race went to benefit various charity organizations throughout the state.

Among other units who had Marines participate in the Great Aloha Run are: H&S Co., 1st MAB; 1st Radio Bn.; ComSpt Co.; AAV Bn.; Det Co. A; MACS-2; VMFA-235; HMH-463; HMM-265; BSSG; and from the Air Station, H&HS and SOMS.

Also, according to Lt. Col. J.F. Amos, MAHS-24, commanding officer, his unit had the second largest group from the Brigade participate in the run. Their finishing time was 1 hour and 28 minutes.

To the Marines of 2/3 . . .

"The outstanding performance of the 2nd Bn. 3d Marines, in winning the Sounds of Freedom Division of the 1986 Aloha Run was noted with pleasure. The battalion's performance was reflective of a high level of esprit, leadership and overall physical conditioning. The fact that you were able to finish within 44 seconds of your projected time after an eight-mile run indicates excellent prior planning and in-depth knowledge of your capabilities. You carried the Marine Corps banner high while assisting in raising over $200,000 for charity and significantly enhancing the military/community relationship."

FMFPac Championship Kaneohe women win title

Camp Foster, Okinawa, Japan — The 4th Marines' team defeated the Hawaii Marines, 95-80, to claim the 1986 Fleet Marine Force Pacific basketball crown.

In women's action, the defending champion Hawaii Marines team, led by Tammy Cullison, overcame a 12-point half-time deficit to edge pass Iwakuni, 65-62, and kept the FMFPac championship title for another year. For her actions, Cullison was selected as one of the tournament's Most Valuable Players.

The 4th Marines finished the tournament with a 7-1 record. For the final game, the Schwab team took control of the boards early as they waged a defensive battle against a frustrated Hawaii Marines offense.

Hawaii Marines held the lead twice during the game, both times during the first half, for a total of 2:24 out of a possible 20 minutes. Despite strong offensive plays from the 4th Marines, Hawaii managed to go into halftime trailing by five points.

Whatever dreams Hawaii Marines held for capturing the FMFPac title disappeared early in the second half as the 4th Marines team exploded offensively building up a 16-point lead. Hawaii tried desperately to catch up, but failed.

"It's been a great season," said Calvin Wilson, 4th Marine coach. "But without good support from the command, units, my assistant coaches and the fans, none of this would have been possible. My hat's off to all the other teams who were contenders in this tournament," he said.

The Hawaii Marines women's team almost went home without their title as they faced a determined Iwakuni squad in the final game.

Iwakuni's guard paced her team through a high scoring first half as a stunned Hawaii team fought on. Iwakuni was able to effectively eliminate the scoring threat of Cullison and All-Marine selectee Tammy Parton as they built a 12-point, half-time lead. Unfortunately, Iwakuni's lead came with a costly price tag — foul trouble.

Hawaii Marines came out strong in the second half to face a stubborn Iwakuni defense, which refused to yield points easily. Iwakuni fought gallantly to hold onto its lead, but the game's intensity began to wear them down. Hawaii finally captured the lead with five minutes left by effectively using the fast break on their tired opponents.

With 57 seconds left, and Hawaii Marines holding on to a one point lead, it still looked like anyone's game. Hawaii began passing the ball to use up the clock without surrendering the ball. They scored once more before time ran out.

Advancing to the All-Marine level of competition are Jeff Jones, Wayne Simmons and Eugene Strickland of Hawaii.

History of U.S. Intn'l Naval Review

When the Atlantic Fleet ships sail from their home ports to take part in the July 1986 International Naval Review in New York Harbor, they will pass through waters marked by four previous such events.

In 1893, warships from Argentina, Brazil, England, France, Holland, Italy,

Russia, Spain and the United States met in Hampton Roads, Va., and then proceeded to New York Harbor in connection with the World's Columbian Exposition, marking the 400th anniversary of Columbus' landing.

President Grover Cleveland, on board the unarmored cruiser Dolphin, reviewed the assembled ships on April 26. He officially opened the exposition the following week in Chicago.

In 1907, Hampton Roads hosted an International Naval Review in connection with the Jamestown Exposition, marking the 300th anniversary of the founding of Jamestown, Va. In addition to warships from the Atlantic Fleet, ships from Argentina, Austria-Hungary, Brazil, Chile, Germany and Great Britain took part. President Theodore Roosevelt reviewed the ships from his yacht, USS Mayflower.

In 1957, Hampton Roads hosted the third INR, also held to observe the founding of Jamestown. For this event, the State Department only invited NATO nations and countries that had a special interest in the founding of Jamestown and the colonization of North America.

About 80 U.S. warships joined 30 combatants from foreign countries, including Belgium, Canada, Colombia, Cuba, Denmark, Dominican Republic, France, Great Britain, Italy, the Netherlands, Norway, Peru, Portugal, Spain, Turkey, Uruguay and Venezuela.

On June 12, Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson reviewed the double line of ships from the guided missile cruiser USS Canberra (CAG-2).

The U.S. ships assembled were the newest in weaponry and fighting systems among navies of that decade: USS Saratoga (CVA-60), an attack aircraft carrier; USS Boston (CAG-1) and USS Canberra, the first two guided-missile cruisers; and USS Barbero (SSG-317), a guided-missile submarine.

On July 4, 1976, New York Harbor was the site of the fourth International Naval Review to be held in the United States. It was held in honor of the U.S. bicentennial. Ships and delegations from more than 40 countries assembled, along with about 200 sailing ships of the privately sponsored Operation Sail.

President Gerald R. Ford reviewed these ships from the guided-missile cruiser USS Wainwright (CG-28).

The United States will host a fifth International Naval Review in New York Harbor on July 4. This review will be held in connection with Operation Sail as part of America's salute to the centennial of the Statue of Liberty. Secretary of the Navy, John Lehman, has invited the navies of 117 countries.

In this year's event, numerous ships of the Atlantic Fleet will attend, including the aircraft carrier USS John F. Kennedy (CV-67) and the battleship USS Iowa (BB-61).

Military's top black woman interviewed

When she was three years old, she picked up to 50 pounds of cotton a day in the fields of a central Louisiana farm. As an eighth grader, she wanted to be a nun. Today, Army Gen. Sherian G. Cadoria, 46, is the highest-ranking black woman in the military services.

As director of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Manpower and Personnel Directorate, she is responsible for coordinating policies that affect more than 3.1 million active duty and Reserve members of the Army, Air Force, Navy and Marine Corps.

Cadoria uncannily predicted her rise to general officer at the age of 16 when she told her mother, "If I go into the service, I won't get out until I become an admiral." She wanted to follow in the footsteps of her brother who joined the Navy at the age of 17.

"I said, 'you'll never get to that point... but she did,'" said her mother, Bernice Cadoria, 72, of Marksville, La. "As a child, she was very intelligent... always had a big mind," said Mrs. Cadoria.

A petite, soft-spoken woman with a courtly Southern demeanor, Cadoria is the first woman from the Military Police Corps to achieve general officer rank. She was the Army's "top cop" during a one-year tour as chief of the Law Enforcement Division in the Pentagon-housed Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel.

Before that, Cadoria spent two years (May 1982-July 1984) as commander of the First Region, U.S. Army Criminal Investigation provides input for the Joint and Chiefs of Staff internal military and civilian personnel program.

Since her promotion to brigadier general last August, Cadoria has become one of the most sought-after speakers in the Defense Department by military and is a good place for their sons and daughters to be."

Her message to young men and women is, "Don't hesitate about coming into the armed forces. And don't be hesitant about going after the tough jobs."

"Everything won't be Utopia," said Cadoria, a devout Catholic. "There will be hard times, but not every day. I have a saying, 'This, too, shall pass, and you'll go on.' But don't be hesitant about tackling the tough jobs."

Cadoria, who joined the Army in 1961, says she has managed her military career by seeking and fighting for the tough jobs... jobs that no other military woman had held... jobs that were reserved for men. She says she took plenty of knocks, bangs, bruises, insults and rejections along the way.

"I joined the military police because I wanted to work with troops... I wanted to command troops," she explained. "The MP Corps was the closest to combat arms that a woman could get in those days."

In 1967, after serving a year as administrative officer for the Army Provost Marshall in Vietnam, Cadoria sought a job as protocol officer with the Qui Nhon Support Command.

The colonel who interviewed her said women couldn't escort VIPs because they couldn't carry the luggage. Cadoria told him about her days in Louisiana cotton fields carrying sacks weighing nearly 100 pounds by the time she was nine years old.

"He said the only reason he was talking to me was he was forced to," she said.

The strong-willed general refused to give up. She eventually convinced the colonel and got the job. "I was given the title of 'the northernmost WAC' (Women's Army Corps) in Vietnam," she laughed heartily. "That area wasn't approved for women. Saigon, Long Binh and Cam Ranh Bay were the only places women were assigned at that time."

"Shortly after I arrived there, we went into the 1968 Tet Offensive," she recalled.

The horrors of the war rekindled her thoughts of becoming a nun. "I did a lot of volunteer work (at hospitals and leper colonies with the Dominican nuns working in the area)," said Cadoria.

She told the general for whom she worked of her intentions. "He said, 'Sherie, you've been affected by what you've seen. But I think God's choice for you was to be a soldier.'"

Still determined to enter a convent after returning stateside, Cadoria began counseling with a priest. After a few months, the priest told her, "You have to work with the gifts that God has given you. And He's given you a very, very special gift. You already have a vocation. And your vocation is to work with soldiers..."

"I accepted that, and decided to make the military a career," said Cadoria.

Cadoria said one of her proudest achievements was her tour as Chief, Office of Army Law Enforcement, Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel, Department of the Army. Her work there, she said, helped "set the future course for the Army Military Police Corps, out into the 1980s, 1990s and, hopefully, beyond. And the opportunity to provide a positive concern and care and leadership to the men and women..."

Another thing she's proud of is having borrowed an armored sedan in 1981 from the West German Minister of Interior just two weeks before terrorists tried to assassinate Gen. Frederick J. Kroesen, then U.S. Army commander. The armored car is credited with saving Kroesen's life. "I thank God I was there to push that... and get it done," she said.

Command, Fort George G. Meade, Md.

In her present job, she deals with policies that include pay and allowances, benefits and professional education. Additionally, Cadoria administers the manpower survey team and civilian organizations around the country.

"I accept most of the engagements because it's good public relations," said Cadoria. "It's telling the armed forces story. It's being with our citizens and letting them know that this

VA Job Program gets extension

President Reagan has signed legislation extending for one year federal veterans job training programs for certain unemployed Vietnam Era and Korean Conflict veterans. The law also authorizes an additional $65 million for the program in FY-86, but additional legislation would be required for funding to actually be appropriated and made available to the VA. Under the new law, veterans may now apply to participate. The application period would end Jan. 30, 1987. The measure also extends, until July 31, 1987, the deadline for eligible veterans to be enrolled in approved training. To participate in the program, a veteran must have been unemployed for at least 10 of the last 15 weeks immediately after the date of his or her application. Eligible veterans are furnished a certificate of eligibility by the VA to be presented to an employer offering a job training program that meets specified requirements. The job training program, jointly administered by the

VA and the Department of Labor, has put more than 37,000 veterans back to work since it became operational in November 1983. Employers may be reimbursed 50 percent of a veteran's starting hourly wages, up to $10,000. The program provides a maximum of 15 months of training for certain service-disabled veterans, and up to 9 months for other participants. The program also allows employers to enter into agreements with educational institutions to provide vocational instruction under approved GI Bill training programs. Veterans should call or visit the veterans office for additional information concerning eligibility and application.

Station Gym has an excellent multi-purpose exercise room and gym floor space, in addition to racquetball courts and saunas. Call 257-2237 for information and reservations.

SOES achieves aviation milestone

MCAS Cherry Point — An air of pride and accomplishment ran throughout Station Operations and Engineering Squadron, here, as members awaited the arrival of the HH-46 Search and Rescue helicopter that would mark the 100,000th hour of accident-free flight. The aircraft reaching this milestone was piloted by Capt. Jerry Marr. A cake-cutting ceremony was held following a few words of congratulations by BGen. James M. Mead, the Air Station's CG, and LtCol.

Dean Daniel, commanding officer of SOES. The aviation milestone took 22 years to be reached. Although best known for its SAR team, SOES also flies the Marine Corps' only two C-9 aircraft and the CT-39G, the two aircraft responsible for most of the accident-free-flight hours flown. "We began our count in November 1964, and have flown several different aircraft; but most of our hours are by the aircraft we now own," said SSgt. Tim Crooks, operations chief. "Our 19 permanent pilots, and 18 augmented aviators, fly throughout the United States, Alaska, Canada, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, Cuba and Europe," Crooks added.

"A team effort concerning safety awareness is a key at SOES," commented LtCol. Daniel. "From the junior Marine in maintenance to the commanding officer, we are constantly aware that we are entrusted with a high value cargo. We don't take chances with safety."

The 180 Marines of SOES have flown and maintained, for the past 22 years, aircraft ranging from the dependable C-117 to the C-9 and the UH-34 helicopter.

LtCol. Dean Daniel, SOES CO., presents a piece of cake to Capt. Jerry Marr, HH-46 pilot.

The cake says it all.

Some must report state tax refunds

Taxpayers who received income tax refunds in 1985 from taxes paid in an earlier year to a state or local government may have to report the refunds as income on their 1985 federal tax returns, the Internal Revenue Service said.

Generally, a state or local tax refund should be reported as income only if the taxpayer itemized deductions on Schedule A of the 1984 Form 1040, and deducted income taxes paid to the state or local government. Refunds of federal income taxes are not considered income on a federal tax return. However, interest earned on a delayed federal refund is income and must be reported, the IRS noted.

State and local governments still furnish annual information statements — similar to those required of financial institutions on interest and dividends — to the IRS for all taxpayers who receive refunds, credits or offsets of $10 or more from their state and/or local governments. However, state and local governments are not required to issue such statements to taxpayers, unless the taxpayer itemized deductions on Schedule A of the prior year Form 1040. For more information, call or write your local IRS office.

Extending your tax deadline

Form 1040 or 1040A filers can request an automatic 4-month extension of time to file their tax returns, the Internal Revenue Service said.

Taxpayers filing form 1040EZ or those requesting the IRS to compute their tax are not eligible for an automatic extension.

To obtain the 4-month extension beyond April 15, 1986, a taxpayer must complete Form 4868, "Application for Automatic Extension of Time to File U.S. Individual Income Tax Return," and forward it to the service center processing tax returns for his or her state. Form 4868 must be filed on or before April 15, 1986, the IRS said.

The extension to file the tax return is not an extension of time to pay any tax due, the IRS stressed. It also no longer extends the deadline for IRA contributions, which must be deposited by April 15, 1986, to be applied to the 1985 tax year.

On Form 4868, one must make a tentative estimate of the year's taxes and submit any balance due with the form. Upon filing the tax return, if the unpaid tax is more than 10 percent, there is a penalty for late payment unless the taxpayer can show reasonable cause for not paying the tax when due. The penalty is one-half of the one percent per month on the unpaid balance, up to a maximum of 25 percent. Interest is also assessed on any unpaid balance, the IRS said.

Certain VA benefits non-taxable

Veterans' benefit under any law administered by the Veterans Administration are not included in gross income, the Internal Revenue Service says.

The following amounts paid to veterans or their families are not taxable:

- education, training or subsistence allowances;
- disability compensation and pension payments for disabilities;
- grants for motor vehicles for veterans who have lost their sight or the use of their limbs;

- veterans' pensions paid either to veterans or their families; and
- veterans' insurance proceeds and dividends paid either to the veterans or their beneficiaries, including the proceeds of a veteran's endowment policy paid before death.

Some amounts paid to veterans are taxable income, however. For example, interest on dividends left on deposit with the Veterans Administration is taxable. The amount of this interest is shown on a statement provided by the Veterans Administration. However, if a veteran decides to use accumulated dividends to buy additional paid-up National Service Life Insurance, neither the dividends nor the paid-up life insurance is taxable.

Also included in taxable income are Veterans Administration payments to hospital patients and resident veterans for their services under the Veterans Administration's therapeutic or rehabilitative program. These payments are included as income other than wages on Form 1040.

TWO YEARS IN THE ARMY COULD GET YOUR CAREER ROLLING.

Today's job market is a real jungle. Everyone wants experience, but no one's willing to give it. The Army's different.
Consider this: if you invest just two years in the Army, you could come out with valuable experience in a skill of your choice.
The Army has a wealth of two-year skills to choose from. Skills in Armor, Engineering, Communications, and more. Many of these skills have civilian job applications. So you won't go into the interview empty-handed.
Don't stall. Take off in a new direction with a two-year Army enlistment. Call your local Army Recruiter for details.
