Air Station looks toward the future

Commissary may be built before 1993

By Sgt. Brad Mitzeloff

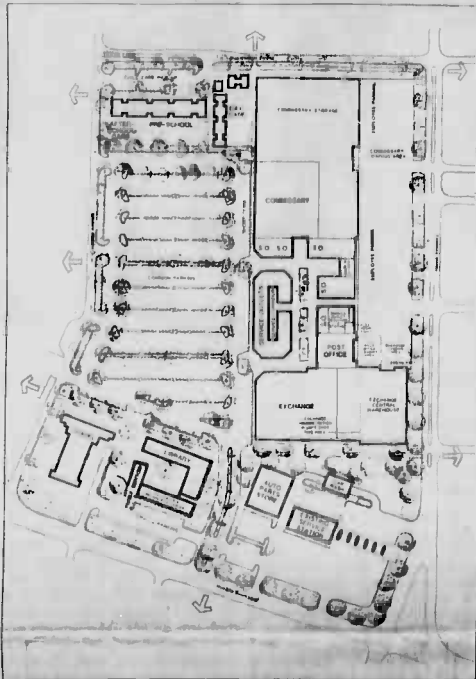

A bigger and better commissary for the Air Station may be completed by the end of fiscal year 1992 — up to seven years earlier than previously expected.

The development was made possible by aggressive campaigning by Air Station officials, the goodwill of the Air Force Commissary Service, and a plan announced April 13 by Defense Secretary Dick Cheney to even-up commissary funds and streamline operations service-wide.

As an indirect result of DoD's plan, which calls for the consolidation of all four of the services' commissary systems into one agency, the Air Force offered last week to fund, design and build a new commissary on the Air Station, according to Lt. Col. John D. Wintersteen, director of Installations and Logistics for the Air Station.

An engineer from the Air Force Commissary Service, which has been known to have commissaries constructed in less than 18 months, will survey the proposed site here later this month. Final Air Force approval may come this fall.

"The persistence on everyone's part for a Kaneohe commissary has really paid off," Joe Jau, head of the Facilities

The proposed layout of the Station Community Support Center shows its location near the automotive service station.

Services Branch at Headquarters Marine Corps, told Wintersteen during a phone conversation Friday morning.

The action is the culmination of a year of negotiations between the Marine Corps and the Air Force. During the negotiations, Defense Department representatives and a House subcommittee were busy poring over ways to reorganize the four services' commissaries, which have lately been under the shadow of the budget axe. The subcommittee considered possible solutions ranging from the outright abolishment of the commissaries to contracting of civilian gro-

During hearings between the subcommittee and military officials during March, it was determined that commissary systems with healthy finances would not build any more commissaries until all services' needs were first analyzed. As a result, a moratorium was placed on all future Army and Air Force commissary projects not currently underway — specifically, those planned in Europe.

The Marine Corps, which is only able to build one commissary about every five years, already has a commis-

Air Station's Project 2000 steams ahead

Several innovative changes are planned at Marine Corps Air Station Kaneohe Bay in the next few years, including projects that will directly affect Windward Oahu's rental housing market and business community, said Col. R.R. Critser, Station commanding officer.

Critser said the next few years will present a unique opportunity — a chance to plan and make changes that will better prepare the base and its personnel for the future, rather than to merely react to political and economic changes that affect the nation's defense budget.

"We sat down and said, 'What do we want the Air Station to look like in the year 2000?'" Critser explained. "The year 2000 is a millennium; it's not just a turn of the century. We want it to be different, and that's why we came up with Project 2000."

Critser said Project 2000, which he started developing shortly after he took command last July, is designed to affect the entire community rather than just the Air Station.

"We're looking at how we can improve our quality of life, at how we can make life better for our Marines and our civilian employees," he emphasized. "We're not dif-

Windward Family Festival slated here

JPAO

The largest island-wide event ever held on Windward Oahu will be held here July 27-29 when the Air Station and Castle Medical Center sponsor the 1990 Windward Family Festival.

Recently, the two sponsors met when representatives from Castle Medical Center presented a check for $20,000 in support of the event to Station Commander Col. R.R. Critser.

"I couldn't have chosen a co-sponsor more appropriate than Castle Medical Center," said Critser. "It's a real pleasure to be associated in this festival and with an organization that represents quality and care to Windward Oahu residents."

The three-day event will feature The Mamas and The Pappas, plus a variety of Honolulu entertainment. Water shows, regattas and boat rides, Marine Corps exhibits and demonstrations, plus the E.K. Fernandez Carnival, will round out the weekend.

Admission to the base and parking for the event is free. Admission to the Festival will be $1 for teens and adults, while children 12 and under are free. Advance tickets are good toward ride coupons and food during the festival and include a free admission ticket. Advance tickets can be purchased at all Sears ticket outlets, Marine Corps Exchange activities, and the Air Station's Information, Tour and Travel Office and Temporary Lodging Facility. Advance tickets are also available to Civilian Employee Association members.

Companies, community groups and organizations are welcome to participate in advance ticket sales by calling Bob Porter at 254-2716 or 254-2806.

The Family Festival opens July 27 at 6 p.m. with "Party Night." Entertainment for the evening includes a performance by the globe-trotting FMFPac Band, just back from a tour of Australia, and local performers Roundhouse and Portrat. There will also be a boxing smoker. Carnival activities will continue until 11:30 p.m., and plenty of Marine Corps equipment will be on display.

Gates will be open for Saturday's "Family Day" from 11 a.m. to 11:30 p.m. Clowns, a magic show and even an appearance by

Marines standing by off Liberian coast

ATLANTIC OCEAN — As rebel forces approached the Liberian capital of Monrovia, President Bush ordered an amphibious task force to stand off the Liberian coast May 31 as a precautionary measure to aid in the evacuation of American citizens.

Marines of the 22d Marine Expeditionary Unit, Camp Lejeune, N.C., are staged aboard the amphibious assault ship USS Saipan (LHA 2) and, supporting task force ships USS Ponce (LPD 16), USS Sumpter (LST 1181) and USS Peterson (DD 969) in international waters near Liberia to allow the quick deployment of the Marines if they are needed to aid in the evacuation of about 1,100 Americans in Liberia.

A reported 71 Americans, including 33 U.S. Embassy officials and their families, were flown out of the country yesterday, according to a U.S. State Department official. Approximately 70 U.S. officials and 1,200 private Americans citizens are reported still in the country.

The 2,300 members of the Mediterranean Amphibious Ready Group (MARG) will be called upon should the five-month rebellion against President Samuel Doe close normal exit routes.

The State Department advised U.S. citizens to leave the West African country due to the unstable conditions and threat to the safety of Americans there. A DoD spokesman added that the MARG will play no role in the Liberian conflict and is strictly a contingency to ensure the safe exit of Americans.

Rebel troops were reported within 25 miles of Monrovia May 31, and an attack on a United Nations office by masked gunmen the day before killed one U.N. guard. More than 1,000 Liberians have reportedly been killed during the rebellion.

Liberia, roughly the size of Tennessee, has an estimated population of two million. It was formed as a republic in 1847 by freed American black slaves who migrated to the West African coast.

News In Brief

Weapons Co., 1/3 to march in parade

The 74th Annual King Kamehameha Celebration Floral Parade will be held Saturday starting at 9:30 a.m. from the intersection of King and Richard Streets in downtown Honolulu. A platoon of Marines from Weapons Co., 1st Bn., 3d Marines, will be representing MCAS Kaneohe Bay.

SAT cancelled

No SAT answer sheets will be scored between July 31 and Sept. 19. Anyone needing an SAT score report before Nov. 1 should take the SAT by July and make sure that answer sheets are received at the Educational Testing Service no later than the end of July. During the no scoring period, system changes will be made to accommodate the 1990-91 forms. Accordingly, the SAT review class scheduled for June 30-July 28 with testing on July 30 has been re-scheduled to begin June 23-July 21 with testing on July 23. The August 13 test date has been cancelled. For more information, call the Joint Education Center at 254-1703/2901.

$50, $75 series savings bonds to be cancelled

Effective Oct. 1, $50 and $75 Series EE savings bonds will no longer be issued to participants in payroll savings plans, according to the U.S. Treasury Department. For DoD civilian employees, all $50 and $75 bonds will be cancelled as of the pay period ending Sept. 22. Participants currently enrolled for $50 and $75 bonds are encouraged to cancel their enrollment and enroll for larger denomination bonds by submitting Form SHD 1928.

Reflections of a bright future

Identical twin sergeants working their way up

It was a cold winter day in late October 1963, when Elaine Buzenbark realized that the big day had finally arrived. After nearly a month of bed rest, it was time to deliver the twins.

Albert, the first of the two to be born, didn't make his entrance into the world until after midnight. Alan followed his brother's lead eight minutes later and from there on out, the Buzenbark brothers have stuck together.

Right after high school, they headed off to Marine boot camp, then Aviation Devices School, together. From there, they both managed to get stationed at MCAS El Toro, Calif. In fact, the two sergeants, who both work for MALS-24's Power Plant section here, have spent seven of the eight years they've been in the Corps together.

Now, they're both headed off to the University of Oregon as part of the Marine Enlisted Commissioning Education Program.

"If all goes well," said Albert, "we'll attend (The) Basic School together also."

Many say the two are inseparable. The Buzenbarks say it's a little more complicated than that. "We have our similarities and we have our differences," said Alan. The combination, they both say, is just right, and they hope they'll be together throughout their careers.

"They have always gotten along very well," said their mother. "They're competitive, but it hasn't gotten in the way of their friendship."

While she couldn't think of many differences in their personalities, she said if anything, Alan has been the more dominant of the two.

"It was Alan's idea to join the Marine Corps. He'd been thinking about it for a couple of years before he enlisted," she explained. Albert decided to stick with his brother and give the Corps a try as well.

It was also Alan who first thought of becoming an officer. "He had wanted to do that from the very start," said his mom. But he wasn't prepared to send in a package for several years. When the time finally came, Albert had also amassed a respectable record book and a number of college classes. So he, too, decided to go for MECEP.

Although their identical careers had largely been pre-planned, much credit is due to fate. They both chose the same military occupational specialty, so they were both shipped off to Aviation Devices School in Memphis, Tenn., after boot camp. But after that, there was no telling where they'd go.

"Toward the end of school," explained Albert, "I went into the Top's office. He was on the phone to Headquarters Marine Corps, and apparently, the monitor was saying he needed two bodies to go to El Toro."

"He looks at me and says, 'Hey, you wanna go to El Toro?' — Sure, Top."

"That's when I happened along," said Alan, finishing the story as they both smiled. "He needed one more body, so I volunteered, and that easily, we got stationed together."

Although Albert spent his first four years at El Toro, Alan served a one-year tour in Iwakuni, Japan, between 1967 and '68.

It was the first time the "dynamic duo" had been separated — ever.

By this time, Albert was already a husband of four years and had just recently become a father. His wife, Laurie, said that being away from his brother definitely affected Albert.

"I think he was really used to competing with Alan," she said. "When Alan left, he started competing with me instead." She added that, in general, Albert was a lot quieter than that year, and wasn't his usual happy self.

Alan recalled that he, too, missed being away from his brother that year.

Albert received orders to Kaneohe Bay in the summer of 1988, shortly after Alan's return to the States. Alan was due for orders within the next six months. He and his brother set to work convincing their monitor at Headquarters Marine Corps to send him to Hawaii as well. Whatever the reason, their plan worked out and Alan arrived on the island toward the close of that year.

Since then, the two Ma-

rine's have been working side by side. Those who supervise them say Alan and Albert are perfect Marines and perfect friends.

"I can't ever recall those two getting into an argument," said MSgt. Clark Fields, the Power Plant NCOIC. "They have always been pretty competitive, though, but not in a bad way. They push each other to constantly try harder. It's like a challenge."

Fields said the brothers not only get along well with each other, but with everybody. Said Fields: "They are very much alike in that they are both very easy going, and both go out of their way to help other people."

SSgt. Mike Undo, their direct supervisor, has known them for about a year. Like Fields, he can see the sibling rivalry, and agrees that they don't ever let it get out of hand. He also feels that they're almost identical in terms of personality.

Albert's wife, Laurie, doesn't agree. Unless someone brings up the fact that they're twins, she doesn't even think of them that way. "Albert's much quieter than Alan," she said. "That's why I was attracted to Albert in the first place; he's more like me."

She said that they knew each other for a long time before they started going out.

"He was a senior in high school, and I was a freshman in college. I used to sit behind them in church, but we didn't get to know each other until late that year."

Curiously, it was Alan, not Albert, who kissed her first. "Their friends all thought that it was Alan who liked me, and at a prom, they set it up for Alan and me to be paired up as the winners in a contest. Part of the rules were that he had to kiss me," she recalled, laughing. "Albert and I were just getting to know each other, but Laurie took the wrong man by the arm.

"(Albert and Alan) were walking side by side just ahead of us. Laurie raced up and took her future brother-in-law by the arm, thinking it was Albert. Alan didn't mind, so he didn't say a word." After a couple of moments, Albert pointed out her error.

"That was not the only time she'd made the mistake. Once before, while at a shopping mall near El Toro, she again came up from behind, and this time took about that as well."

Because Albert and Alan spent a lot of time together, as did Albert and Laurie, the three of them ended up being together quite a bit. Laurie said that this didn't put any strain on their marriage at all. Having gotten to know them both very well over the years, she just doesn't think of them as twins.

Albert's getting married didn't hurt the twins' relationship, they both agree, but it furthered the differences in their personalities.

"It's hard to pin-point, but I think the responsibility of being a husband and a father made me more conservative, while Alan remained his usual spontaneous self," Albert said.

From looking at the two now, one can definitely tell they're twins, but it's easy to distinguish between them. Albert is more muscular than his brother. Their fellow Marines joke that instead, since Albert is married, he has "fattened up." The twins say Albert's size comes from weightlifting, while Alan is more of an avid runner.

Although today Alan is slim, single and spontaneous, he is engaged. Perhaps he, too, will settle down, get more conservative, and even get "fattened up" a bit when he wed.

Then there will truly be no telling them apart.

hadn't really gone out on a date yet. That didn't help things much."

Regardless, nature took its course, and the two were engaged after Albert came back from boot camp. They married in 1983.

While Laurie contests that she sees many differences between the two, she will never live down the boot camp graduation story. According to their mom, Alan by the hand. "Ah...honey, I'm over here," Albert said. Of course, they teased her about it.

"It was dark," Laurie said. "I had bent down to tie my shoe, and not noticing, Albert kept going. Alan, on the other hand, stopped a few paces ahead and waited. I just assumed it was Albert. It really wasn't any big deal, but they gave me a hard time

Cobra Gold training: It's a jungle out there

3/3 Marines teach tactics, learn survival

RAYONG, Thailand — Much of the combat U.S. troops have encountered in the last half-century has taken place in jungle environments, from the World War II island-hopping campaigns in the Pacific to Vietnam.

Part of the training during Thai Incremental Training Program 90-2 here included U.S. Marines of Co. I, 3d Bn., 3d Marine, receiving instruction from the Royal Thai Marines on jungle survival. After more than one week of classes from the U.S. Marines on weapons and tactics, the Thais reciprocated with instruction on their environment.

Co. I Marines gathered around as the Thais began with a demonstration of several native plants and how they should be prepared for consumption.

Numerous plants common to the Thais were shown to the Marines. They were taught which parts of the plants were edible and what precautions should be taken before eating them. For instance, the Thai instructor explained that some vines can be cut to drink the water that flows from them. However, only vines with a clear liquid should be consumed, and if one touches his mouth to the vine while drinking, he can get sick.

Next, the Thais brought out several small animal traps and snares, demonstrating how each worked. When the demonstration was complete, the Thais explained how to prepare the animals in the field for eating. They showed how to kill and clean frogs and lizards found in the jungle.

The class also showed how to prepare fowl, and using a chicken as an example, the Thais showed how to prepare birds without the aid of weapons or tools. Wringing the neck of the chicken so hard that it came off, the Thais then skinned and cleaned it by hand.

1.Cpl. Joseph Ceglinski of 2d Platoon was impressed by the field stripping of the chicken, stating that he learned a lot from the class.

The Thais saved the most exciting and dangerous demonstration for last. For the duration of the classes, there were three ammunition boxes set aside which were punched full of air holes. In each of the boxes was a snake, two of which were cobras.

The first snake they brought out was a water snake, which are abundant in Thailand. The Thais explained that though its bite is painful, it's not poisonous.

One of the Thai Marines carefully used a stick to prod one of the cobra boxes, and many Marines got their first look at the deadly snake.

For the next half hour, the U.S. Marines watched intently as the Thais showed how to catch and control the cobras, which were about five feet long. The instructors explained that when the cobras cock their head back and widen their neck, they are prepared to strike. A U.S. Marine was then selected to handle the cobra.

Cpl. John Dreckmann, 1st Platoon guide, said he had been through survival school before, but the Thai classes had many interesting topics, especially working with the cobras.

Project outlines future Station life

ferent; we're part of this state. We suffer with everybody and everything that affects this state."

One of the major changes slated for the project is in the area of housing. Critser said there are plans to build houses on the base using private sector funding and private sector contractors, a new concept which he said was recently introduced on a few bases on the Mainland.

Personnel will simply rent the houses from the private developer. Then, after roughly a 30-year contractual period, the housing will probably be turned over to the government. Rent for the two-bedroom homes is targeted at about $950.

In addition, construction for an additional 40 government-funded units are scheduled to start before the end of the year, Critser said.

Critser added that Marines and Navy personnel are currently competing for rental housing in Windward communities, and that the addition of even 40 homes on base will help loosen up the rental market in Kaneohe and Kailua.

"We have to be innovative, and bringing in the private sector is one of the ways to do that," he said. "Whatever we do, we look at it like we're also helping the state. We're trying to bring the community in on our planning because we can't separate ourselves from problems that affect the community."

One of the more significant changes planned for Project 2000 is a plan to build a temporary lodging facility at the Air Station for incoming military personnel and their families. Critser said these people currently must find lodging in Waikiki while they are looking for somewhere on the island to live — and sometimes the stay can last up to 90 days.

The facility, which will be similar to the Hale Koa Hotel in Waikiki, will eliminate the need for transient personnel to commute every day to the Air Station for work, he said. And it also will help them avoid the high cost of living in Waikiki while bringing their shopping expenditures over to the Kaneohe and Kailua business communities, he pointed out.

"We're looking at building a 100-150-unit complex that will improve the quality of life for our people when they first get here," Critser explained. "It'll be open for all personnel, coming and going."

Critser said a feasibility study has already been completed for the temporary lodging facility, and he hopes to see it up and operating within the next three years.

Another area in which the Air Station is looking to be innovative is in child development. Critser said the Air Station is earmarking funds generated from the exchange and other sources to develop a state-of-the-art child development center by the year 2000.

"The program here was totally inadequate because of the increasing number of young children and because both parents have to work," he explained. "But we're starting to be innovative in that area, too." He said he already has contracted child development professionals to start an "in-home" child care program on the base.

Critser said Project 2000 also includes an aggressive plan to increase the Air Station's retail capabilities by improving programs like the exchange center and commissary.

The plan includes a "Community Support Center," which may be partially built by the end of fiscal year 1992 into the rest of the block where the base automotive service station is currently located. The center will include a new commissary with a built-in cold and dry storage facility (see related story) along with a new Main Exchange, chapel, post office, and child care center.

"We want to increase the standard of living for our Marines and sailors and also the Windward community members who use our facilities," he said. "Congress has told us to run our bases more like a business, and I couldn't agree with them more."

"We have to be innovative, and bringing in the private sector is one way to do that."

DOUGLAS MACARTHUR

The Far Eastern General

by MICHAEL SCHALLER

352 pp.; photos paper $10.95

With his chiseled face, corn-cob pipe, and a voice that "could trumpet and drum," General MacArthur looked the part of a "heaven born general." Graduating first in his class at West Point, he headed straight for the top by commanding the Allied Forces in the Pacific during World War II and eventually becoming arguably the best-known and most flamboyantly American military leader of the twentieth century. In this eye-opening book, Michael Schaller sets the record straight by examining MacArthur and the two decades he spent in the Far East from a revisionist perspective. Far from presenting a flattering portrait, Schaller reveals a man driven by talent, opportunism, vision, egotism, and jealousy, and along the way offers fresh insights into American foreign policy in Asia during those years.

"[An] important new biography... Well-documented." — Army

"A refreshingly candid portrait of the old soldier.... Thought provoking." — Far Eastern Economic Review

"The flawless thematologizing of a complex, dangerous, and ultimately fascinating man." — The Detroit News

Help your child say 'nope' to dope

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The Office for Substance Abuse Prevention offers the following list to help your child say "No" to alcohol, tobacco and other drugs.

- 1. Talk to your child about alcohol and other drugs. You can help change ideas your child may have that "everybody drinks, smokes, or uses drugs."
- 2. Learn to really listen to your child. Your child is more likely to talk with you when you give verbal and non-verbal cues to show that you are listening.
- 3. Help your child feel good about himself. Your child will feel good when you praise efforts, as well as accomplishments, and when you correct by criticizing the action rather than the child.
- 4. Help your child develop strong values. A strong value system can give your child

- the courage to say "No" rather than listen to coaxing friends.
- 5. Be a good role model and set a good example. Your habits and attitudes may strongly influence your child's ideas about alcohol, tobacco and other drugs.
- 6. Help your child deal with peer pressure. A child who has been taught to be gentle and loving may need your "permission" to say

- "No" to negative peer pressure.
- 7. Make family rules. It's helpful when you make specific family rules about your child not using tobacco, alcohol or drugs. And it's helpful to tell your child the punishment for breaking rules.
- 8. Encourage healthy, creative activities. Hobbies, school events, and other activities may prevent your - child from using tobacco, alcohol, and drugs out of boredom.

- 9. Team up with other parents. You can join other parents in support groups to reinforce the guidance you provide at home.
- 10. Know what to do if you suspect a problem. You can learn to recognize the signs of drug use and get help. Help is available from the Joint Drug and Alcohol Center here at 254-1115.

Retirees with 20 years may get less than they expect

The Scout
MCB Camp Pendleton, Calif.

Camp Pendleton — Retiring from the military is a pleasant thought to many, but for the unprepared or misinformed it can be quite a disappointment.

One of the misunderstandings about retiring from the armed forces is that service members can retire with only 20 years of active service and continue to receive half their base pay as retirement income.

For full retirement, however, Marines must serve a full 30 years. Those Marines who have more than 20 years but less than 30, are placed on the Fleet Marine Corps Reserve list.

For years, it was easy for Marines in the "fleet reserve" planning a non-disability retirement to determine the amount of retired/retainer pay they would receive for their active military service. It started at 50 percent for 20 years service and went up with each month of service thereafter.

Within the past few years, however, the Department of Defense has had to make some major changes to its retirement system.

As a result, determining the amount of ones retired/retainer pay now depends on when the Marine became a member of the armed forces, using the individual's pay entry base date for pay calculations.

Retirement/retainer pay for most Marines currently serving is governed by the Military Pay Act of Aug. 10, 1946. Marines who serve 30 or more years can expect to get 75 percent of their base pay as retirement income.

Marines transferring to the FMCR with more than 20 years but less than 30 can determine their retainer pay multiplier by multiplying the number of years and any fractional year of service or active constructive service by 2.5 (.025) percent.

Any fractional year must be converted to a decimal equivalent and added to the number of years of active/constructive service.

For example, a Marine with 23 years and eight months of service would convert the fractional year by dividing the number of months by 12. Eight months divided by 12 equals .66, so the Marine served 23.66 years of active service.

Multiply this fractional figure by 2.5 percent to get the retired/retainer pay multiplier (example: 23.66 x .025 = .5915). Then multiply the pay multiplier by the monthly basic pay of grade in which the Marine will be retiring or transferred to the FMCR.

In 1981, the Department of Defense implemented a second method of calculating retired/retainer pay for any member of the armed forces whose PEBD falls between Sept. 8, 1980 and July 31, 1986.

This method determines the retired/retainer pay on the basis of the Marines highest three years of basic pay. This is commonly referred to as the "High-3" method, and it lessens the amount of pay the member receives.

With this method, compute the retired/retainer pay multiplier by multiplying the number of years and any fractional years of active service by 2.5 percent. This factor cannot exceed 75 percent of the basic pay.

Then determine the average monthly basic pay received during your highest three years of active service, normally the last three.

Multiply this amount by the Marine's retired/retainer pay multiplier to compute the amount of pay to be received.

The Military Reform Act of 1986, again changed the way retirement/retainer pay is computed for those who first joined after Aug. 1, 1986.

The new method significantly reduces the amount of retirement income service members can expect for service less than 30 years, but increases at age 62 by recomputing the entitlement.

This system was implemented to encourage Marines to remain on active service entitled to retired pay based on 75 percent of the basic pay.

However, for Marines transferring the FMCR, the amount of active service will determine their retainer pay multiplier with a base of 40 percent of 20 years of service.

Add 3.5 percent for each additional year beyond 20, and add .3 percent for those months which will add up to a full year. (example: a Marine with 22 years and two months of active service would be computed as such: add the base of 40 percent to 7 percent for the two additional years, and add another 6 percent for the two additional months which, equals 47.6 percent.)

Then determine the average monthly basic pay received during the highest three years of active duty, same as in method two.

Multiply this average amount by the retired/retainer pay multiplier.

When Marines reach the age of 62, retired pay is recomputed using method 1 as explained earlier.

All retired/retainer pay is subject to state and federal income tax, however, state income tax is not always automatically withheld. Check with the local state tax commissioner concerning withholding taxes.

COCAINE ADDICTS COME IN ALL SHAPES AND SIZES

A baby is born with no arms or legs.

An infant is delivered a month premature and several pounds underweight. It dies three days later.

In both cases, cocaine is the cause. But the mothers are to blame.

Because a woman who takes cocaine passes the drug directly to her unborn child. Increasing the possibility of birth defects. Raising the incidence of emotional problems and strokes. And even addicting the infant to cocaine.

Cocaine use during pregnancy can also lead to miscarriages and premature births.

Even pregnant women who only take cocaine once can produce babies with impairments such as irritability and constant trembling.

Simply put, women who use cocaine are granting their children a deprived birthright:

The symptoms of drug addiction.

If you have friends or family who use cocaine (or might), give them a rough time. Because if you don't, it's certain the drug will.

SNCO Tourney

72 hit the links

Bud Brown, who claimed the Championship Flight low gross trophy, tees off.

Story and photos by Cpl. Jason Erickson

The 17th Annual Staff NCO Golf Tournament kicked off May 26 as the sun still hovered above the eastern shore line at the Klipper Golf Course. In the afternoon hours of Memorial Day, two days and 54 holes later, the last of the linksmen walked off the 18th green and the competition was over.

For some of the 72 participants, it was a chance to claim some "booty." For others, it was a reminder that the ball doesn't always land where it's supposed to. But for most, it was an excuse to play some golf with friends, tell some tall tales and enjoy the three-day weekend.

The golfers were separated into four different flights, according to their handicap.

Since prizes were awarded to the top three low net and low gross finishers in each flight, not to mention the holder of the overall lowest net score, the presentation of "booty" at the awards banquet May 28 was a lengthy process.

Mike Nitzel walked away as the Tournament Champion, with the overall low net of 200. This honor is awarded to the Staff NCO with the lowest card. Nitzel beat out his fellow Staff NCOs, and also beat out the other participants in the tournament.

Of all the flights, the tension in the Championship group was the most intense as 15 scratch-through-nine handicap players clawed for low gross. Bud Brown carded the lowest series with an overall 224. His three handicap adjusted his overall net card to 215 and tied him for third low net with Kerry Hunt. Hunt stocked up 236 strokes unadjusted, which left him short of placing in the low gross competition.

Jim Garvey began his final day only one stroke behind Brown, but picked up two more in his last round, and had to settle for second low gross. Charlie Allen carded the most consistent series of the group with a 76 in the first and back-to-back 77s in the second and third rounds, to land himself the third-place low gross birth. Kris Kramer with a 212 and Chuck Woodruff with a 214 nabbed first and second low net honors.

The A Flight comprised 25 linksmen with 10 through 14 handicaps. The competition was not quite as intense as the Championship Flight, but the bid for low net and gross was the closest in the tournament. Sudden-death playoffs decided both winners. Xavier Ching was in both of these. Ching carded a 243 to tie John Arruda for low gross. His net total of 204 also put him in the bid for low net with P. Faatin. Ching was able to outdo Arruda in one hole of sudden death, but lost low net to Faatin after two holes.

Third low gross in the A Flight went to Joe Carpenito with a 245, while third low net was claimed by Arruda who adjusted to a 215.

The B Flight champion was Bob Gonsalves, who took low net and low gross with a 255 card, and a net of 204. He was followed closely by Clyde Prior who also carded a 255, but had a net three strokes higher than Gonsalves. Paul Schmedding, with a 257/209, and Randy Vlasers, with a 258/210, were also close in the race.

Mike Nitzel took the low net in the C Flight as well as his award of Tournament Champion. Dan Shinder took the low gross honors with a 262. He managed second low net with a 202, while Nitzel managed second low gross with a 275. Bill Lucenta took third low gross and low net with a 279/204.

There was one last flight. This was comprised of sponsors, people whose help made the whole thing happen. Although only four players competed, the top three were still awarded prizes. Larry Byrne with a 236 for the tournament took low gross. His net score of 215 also won him low net. Bill Neal, meanwhile, won second in both categories with a 241/217. Third in both went to P. Kehagias with a 242/219. Tournament Director Bob Robles said that the tournament was started to build camaraderie amongst local golfers. Although hosted by Staff NCOs, it's open to all ranks, as well as civilian employees aboard the station and retired military service members.

David Dover watches his putt approach the cup.

Beat Hickam 6-5 in final game

Story and photos by Lt. Col. G. Pozner Smith

The K-Bay "Bandits" girls softball team (10, 11 and 12 year-olds) culminated an outstanding season with the one victory that really counted — the championship.

With the MALS-24 "Bandits" taking the Intramural softball crown in May, it's turning out to be a good year for teams named "Bandits." Led by pitcher Monica Gomez and shortstop Jina King, the Bandits came from behind to edge the Hickam "Banana Splits" 6-5 Saturday in the Hawaii Youth Softball League championship at Hickam Air Force Base. The Bandits finished the year at 15-2.

ciently throughout the day. Her repeated on-the-mark tosses accounted for a large percentage of Banana Split outs.

Coach Jim Sheppard grabbed the game ball, and amid the girls' cheers of victory, chucked the melon high over the diamond. "Do you know what you are, girls?" he asked. "You're the state champs."

Despite playing an earlier game, the Bandits showed no signs of weariness in the final. After falling behind in the early innings, the Bandits mounted a comeback with stubborn defense and peppy singles.

One play in particular summed up the game. With girls on first and second, the Hickam batter faced a low liner at Gomez, who calmly caught it and in one fluid motion doubled the runner up with a crisp throw to first baseman Kristi Munson. The double play ended the inning and the Hickam threat.

But it was symbolic that the last out of the game came from King, who scooped a grounder and threw to first, beating the runner by ten yards. King shored up the third to second hole efficiently throughout the day. Her repeated on-the-mark tosses accounted for a large percentage of Banana Split outs.

Coach Patty Prosser said the team had to come together to win the title, and were led by MVP shortstop Geri Pancoast, Most Valuable Offensive Player Chris Smith, third baseman, and Most Valuable Defensive Player Amy Rautman, left-center fielder.

"They realized it would take the whole team to win," she said, "and they did."

Touch of Class finished the season at 10-3.

Born on the Fourth of July — Tom Cruise, William Dafoe (R). Supposedly a true story, most of this movie is Ollie Stone's anti-military fantasy. Ron Kovic was a Marine who was crippled in Vietnam, and returned to join left-wing causes. But most of the events portrayed in the movie did not happen. Read the book.

Monday
House Party — Kid N Play, Full Force (R). The on-going rap sensation is the basis of the all-black musical comedy about three teenagers who turn their house upside down.

Tuesday
Batman — Michael Keaton, Jack Nicholson (PG-13). Based on the comic "The Dark Knight," millionaire Bruce Wayne battles bad guys, a painful childhood memory, and the dark side of himself.
