Reenlistment door closing?

Marines contemplating reenlistment or wanting to make a lateral move may find themselves on the "outside looking in" if they wait too long to make their decision and submit the necessary paperwork.

When the new Selective Reenlistment Bonus Program multiples were published, they came with some changes to reenlistment and extension policies. As stated in ALMAR 068-86, Marines whose active duty time expires between April 1 and Sept. 30, 1986 cannot extend their enlistment — they must either reenlist or be separated from the Marine Corps.

According to 1st Lt. G.P. Wells, Joint Career Planning Officer, here, Marines in this EAS window who want to reenlist must do it by June 30. "If they don't," said Wells, "they could be forced into getting out if HQMC puts a freeze on all reenlistments."

The reason behind the June 30 deadline, and the possible reenlistment freeze, according to Wells, is that the MOS-manning levels will be reevaluated after June 30 to determine how many, if any, reenlistments will be allowed. "The Corps-wide personnel manning levels must soon comply with the personnel reductions set in the recently signed Gramm-Rudman-Hollings Act," Wells said.

To find out more about reenlistment opportunities and current policies, contact your Unit Career Planner. But if you wait too long to decide, your reenlistment "door" may be slammed shut.

Consumer rights outlined for obtaining credit

Washington, D.C. — Consumers are continually enticed to "buy now, pay later," by using that magic phrase, credit. All of us have certain rights when it comes to credit; and when it's used properly, anyone with a good credit record has a right to expect credit.

Applying for credit

When you apply for credit, you automatically are protected by the Equal Credit Opportunity Act. This act ensures that credit applicants are considered on the basis of their qualification and that credit is not refused because of the creditor's personal prejudices. Generally, creditors use the "three C's" of credit: capacity, character and collateral.

Capacity is the creditor's way of determining if you can repay a debt. A creditor will ask for employment information, such as your occupation, how long you've worked, how much you earn. A creditor also will want to know your expenses — how many dependents you have; whether you pay alimony or child support; and the amount of any other obligations.

Character is the creditor's way of determining if you will repay the debt. A creditor will look at your credit history — how much you owe, whether you pay bills on time, and whether you live within your means. The creditor also will look for signs of stability — how long you've lived at your current address; whether you own or rent; and the length of your current employment.

Collateral is the creditor's way of protecting himself if you fail to repay the debt. The creditor will want to know what you may have that could be used to secure the loan, and what sources, other than income, you have for repaying debts, like savings, investments or property.

How creditors use these three C's depends upon the individual creditor. Some have unusually high standards; others simple do not make certain kinds of loans. What this means is that even if one creditor approves you for credit, another may not.

Creditors are not required by law to approve credit for every applicant. But they are required to apply their "credit-worthiness" tests fairly, impartially and without discrimination against a consumer on the basis of age, sex, marital status, race, color, religion, national origin, receiving public income (VA benefits, welfare, Social Security) and exercising one's rights under federal credit laws.

The law also states that the creditor may not use any of those grounds to discourage you from applying for a loan; to refuse you a loan if you qualify; or to lend you money on terms different from those granted another person with similar income, expenses, credit history and collateral.

Equal Credit Opportunity Act

What are your rights if you're turned down on a credit application?

Under the Equal Credit Opportunity Act, you must be notified whether your loan has been approved or disapproved within 30 days after you apply for credit.

If credit is denied, notice must be in writing and it must explain the reasons for credit denial or tell you of

Medical construction monies combined

Planning and budgeting for medical construction for all three services will be consolidated under the Office of the Assistant Secretary of Defense for Health Affairs as of FY-87.

A Congressionally-directed blue ribbon panel recommended the creation of the Defense Medical Facilities Office, which will be operational in October.

"We look to this new organization to improve cross-service planning and prioritization of construction projects and most importantly, to ensure that those projects with critical readiness missions receive the highest priority," said Dr. William Mayer, assistant Secretary of Defense for Health Affairs.

Consistent with the emphasis on readiness, the new office will propose construction, alteration or acquisition of a military health facility only when:

Current facilities are inadequate for medical readiness;

Local civilian or federal facilities are inadequate or unavailable;

Modernization of an old facility or acquisition of a new one is required to support teaching or skills maintenance requirements critical to military readiness; and/or Care in a military health facility is the most cost-effective method of providing authorized health services.

Mayer is requesting $337.9 million for medical construction projects in FY-87. The figure includes $111.9 million for the Army; $42.9 million for the Navy; $182.2 million for the Air Force; and $9 million for the Uniformed Services University of the Health Sciences.

Nearly half of the requested funds will go to large hospital construction projects at Madigan Army Medical Center in Fort Lewis, Wash., and at Travis AFB, Calif., where a composite medical facility replacement project is underway.

Mayer is requesting funds to replace hospitals with serious structural and functional deficiencies at Naples, Italy, and Mountain Home, Idaho. Both locations are considered medically isolated.

The FY-87 request also includes funds for 14 new or replacement outpatient facilities to support new missions such as the Light Infantry Division at Fort Wainwright, Alaska; to replace World War II era structures; and to improve primary care for active duty personnel and their dependents both at home and abroad.

Military walk-in clinics to open in Virginia

The success of the first military walk-in medical clinic, which opened in Northern Virginia last October, has prompted health care officials to make preparations for opening three more facilities by next October.

Called PRIMUS, for Primary Medical Care for the Uniformed Services, the clinic provides fast, quality, convenient treatment of minor illnesses and injuries in communities with large populations of DoD beneficiaries.

Two more clinics will open in Northern Virginia — one in Burke, near Washington, D.C., and another in the Woodbridge/Dale City area, which is between Fort Belvoir and Quantico. A third clinic will open in the Fort Stewart/Hunter Army Air Field, Ga., area.

"We decided to open two more clinics in the Washington, D.C., area because the demographics here are different than in any other places," said a spokesman for the Army Surgeon General's office, which oversees operation of the clinics. "There are more than 280,000 DoD beneficiaries in this area."

"We don't want to create another overcrowded, overutilized facility," he added.

The PRIMUS staff often treats more than 200 patients a day, well above the 40-patient-a-day average that officials expected when the facility first opened.

Building a PRIMUS clinic in Georgia is the first step toward establishing 10 such facilities in communities throughout the country.

That area was selected because the medical facility at Hunter Army Air Field is housed in an old wooden building of World War II vintage. "It can't provide care for all the DoD beneficiaries in the area," said the spokesman.

"We expect to handle more than 36,000 visits a year there," he added.

PRIMUS facilities are open seven days a week, 365 days a year to treat service members and their dependents from all branches of the military services.

Medical care and medication is free to eligible patients.

PRIMUS will treat such injuries and ailments as cuts, bruises, sprains, minor fractures and colds.

Remember Mom on her day

Editor's Note: The following article was received at Headquarters Marine Corps from an individual whose qualifications are best explained in the story.

I can dream, can't I?
To every young enthusiastic new member of the Marine Corps I would say, "somewhere in your memory bank save some of the things your mother taught you. You may need them later on when you pick a wife, rear a child or find a civilian job."

There is no question you are most amongst an elite Corps. You will emerge tough, disciplined and courageous. All are necessary attributes for fighting a war and for dealing with life.

You will be the pride of the military, of your family and of your community. That is an accepted fact, proven by years of history and tradition. You will not fail; you cannot fail; and you will not be allowed to fail. When you chose this career, this set number of years of obligated service, you also choose a "sure thing." The Marine Corps does indeed build men. Tough men. Disciplined men. Brave men.

I am the wife of a now retired Marine jet pilot, Korean vet, tried and true. He is presently employed in the aerospace business and has been for many years. He is craggy and barracks wise... I am also the mother of two strapping young men.

Being a mother has always been an exemption from trouble. I know, you know, and everyone knows, that even if we never admit it or say it out loud, mothers are often right. They are a protected species to their own kids, if not to the rest of the world. So, with my flimsy credentials on the line let me expound on what I think the Marine Corps needs to do, thus continuing my day-dream.

I would ask for every young man who has been stripped of all the mental reminders from mothers, not to eliminate them from his conscience forever. Do so for now if that is necessary, but please keep them stored away somewhere inside that young head, beneath that close-cropped regulation haircut, to be pulled out when needed.

Save the niceties for the girlfriend, the wife, the baby. Remember, they were not trained to fight, to march, to hustle, to obey, without questions. You are now being entrusted with human beings who do not understand your world. They are probably people who understand "soft" rather than "hard;" "quiet" rather than "loud;" "preserve" rather than "destroy;" "withdrawn" rather than "attack;" and "polite" rather than "pushy."

Welcome to the world of women, children and many men who have not chosen military life. You'll run into them all soon enough, and their world is as valid as yours, although perhaps not as disciplined or as dangerous.

These "wimps" of the world will probably not respond to the hairtrigger commands with the same response as you do, and may be intimidated in their failure to understand. They also may be angry, which creates a less than pleasant, if not downright dangerous, relationship. Feelings will be hurt; conversations misconstrued; and general unhappiness may prevail.

Another factor which will no doubt annoy the young Marines in dealing with the "outsiders" is their somewhat universal sense of trust. It has been my observation as a military brat, Navy nurse, and subsequent Marine wife, that the men and women of the Corps are extremely trusting too — but, toward each other. Enter the civilian who frequently becomes suspect.

Military families are by necessity close knit and dependent on few, other than each other. My husband still finds it surprising that I can be so trusting. In finally mingling with the world outside the military confines, I must smugly admit that he is the oddball, not me.

I do trust a few others beyond my family and my dog, much to my husband's consternation. Again, remember I was never taught not to trust; I never had to carry a gun; I was never put on the firing line; and I never went to boot camp.

I guess, as I dream, that what I am trying to convey is this. Let's allow intelligence, reason and moderation to be the rule in relationships.

Obviously, we are not getting very far very fast in increasing military salaries to the very deserving Marines. So it seems it's a case of "bite the bullet" and do the best with what you have. What we all have is the ability to try to understand others, to consider their views and to adapt to society.

It's a tough assignment for a Marine; but after all, I'm just dreaming. So, I'll end my reverie by saying, "Remember mother."

And have a safe tour, wherever you may be.

May 11 is Mother's Day

Presidents' mothers one-of-a-kind

Mother's Day is a good time to remember some presidential sons and their mothers.

Mary Bell Washington, mother of George, was so against the idea of her son becoming a seaman in the British Navy that the family gave up the idea.

Anna Pierce, mother of Franklin, reputedly drank excessively and wore red ribbon bows around her ankles.

After John F. Kennedy became president, his mother, Rose, took it upon herself to become a spokeswoman on mental health retardation.

Martha Young Truman, on the other hand, just spoke out. When she arrived in Washington, D.C., aboard the presidential plane on one Mother's Day, she remarked in a manner that "Give 'em hell, Harry" would have been proud of: "Oh fiddlesticks! If I'd have known there was going to be all this fuss, — I wouldn't have come."

The contributions of the presidential mothers can be summed up in an ode that Sara Delano Roosevelt received from Rose Sverdluk, of the Bronx, N.Y., which begins:

"To you we are grateful, for you are the one to give our country such a noble son..."

Gurkhas train with 1st MAB Marines

Gurkha soldiers set up their camp site before training at Bellows AFS with 1st MAB Marines.

By Sgt. Joe P. Jascur

The terrain was unfamiliar to the soldiers as they maneuvered through the undergrowth: their camouflaged uniforms blending as easily into the vegetation as their Marine counterparts who were acting as aggressors.

The commands issued by the platoon sergeant were not understood by the Marines though: the soldiers were a company of Gurkha soldiers from Nepal, 1st Battalion, 7th Duke of Edinburgh's Own Gurkha Rifles, based in the New Territories of Hong Kong.

Since the heavily developed and populated city of Hong Kong has limited training resources, the Gurkhas took advantage of the vast beach and field training areas in the "unfamiliar" territories of Hawaii.

The Nepal soldiers participated in surf survival training and amphibious landing exercises with the 3rd Assault Amphibian Vehicle Detachment and "L" Co., 3/3.

"The training was very successful," said 1st Lt. Kevin T. Monaghan, executive officer for the 3d AAV detachment.

Conducting an amphibious landing in amtracs was a big change for the Gurkhas. "Their amphibious landings consisted of small inflatable boats, nicknamed 'rigid raiders' that hold only five or six men," added Monaghan.

"This is our first time training with and landing from these amphibian vehicles," said Maj. Coran J. Pearce, company commander of the Gurkhas. "It was a great experience for the troops. We're a weapons support company and are attached to an amphibious battalion, so this is just the type of amphibious training we're looking for before our main exercise here. 'Union Pacific 86' to be held at a neighboring island."

The Gurkhas' normal duties revolve around supporting the Royal Hong Kong Police, which includes patrolling the border with mainland China to prevent illegal immigrants from crossing into Hong Kong. According to Maj. Pearce, the border patrol duty lasts about six months and can be quite monotonous.

"This training evolution was a very good and needed break for us; however, our next tour of duty will be at Brunei, Borneo, patrolling the border there," concluded Pearce.

A Gurkha soldier cuts a branch with a Khuri knife while setting up camp. The Khuri, known as the Nepalese national weapon, is often seen traditionally tucked against their stomach held by a white sash surrounding their waist.

Two Gurkha soldiers use their life vests during surf survival training off Bellows AFS.

The machinegun platoon of 1st Battalion, 7th Duke of Edinburgh's Own Gurkha Rifles also performs as the Corps of Pipes and Drums of the battalion.

Hawaii Military Week thanks Armed Forces for support

"Hawaii Military Week," a program to recognize the military services for their annual contribution of more than $2.4 billion to the state's economy, will be celebrated May 9-18.

"All the activities are meant to express gratitude to the men and women of the armed forces, and bring awareness to the civilian community for the many contributions the military neighbors make to Hawaii's economy and quality of life," said Jeanne K. Schultz, executive director of the Military Affairs Council, which is promoting the event.

On Monday, Hawaii Military Week was officially started with a proclamation made by Governor George E. Ariyoshi and Honolulu Mayor Frank Fasi at the Captain Keolu, in what is planned to be an annual ceremony. Many special events will be offered to the military during this week, according to Schultz.

Activities during this special week include band concerts throughout local communities, a parade, a recognition luncheon, discount travel packages, reduced hotel and car rental rates, and "two-for-one" promotions at local and neighbor island restaurants.

According to Schultz, the military services are at the forefront of all the activities being planned for Hawaii Military Week, and the first year for this special week will be a "proving ground" for future events. "I don't want to promise the moon this year," said Schultz, "but in two or three years, I think this will be one of the state's most anticipated events."

Other programs directly affecting the military services in Hawaii are also being initiated by the Military Affairs Council, which is comprised of Chamber of Commerce members and city and state officials.

The programs include legislation introduced, and passed, to eliminate discrimination in public establishments; actions taken to increase housing and job markets; provide for a higher standard of education; and improve the overall quality of life.

The schedule of events for Hawaii Military Week is:

"Aloha Mom," a 25 minute free telephone call to the mainland, sponsored by Long Distance USA, AT&T, Military Communications Center and SPRINT, will be held at Tripler Medical Army Center, May 11-16; Helemano Military Reservation, May 12-13; Schofield Barracks, May 12-18; NAS Barbers Point, May 14-15; MCAS Kaneohe Bay, May 18-19; and

Wheeler AFS, May 19-20.

Military band concerts will be provided by the 25th Infantry Division Band at Wahiawa Intermediate School, tomorrow; Paoli Band at the Hale Koa, Sunday, and at Campbell High School, Monday; and the FMFPac Band at the special recognition luncheon, Sheraton Waikiki, May 15, and at Aiea Intermediate School, May 16.

On Wednesday, Miss Hawaii, Jeanne Miyamoto, along with other local entertainers and business leaders, will visit patients at TAMC from 9:45 to 11 a.m. The visit is sponsored by Hawaii Telephone Co., and Sea Life and Waimea Falls parks.

A Special Recognition Luncheon, sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce, will be held at the Sheraton Waikiki on May 15, from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.

During this event, five military members and five military spouses will be honored for their outstanding community work; and two other service members will be recognized for their contributions to the military and civilian communities.

On May 17, special VIP tours of Hickam and Pearl Harbor will be given to sponsors of Hawaii Military Week.

A "Rhythm and Blues, Doo Wop and Rock and Roll Spectacular" will be held at Schofield Barracks' Conroy Bowl on May 17, starting at 7 p.m. Tickets will be $1 with a military ID card, and there will be door prizes. This event is sponsored by Hawaiian Tel.

"Military Sunday" will be May 18, with a special service being held at 10:40 a.m. at Central Union Church. Pulpit exchanges between military and civilian clergy are being encouraged on this day.

Civilian publishers of military newspapers will be offering three pages of redeemable coupons for discounts on various goods, services and events during Hawaii Military Week. Also, many retailers will be setting up "red, white and blue" window displays advertising discounts to military ID card holders.

"As we grow," said Schultz, "more and more emphasis will be placed on making this (Hawaii Military Week) a successful venture. I think that the military and civilian communities will appreciate the results," concluded Schultz.

For more information on this week's activities, call Jeanne Schultz at 531-4111.

Navy Nurse Corps celebrates birthday

Clara Barton, the Civil War's "angel of the battlefield" and founder of the American Red Cross, would be proud of her 1986 counterparts in military medicine. Not only have nurses become full-fledged members of the military medical community, they've also achieved recognition as professional military officers.

The professionalism and dedication displayed by Clara Barton and others like her during the American Revolution, the Civil War, and the Spanish-American War helped bring this about.

The road wasn't without obstacles. When talk first began before the turn of the century about establishing a permanent nurse corps, Army Surgeon General George M. Sternberg wasn't convinced it was a good idea.

Reluctant to have women serve with troops in the field, he argued against the added expense of "luxuries" needed by women, but not previously issued to men — bureaus, rocking chairs and other special items.

But during the Spanish-American War, more than 1,500 women served with the Army and Navy in the United States, Cuba, Puerto Rico, The Philippines, Hawaii, China and Japan and on the hospital ship, Relief. These women were hired as contract nurses during an epidemic of typhoid fever that left a severe shortage of men to handle patient care.

The Army surgeon general was so impressed with the service of these women that he wrote in his 1899 annual report:

"American women may well feel proud of the record made by these nurses in 1898-99, for every medical officer with whom they served has testified to their intelligence, and skill, their earnestness, devotion, and self-sacrifice."

Two years later, the Army Nurse Corps was born. The Navy Nurse Corps was formed in 1908, and the Air Force Nurse Corps in 1949, shortly after the Air Force was established.

Since Surgeon General Sternberg's 1899 report, thousands of military nurses have been decorated for service and bravery.

Military nursing offered women their first opportunity to join the Armed Forces and, later, to earn a commission. It has opened other doors as well.

In 1970, Anna Mae Hays, chief of the Army Nurse Corps, was promoted to brigadier general, marking the first time that a woman or a nurse attained the rank of general officer.

The nursing profession has become more complex than Clara Barton might have imagined.

"Nursing has become sophisticated, because medicine has become so sophisticated," according to Col. Delores Haritos, Air Force Nurse Corps historian.

For military nurses, keeping up with these challenges is doubly difficult. "Today's military nurse has a dual role," said Haritos. "You not only have to be a professional nurse; you have to be a professional military officer."

That means a long progression of civilian nursing and military career schools, and long hours training for the skills needed in both.

So what is it that keeps nurses coming into military nurse corps?

Brigadier General Connie L. Slewitzke, chief of the Army Nurse Corps, thinks she has the answer: "Nurses feel strongly about the chance to serve their country. They are dedicated nurses who are proud to wear the uniform and proud to be professionals. The combination is unbeatable."

your right to request an explanation. If you're turned down for credit, you have the right to know why.

How do you assert your rights if you believe you have been discriminated against by a creditor?

Cite the law to the lender. Contact the following federal enforcement agencies for assistance if the lender still denies you credit:

Director, Division of Consumer and Community Affairs, Board of Governors, Federal Reserve System, Washington, D.C. 20551. This agency handles all complaints against banks.

Office of Proceedings, Interstate Commerce Commission, Washington, D.C. 20523. This agency handles all complaints against creditors who operate offices in more than one state.

Civil Rights Division, Department of Justice, Washington, D.C. 20530. This agency handles all complaints where individuals feel their civil rights have been violated.

File a lawsuit against the creditor if necessary. Federal laws provide penalties a creditor must pay if you can prove that the creditor has discriminated against you.

Credit is a privilege given a buyer by a creditor. If used wisely, additional credit may be given. However, abusing the privilege of credit will usually result in denial of future credit requests.

Soviet Union committed to military power

The Soviet Union is fully committed to developing, supporting and sustaining its military power for internal, regional and global use. It is believed that the Soviets devote about 16 percent of their gross national product to defense, compared to the United States' 6 percent.

In a statement to Congress, Under Secretary of Defense for Research and Engineering Donald A. Hicks detailed the enormous resources the Soviets commit to military research, development and procurement.

"The impact of the Soviet R&D program," said Hicks, "has been to create a wide array of future options for exploiting existing technology across the broad range of military missions."

Decisions concerning research and development in the USSR are centrally controlled, and the Politburo sets the broader research and development goals. Once set, the Soviets strive to implement them with the help of billions of rubles, a central technology base and the acquisition of Western technologies.

While industrial contractors are responsible for much of the research, development and production of major military systems in the United States, Soviet military-related research and development (which represents about half of all research and development in the Soviet Union) is carried out in research institutes, design bureaus and production associations.

The number of research institutes, up from 1,500 in 1960 to more than 3,000 today, represents a significant capital investment and an increase in the research capability of the Soviet Union.

Design bureaus, which answer to the defense industrial ministries, are responsible for developing new equipment and marrying it to new or existing technology that will speed its development.

Conglomerate organizations that integrate independent research institutes, design bureaus and production facilities are becoming the basic unit of the Soviet military industry. This shift is intended to speed the pace of scientific and technological progress and to reduce the time it takes to bring new technology into production.

Despite the major differences in the weapons development processes between the two countries, the time it takes to complete development on a major military system is the same for both: 12 years.

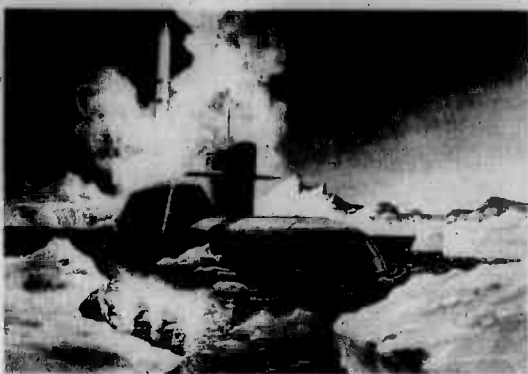

The report to Congress noted that the United States is fielding systems using technologies that were developed in the late 1960s and the early 1970s, and that the United States must lay the technology foundation now for weapon systems that will be needed in the 1990s and beyond.

Concerning basic research and advanced technology, the report showed that the United States has maintained its lead in most of the basic technologies critical to defense, but potential exists for the Soviets to gain ground in many areas.

The Soviets continue to lag far behind the United States in most of the most important

Armed Forces Day events planned

Armed Forces Day activities are scheduled at Hickam Air Force Base and Pearl Harbor Naval Base on May 17. Both installations will open their gates to the public at 9 a.m.

At Hickam, displays will include a B-52 bomber; KC-10 aerial refueler; C-5A Galaxy cargo plane, and a variety of other cargo aircraft including the C-130 Hercules; and C-141 Starlifter and the KC-135 Stratotanker.

Helicopters from the Navy, Marine Corps, Coast Guard, Army and Air Force will include a UH-1 Huey, a CH-46 Sea Knight, a CH-47 Chinook and a CH-53 Sea Stallion.

Tactical fighters and attack aircraft, such as the F-15 Eagle, F-4 Phantom and A-4 Skyhawk will also be on display alongside observation aircraft such as the OV-10 Bronco and the Navy's anti-submarine warfare patrol plane, the P-3 Orion.

Both Pearl Harbor and Hickam will have static displays of various ground combat weapons and equipment, including M-198 artillery piece and an LVTP-5 amphibious assault vehicle. Rappelling, SPIE-rigging and parachute demonstrations will take place, as well as performances by the FMFPac and Pacific Fleet Bands.

The play reveals many interesting insights into the man and the times.

Gas can recall

The Army and Air Force Exchange Services has removed a 2-gallon plastic gasoline container from its shelves because the product bears an unauthorized reference to Underwriters Laboratories, the nonprofit organization that tests products for safety.

The red plastic container, model number RG250, made by Kinder Industries, Inc., and was distributed between Nov. 5, 1985 and Feb. 6, 1986.

Customers who have purchased the Kinder RG250 gasoline cans can return them to their local automotive retail department at exchange service stations for a full refund.

Cutting Scores

ALMAR 99/86 has cutting scores for sergeant and corporal for the May, June and July promotion period.

Nat'l Transportation Week salutes 'people' movers

Whether you go on a safari in Africa or are heading for a new assignment in the Far East, getting there is something you won't really think much about... thanks to this country's and the world's transportation systems.

By Presidential Proclamation each year, the United States observes National Transportation Week. The week, May 11-17, salutes those involved in the process of getting people, goods and services from one place to another.

The military has contributed significantly to the transportation systems throughout the country.

Most of the aircraft flown today are the products of research and testing by military people. The threat of war, and war itself, have served as strong stimulants to the development of new and better ways to move people and supplies by air.

Civil aviation has made great progress using equipment, training and knowledge first developed for military use. Engineers from the Army Corps of Engineers built many of the airfields of the 1930s.

The military's contribution to transportation began long before the age of jets and supersonic aircraft.

Not many people realize that the two fellows, President Thomas Jefferson and an expedition to explore an overland route to the Pacific Ocean in 1801 were Army Capt. Meriwether Lewis and William Clark.

Today, more than a century and a half later, the importance of those and other routes opened by Army officers is pretty clear. The Lewis and Clark expedition, in essence, opened the West to the American people.

In those early days, it was the Army that surveyed and documented routes and made maps that were used by the early settlers. The maps were produced in sufficient detail to show where critical survival needs could be found, including basic necessities such as food and wood. They also showed where the Indians were and whether Indians were hostile or cooperative.

In the early 1820s, railroads and canals were being developed in the United States to carry commerce. The U.S. military deserves great credit for the development of railroad routes across the country.

Active duty and retired Army officers surveyed the route for the important Baltimore and Ohio railroad as well as the five major railroad lines from the Mississippi to the Pacific Coast.

In 1869, Army engineers were responsible for the exploration of Alaska and the mapping of the Yukon River.

Today, land transportation routes are the responsibility of civil authorities. But the military continues to play a very important role in transportation. The nation's waterways — so vital to the country's commercial trade — are operated and maintained by the Army Corps of Engineers.

The rivers, intracoastal waterways, the Great Lakes and deep-draft harbors provide an efficient means of moving commerce within the United States as well as to and from foreign countries.

Naval aviation in 75th year of progress

Washington, D.C. — This is the year of naval aviation's diamond anniversary. The Navy has come a long way since ordering its first planes on May 8, 1911, and has marked some milestones in the process.

Nov. 14, 1910. Marriage of aircraft and ship is consummated when civilian pilot Eugene Ely flies a Curtiss pusher from a wooden platform built on the bow of cruiser USS Birmingham. Two months later, on Jan. 18, Ely lands a Curtiss pusher on a specially built platform on cruiser USS Pennsylvania.

May 8, 1911. Capt. Washington I. Chambers orders two Curtiss biplanes. One of them the Triad, becomes the Navy's first airplane.

July 1, 1911. First flight of the first Navy airplane occurs when Glenn Curtiss demonstrates the A-1, taking off and landing on Lake Keuka, Hammondsport, N.Y. Three other flights are made the same day, one by Curtiss with Lt. T.G. Ellyson, the Navy's first aviator, and two other flights by Ellyson flying solo.

Nov. 12, 1912. An A-3 piloted by Lt. T.G. Ellyson makes the U.S. Navy's first successful aircraft catapult launch at Washington Navy Yard, Washington, D.C.

Jan. 6, 1916. The Navy begins to train the first group of enlisted pilots at NAS Pensacola, Fla.

March 24, 1917. The Naval Air Reserve is born when the first Yale Unit of 29 men enlists in the Naval Reserve Flying Force.

Aug. 21, 1918. Ensign Charles H. Jammann is the first Navy pilot awarded the Medal of Honor for his daring rescue of a fellow pilot under fire following a raid on Pola, Austria.

May 8, 1919. Seaplane Division One, made up of three NC flying boats, takes off from NAS Rockway, N. Y. for Halifax, Nova Scotia, on the initial leg of the first successful aircraft crossing of the Atlantic. The NC-4 is the only one of the three aircraft to complete the crossing, the first aircraft to do so.

July 1, 1921. Aviation machinist's mate, aviation metalsmith, aviation carpenter's mate, aviation rigger and photographer become the first aviation enlisted ratings.

March 20, 1922. USS Langley (CV-1) is commissioned as the Navy's first aircraft carrier.

Oct. 25, 1922. LtCmdr. Geoffrey Chevalier, flying an aeromarine biplane, makes the first U.S. Navy aircraft landing aboard a carrier, USS Langley.

Jan. 11, 1934. Six P2Y-1 flying boats arrive at Pearl Harbor, setting a world straight line record of 2,399 miles on the flight from San Francisco.

Sept. 29, 1946. A Navy P2V Neptune nicknamed "Truculent Turtle," departs Perth, Australia, en route to Columbus, Ohio, for a world record flight of 11,235.6 miles, over a period of 55 hours and 17 minutes.

Oct. 1, 1955. The first of the supercarriers, USS

USS Forrestal, is placed in commission.

March 4, 1957. The nonrigid airship Snowbird leaves NAS South Weymouth, Mass., for what will be a long-distance record that stands today. In 264.2 hours, Snowbird flies across the Atlantic to Lisbon, Portugal, turns south along the coast of North Africa, recrosses the Atlantic and lands at Key West, Fla., after 9,448 nonstop miles.

May 5, 1961. Cmdr. Alan B. Shepard, a naval aviator, is the first American to go into space.

Nov. 25, 1961. The U.S. Navy's first nuclear-powered aircraft carrier, USS Enterprise, is commissioned at Newport News, Va.

Feb. 20, 1962. Marine LtCol. John H. Glenn, in Mercury spacecraft Friendship 7, is launched from Cape Canaveral, Fla. He becomes the first U.S. astronaut to orbit the earth.

Nov. 6, 1967. An SP-58 Marlin of VP-40 at NAS North Island makes the last operational flight by a seaplane, ending a 50-year history of seaplane flight in the U.S. Navy.

July 20, 1969. Apollo II astronaut Neil A. Armstrong, a former naval aviator, is the first man to set foot on the moon.

Feb. 22, 1974. Lt. j.g. Barbara Ann Allen becomes the U.S. Navy's first designated female naval aviator when she receives her wings at NAS Corpus Christi, Texas.

April 12, 1981. Columbia, the first space shuttle, is launched from Kennedy Space Center with naval aviators John Young and Bob Crippen at the controls.

Women aviators flew first with British in WWII

Women Air Force Service Pilots, or WASPs, were the first females to fly American warplanes, but they were not the first American women to fly military aircraft in support of the war effort during World War II.

The first American women to fly military aircraft didn't fly for American forces — they flew for the British Royal Air Force.

In 1939, when war was looming in Europe, Jacqueline Cochran, a successful businesswoman and aviatrix, proposed training women to fly military aircraft for noncombat missions to free male pilots for combat duty. Her suggestion wasn't well received by the War Department.

"England set the precedent in 1940 for using women pilots to support the national war effort," said Capt. Rita Victoria Dearmond of the Office of Air Force History. "Women pilots were being used to ferry planes between factories and Royal Air Force bases."

British aviatrix Pauline Gower was selected to start a Women's Division of Britain's Air Transport Auxiliary, or ATA, in January 1940," said Dearmond. "This group of civilian women flew every airplane in the British inventory except four-engine bombers. They also piloted 'air taxis' flying RAF personnel between various installations."

Unable to convince War Department officials to use women pilots, Cochran went to England in the spring of 1942 as chief of American women pilots who volunteered for the Air Transport Auxiliary. She took 25 volunteer female pilots with her.

That summer, Cochran was visited in England by the late Gen. H. "Hap" Arnold, commander of the Army Air Forces, who advised her "that the time was approaching for the activation of a woman pilot program and she should close out her work in England and return home to take over this new phase," said Dearmond.

Cochran returned to Washington on Sept. 10, 1942, the day fellow aviatrix Nancy H. Love founded the Women's Auxiliary Ferrying Squadron.

Five days later, Cochran became head of the newly formed Women's Flying Training Unit, which remained in operation until the Women's Pilot Training unit was established in late October 1942.

A few days later, on Nov. 9, 1942, the name was changed again to Women's Flying Training Detachment. Finally, the Women Air Force Service Pilots was created on Aug. 5, 1943, a conglomeration of women from all of those training programs. A few women also returned from the Air Transport Auxiliary in England to join the WASP.

"The initial reception for the majority of women was a cold and antagonistic one," said Dearmond. "In most circles, women pilots were considered inferior to male pilots. They were often mistaken for non-flying military women of the United States for foreign countries, girl scouts or airline hostesses. The idea that these women actually flew military airplanes was often disbelieved."

"Jealousy and antagonism on the part of male pilots was partly due to those whose egos were somewhat deflated after they finally checked out on 'hot' planes and then saw a 'slip of a girl' landing a 'hotter' plane," Dearmond wrote in chapter two of a book she's compiling about women in the Air Force.

"It galled others to see women flying planes they were not yet qualified to handle or to accept the idea that women might actually be better pilots. Others resented the women sharing their activities. This prejudice and resentment often took the form of attacks on the women's personal conduct and morals," Dearmond wrote.

Dearmond said the resentment shown by men returning from the war and other factors caused the demobilization of the women pilots in December 1944.

In their 21-month military aviation history, women pilots chalked up some 60 million air miles, flying all types of noncombat missions to help the United States and its allies with the air war in Europe.

Courtesy is key for off-base parking

By Sgt. Joe P. Jascur

When Air Station residents lose their driving privileges here, some park their vehicles outside the back gate in the residential area.

Recently, some Marines have been noticed parking in these areas blocking driveways and emptying their ashtrays or trash on the side of the road and in some residents' front yards.

In one case, a self-employed resident of Kailua, had his driveway blocked by the Marines' vehicles.

"I rent out water recreational equipment and most of my business begins early in the morning," said Charles Hogg, who lives near the back gate. "One morning, three Marines' vehicles were blocking my driveway and I couldn't get out to go to work. On that particular day, I had about 60 people booked and lost a good deal of money."

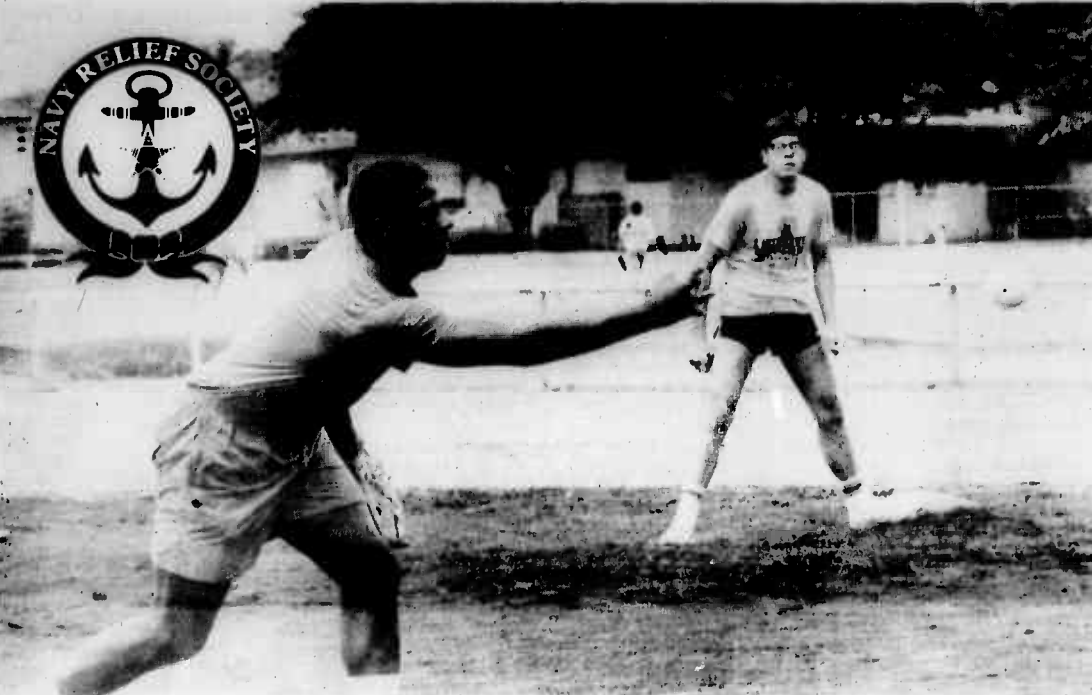

According to the Provost Marshal's Office here, there are no parking areas designated for Marines who lose their Station driving privileges and there is no station regulation regarding parking on off-base, residential streets; but Marines should use courtesy when parking in that area or face the risk of getting a citation or having their vehicles towed by the Honolulu Police Department.

Motorcycle safety — an impossible dream?

Richard Corcoran, a Navy engineer assigned to the supply ship USS Detroit, homeported in Norfolk, Va., bought a motorcycle because it was inexpensive to operate.

Yet, that motorcycle cost him far more than he could ever imagine. Among the costs: months in a hospital bed, wondering if he'd ever have full use of his legs again.

The 24-year-old Corcoran said he had loved the feel of the wind rushing past him, the freedom a motorcycle had offered.

Now, these images have faded. They've been replaced with memories of horror — the sheer terror of being forced off the road by another vehicle, losing control of his cycle, crashing against a concrete road divider, and being flipped over the wall into the path of oncoming traffic.

"I remember seeing nothing but headlights, all coming at me," he said. He was hit by an oncoming car, which threw him back against the concrete dividing wall.

"It was right then and there, as I was laying against the wall, that I knew I'd never get on a motorcycle again — ever," he said.

Corcoran received extensive leg injuries. But three months after his accident, he was optimistic he would recover — maybe even completely — within the next few months.

Two soldiers assigned to a signal battalion at Fort Campbell, Ky., weren't so lucky.

After pulling to the side of a post roadway, they were struck from behind by a pickup truck, which pushed them for about 80 feet before coming to a rest at a nearby intersection.

The 20-year-old female private first class, the passenger, was killed instantly. Her 22-year-old fiance fared only slightly better: he was left with severe neck, back and leg injuries.

After a lengthy hospitalization at Fort Campbell's Blanchfield Army Community Hospital, he was given a medical discharge, his dreams of an upcoming marriage and a military career destroyed.

Motorcycle enthusiasts often point to safety precautions the victims of accidents like these might have taken to avoid tragedy.

However, the story of a 21-year-old Marine Corps corporal stationed in Pennsylvania demonstrates that no matter how controlled a situation, a motorcyclist's safety is ultimately out of his hands.

Riding along a roadway he used every day between his home and duty station, the corporal encountered an unexpected hazard — a freshly paved, but not yet smoothed, road surface.

He lost control of the cycle when, as he was rounding a turn in the road, the front tire hit a groove between the lanes. He was killed when he crashed through a fence in a residential neighborhood.

The story is particularly disturbing because it weakens many of the arguments about motorcycle safety offered by operators:

"I've attended a motorcycle safety course." The corporal was known throughout his command as one of its most safety conscious motorcyclists. He never missed his command-sponsored motorcycle safety updates and only two months earlier had completed its motorcycle safety course.

Ironically, earlier during the night he was killed, he had shown his riding partner a magazine article about a world-class motorcyclist who had been killed in a "freak" riding accident.

"I'm familiar with the roadway." The corporal was familiar with it — he traveled the road every day. However, he hadn't anticipated the hazard created by a partial road resurfacing.

"I always wear a helmet and protective clothing." The corporal was wearing a helmet, leather jacket and long pants — none of which protected him from fatal injuries.

"I always obey posted speed limits." The corporal was riding well below the 55 mile per hour speed limit when the accident occurred.

"The problem with motorcycles," Corcoran concluded from his hospital bed at the Portsmouth Naval Hospital, "is that no matter how many things you have going for you, they all have a way of working against you when you're involved in an accident. When you're on a cycle, it's you and the road — nothing in between.

"I know I never listened myself (to warnings about motorcycle safety)" he said. "But for those who ride, all I can say is, you really have to know when to ride your cycle. And you really have to know when not to — like when you'll be in heavy traffic, or when it's raining.

"Sometimes it's just a lot safer to take a taxi and leave your motorcycle parked at home."

Anti-smoking campaign cornerstone of DoD program

For the time being, you'll still be able to buy cigarettes in commissaries, post exchanges and ship's stores; but you'll be reading and hearing more often about how bad they are for your health.

Secretary of Defense Caspar W. Weinberger has ordered a sweeping health promotion and education program throughout the military services — the cornerstone of which is an aggressive anti-smoking campaign.

But he has decided to continue to allow cigarettes to be sold in military facilities. Explaining the decision in a memorandum to service secretaries, Weinberger said commissary privileges were "an old, established, and valued portion of military compensation."

Banning cigarette sales would begin "a bad precedent, since there are many products which some health authorities regard as injurious to health," Weinberger said.

According to David Newhall III, principal Assistant Secretary of Defense for Health Affairs, the campaign includes unprecedented one-on-one counseling on the harmful effects of smoking during basic training, routine and annual physical and dental examinations, and when permanent change of station moves are made.

"The secretary wants people who are now smokers to quit, and he wants to discourage people who are not smokers from becoming smokers," said Newhall.

Although a newly released Department of Defense report on smoking in the military (based on a 1985 survey) shows that the rate of smoking in the military has decreased since 1982 — it's now 47 percent versus 52 percent in 1982 — the military rate is still above the rate for the general population — around 30 percent.

The study estimated that smoking costs the military health care system $209.9 million in FY-84.

Weinberger said in the memorandum to the service secretaries that there is no intention to force changes in individual behavior, but, "For military personnel it is essential that we try to reduce smoking as much as possible, so that we can reduce both the risk and the fact of illness which could seriously reduce our readiness."

He said the anti-smoking campaign is a major responsibility of all commanders up to the highest levels of each military service and the Department of Defense.

Weinberger said he would evaluate the effectiveness of the anti-smoking campaign after a reasonable period of time. At that time, he will decide whether to change policies governing tobacco sales in commissaries and post exchanges.

Vietnam Memorial site of loving tributes

"I Miss You," reads the hand-printed note around the neck of a three-inch brown teddy bear lying in a tray in a dimly lit warehouse in Greenbelt, Md.

The tiny teddy is among some 2,000 objects that have been left at the Vietnam Veterans Memorial in Washington, D.C., since it was dedicated in November 1982. The converted warehouse is the National Park Service's Museum and Archaeological Regional Storage Facility.

These objects are gently, often tearfully, placed near the names of men and women, inscribed on the memorial's shiny black granite wall, by mothers, fathers, sisters, brothers and other relatives and friends of the dead and missing in action.

Park service officials were baffled when visitors first started leaving hundreds of objects at the memorial. Rangers put them into boxes and stored them in a maintenance shop. The objects were tagged with the date and location along the wall where they were found.

After about a year, the boxes were stacked high with hundreds of flags, dog tags, POW/MIA bracelets, photographs, ribbons, medals, plaques, inscribed cigarette lighters, personal letters, music tapes, "P-38" field ration can openers, C-rations, various religious items and even a Christmas tree and a little Santa Claus. A visitor recently left a Viet Cong straw POW hut that is about two feet wide, two feet long and two-feet tall.

"Another teddy bear was left at the memorial with a picture of the veteran's car and a card from his mother and father," said David Gynes, curator and site manager of the facility. "A total of three teddy bears have been left at the memorial."

"We really didn't know what to do with them," said spokesman Earle Kittleman. "They were considered lost and found for a few days, but no one ever asked to have them returned. I guess they left them as a tribute or token... an emotional outpouring to the names on the wall."

"Someone left a helicopter pilot's flight bag with all of the gear, including the helmet," said Park Ranger Steve Alemar. "I was afraid at first that it might be a bomb... we do get bomb threats."

"There is one lady who has left more than 20 personal letters to her son who was killed in Vietnam on Feb. 13, 1969," said Alemar, who was a seaman on the heavy cruiser USS Newport News off Vietnam when 20 sailors were killed aboard on Oct. 1, 1972.

"It finally dawned on us that the objects represented something of significance," said Kittleman. "They related to the emotional experience of what the Vietnam Veterans Memorial means. So we decided to put them in a better storage facility at the Museum and Archaeological Regional Storage Facility where we keep other historical artifacts."

The museum is also used to store artifacts from Civil War battlefields, furniture and other items from such places as the Peterson House where Abraham Lincoln died, from the Frederick Douglass house, and other items of historical value to the Maryland, Virginia and Washington, D.C., areas. There are also American Indian artifacts from the Western United States.

The museum is not open to the general public, but researchers are allowed to study the objects. Veterans are also welcome to visit the facility.

Gynes said the Vietnam era collection is unique for a museum because curators don't decide what items to include in the collection — visitors who leave the items do.

"We collect everything they leave at the memorial, except flowers," said Gynes, who is in the process of cataloging the items. "We can't keep organic matter because of the insect problem. But, we do keep messages, photographs and other items that are attached to the flowers."

Flags are left more often than any other objects. "We only keep the ones that are used as a medium for messages," said Gynes.

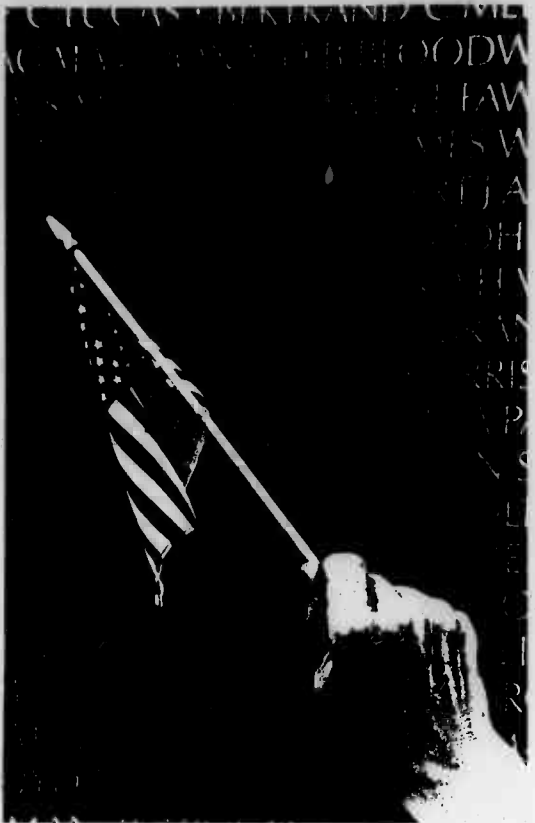

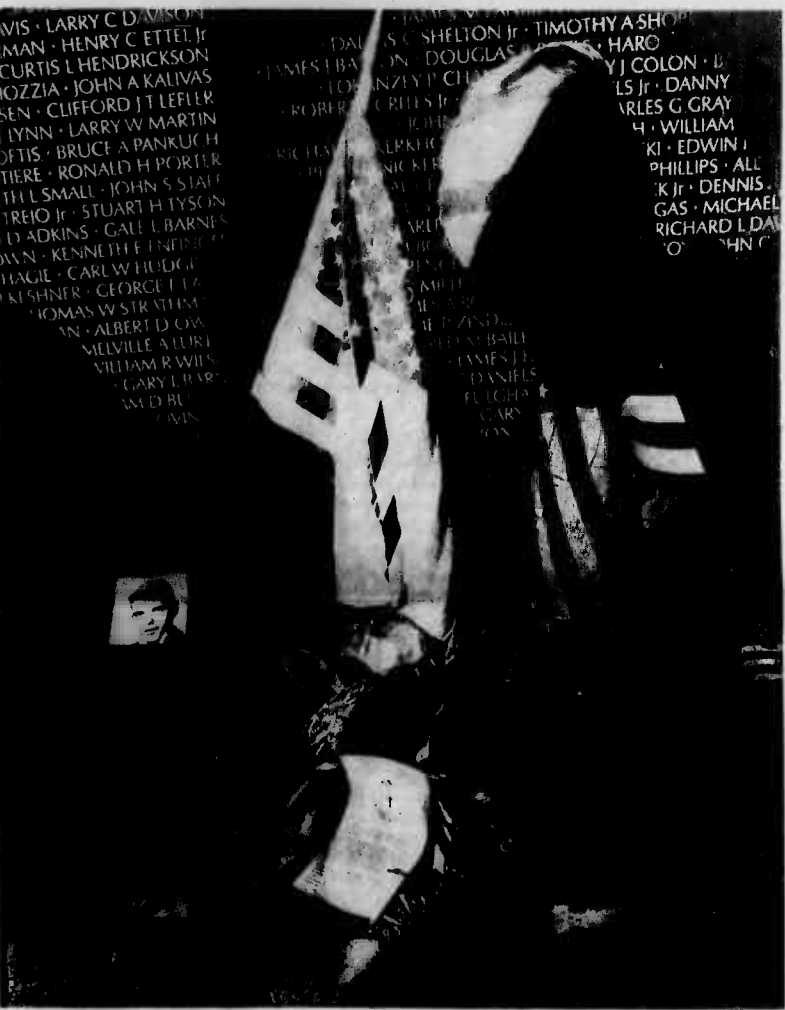

"Some people write messages in the white stripes and on the flag pole. We give the other flags to veterans organizations."

Alemar said some of the comments and actions of visitors get to him at times. "Some guys walked up to the wall, found the names of friends, took a sip out of a bottle of whiskey and poured the rest out on the ground. They said, 'We owe those guys a drink,'" said Alemar.

On another occasion, parents of one of the veterans listed on the wall visited the memorial in pouring rain and placed some flowers by one of the panels. They told the park ranger, "It's our son's birthday."

Alemar said he has tried to stop reading letters and messages people leave, but he can't resist. "It just tears you up. You're going to read those things and end up crying."

Bill Cosby tells why Red Cross needs your type of blood.

Every day of the week, there's somebody who needs your type of blood. But the thing about blood is, it doesn't keep very long. Which means we've got to keep the supply coming constantly. Donors are needed every day. Sorry to say, there are never enough donors. In fact, five people out of every 100 are doing the whole job. That's right, five percent of the people give 100 percent of the blood that's donated. If you're between 17 and 66, and generally healthy, you can help change all that. And your one blood donation can help up to five people to live. Call your Red Cross Blood Center and make a donor appointment soon. It's one way you can help keep Red Cross ready... to help others.

Keep Red Cross ready.

Retired Marines check out 'their' Corps

Weapons displays a success

Story and photos by Cpl. Stephen Frank

Patrick Sauki, a Marine veteran from the Korean War, watches Cpl. S. Meador, "K" Co., 3/3, demonstrate the features on an M203 grenade launcher.

An annual retirees luncheon, hosted by LtGen. D'Wayne Gray, commanding general, FMFPac, was held May 1 at the Air Station Officers Club, featuring a static display of weapons currently in the Marine Corps inventory.

The luncheon, according to LtCol. J. Pendergast, public affairs officer for FMFPac, is an annual event held to update retired Marines with what is happening in "their" Corps.

Before eating lunch, the retired Marines gathered around the pool to view displays with Marines from "K." Co., and their organic weapons, such as the M16A2 service rifle, M203 grenade launcher, M249 Squad Automatic Weapon, Shoulder-launched Multi-purpose Assault Weapon, 60mm mortar and .50-caliber machine gun.

Also included in the display were a sniper from STA platoon, 3/3, and a recon Marine from "A." Co., 3d Recon Bn., along with the specialized equipment they carry into the field.

The retirees were also able to see an M198 155mm howitzer and an M101A1 105mm howitzer from 1/12, a new High-mobility Multi-purpose Wheeled Vehicle from BSSG-1.

"I enjoyed the displays quite a bit," chuckled retired aviator LtCol. W. Wehster. "But this is all ground stuff, they could have towed an F/A-18 up here."

Marines from "K," Co., 3/3 (l), and retired Col. C. Kimak (r) listen as retired Col. D. Blanchard tells a "sea story" about the history of the 60mm mortar.

Your smartest move may be a lateral one.

If you're not content with your present job, if you're looking to broaden your experience, learn a new job or seeking a new challenge, a lateral move may be just what you're looking for. Every year thousands of Marines take advantage of the lateral move option.

The advantages are many. You keep building your retirement, keep increasing in rank and you're working within an organization you know something about. In short, you're not starting over. You're taking a new direction in your career.

If you don't think you qualify for a lateral move because your GT score is low, think again. You can take the test over any number of times and use only your most recent score.

Plus you're keeping your educational and medical benefits. Talk to your career planner about a lateral move.

You can count on the Corps.
