Arrival

Homecoming push continues

First came the ground-pounders, then the air warriors, and now combat service support troops have started making their way home.

They were met at Hangar 105 Tuesday night by what has become a familiar sight around these parts: tears of joy and hollering crowds of happy families and friends. But, for this group of 393 men and women, as with more than 4,000 other Hawaii-based Marines and sailors who've returned from the war in recent weeks, the sight was anything but familiar.

In fact, in the words of Cpl. George Elerd of Brigade Service Support Group-1, "it was the greatest thing I can ever remember seeing."

Elerd not only came home to the hugs and kisses of the wife and kids he left behind, he was also met by his 2-month-old daughter Naylia for the first time. Wife, Carole, his 5-year-old son Christopher and 3-year-old daughter, Nyashia, stood close by as Elerd held his newborn in a long embrace.

As his wife wiped tears from her eyes, Elerd said that he'd gotten pictures of his baby while he was in the desert, but those couldn't replace the feeling of holding her for the first time. It was something he said he really couldn't describe.

In their joyous moment, the Elerds seemed oblivious to those experiencing re-unions of their own all around them. Others were still straining their eyes and necks to pick their Marine or sailor out of the crowd.

In what must have been a difficult task, people did their best to find friends and loved ones as they filed off buses, funneled into the hangar and got swallowed up by the crowd.

The majority of these returning Persian Gulf War veterans were with Brigade Service Support Group-1. However, they were joined by 58 Company B, 7th Communications Battalion Marines and sailors, and 13 others from Headquarters, 1st Marine Expeditionary Brigade.

Although a small advance party from BSSG arrived home on an earlier flight, Tuesday night's group represents Kaneohe's first large contingent of returning combat service support troops. Ground troops from the 3d Marine Regiment led off the homecoming push March 9, while the first aircraft squadrons began their return March 14.

LtCol. Ernest Beinhart, BSSG executive officer, told news media that his troops had performed superbly during their deployment and explained that the group did not remain together during Operations Desert Shield/Storm. BSSG was attached to 1st Force Service Support Group from Camp Pendleton, Calif. Its assets were used as needed by the Force in various detachments throughout the duration of the operations.

Several troops from Hawaii had played a key role in the off-load of the Maritime Prepositioning Ships that supplied Marine forces in Saudi Arabia at the beginning of the deployment.

But their work had only begun once the ships were emptied of their store. From the time when Marine forces first moved north to take positions in the desert, to the end of the four-day ground assault that routed the Iraqi Army, BSSG-1 Marines were right behind the Corps' ground forces, providing crucial combat service support. The coalition's ability to keep its forces in good stock with "beans and bullets," was said by Allied Forces Commander Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf to have been essential to victory. And even as these warriors set foot on Hawaiian soil, many of their BSSG comrades continue their important work in South West Asia.

But Sgt. Julie Brann and her husband SSgt. Jeffery Brann didn't seem to be thinking too much about the operation as they hugged and kissed for the first time in several months. Julie deployed to Saudi Arabia with BSSG-1 only weeks after her husband returned from a six-month pump to the Philippines with Marine Medium Helicopter Squadron 364. One of only a handful of female Marines who returned Tuesday, Brann was all smiles to be home, as was her husband to have her back.

They said they've got a lot of time to catch up on, and they don't intend to waste any getting started.

Said Jeffery: "Who knows which one of us will get deployed next, or when for that matter, so we're gonna make the most of whatever time we have together."

They, like most other Marines and sailors with families waiting at the Hangar, didn't spend a whole lot of time hanging around once they picked up their personal gear and turned in their weapons. Homecoming is celebrated best at home.

Sgt. Julie Brann is welcomed home with a tight hug by her husband SSgt. Jeffery Brann.

Oahu sieged by rain, Air Station fares well

Hawaii Marine Staff Writer

Last week's 10 to 15 inches of heavy rain dumped upwards of $20 million damage on Oahu, but the Air Station fared well and suffered only minor problems.

Other portions of Oahu were not so lucky. According to Honolulu Advertiser reports, 11-year-old David Levin of Kailua became the only casualty of the storm when he was sucked into a drain while playing with friends near the seventh fairway of the Mid-Pacific Country Club, March 23.

Meanwhile, damage here was limited to leaky roofs, some minor landscaping losses and a slight mud-slide behind the Child Development Center, according to GYSgt. Jordan, Station Inspector's Office.

He credits the speedy response of Facilities, Military Police and Inspector personnel for minimizing the problems.

"We were able to react immediately," Jordan said. "We had all available people blocking-off flooded roads and keeping storm drains clear of debris quickly enough to stop any heavy buildup of water. Most Air Station residents kept a low profile and stayed indoors during the heavy portions of the storm March 19, 20 and 23, which, Jordan said, also helped minimize problems.

Honolulu City Public Works Director Sam Callejo said most of the $20 million in damages involves private property, and doesn't include damage to state property, according to the Advertiser. Additionally, residents of three Pearl City homes had to be airlifted from their rooftops when their residences were swept away by floods into Waiawa Stream.

While weather services are reporting the storm has most likely run its course, it wouldn't be a bad idea to keep an umbrella handy.

This player came prepared for the showers that accompanied opening day for the Youth Baseball League, but the ceremonies and games were both cancelled.

News In Brief

Parts of Kaneohe Bay Drive unsafe for runners

Due to construction, a portion of west-bound Kaneohe Bay Drive is dangerous for runners, according to the Joint Safety Center. The area across from Kailua Waste Water Treatment Plant is under construction, and the north shoulder of the road is currently blocked by barricades and cones. Runners travelling along the shoulder of the westbound lanes are eventually channeled by the barricades into vehicle traffic.

Contribute yellow ribbon for Station fence

As part of the Station's decorations for Desert Storm personnel's homecoming, yellow ribbons are being tied on the chain-link fence around the main gate. Those interested in helping the effort may write the name of a deployed Marine or sailor on a yellow ribbon at the Enlisted Spouses' Center (building 220) from 8 a.m. - 5 p.m. Call 254-5214 for more information.

Deep puddles formed in several spots around the Station, as shown by this motorist making his way through a river that formed on the road running past the aircraft hangars.

Phone crews also found themselves in the rain, working on lines damaged by the storm.

This wet young lady suggests that at least one person preferred standing in the rain.

Facilities workers donned rain gear and did their best to keep storm drains clear, but it was an underwater battle.

Soviet changes cause rethinking on defense

By F. Peter Wigginton

American Forces Information Service
Some recent events in Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union are giving the United States and other Western countries a reason to rethink their national security strategies. But Defense Secretary Dick Cheney recently told the House Armed Services Committee that other events are causing growing concern for stability of the region.

Several incidents have occurred in Eastern Europe during the past year that can lead to peace and a new world order, said Cheney. Democratic regimes have been elected; Moscow accepted German unification in NATO. The Soviet Union agreed to withdraw its troops from Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Germany. The Soviets reduced general purpose forces at home, and they joined with the international community in supporting the United Nations Security Council's resolutions condemning the Iraqi aggression in the Persian Gulf.

He added, however, that troubling diplomatic, economic, political and military events need watching. Diplomatically, he said, the United States has serious unresolved differences with Moscow over the Conventional Forces in Europe agreement, and there still is no resolution on the Strategic Arms Reduction Talks.

Last October, the Soviet government rejected the most serious economic reform program proposed to date, and since then has stepped further away from economic reform, added Cheney. He contended Soviet political reform has suffered several blows, including military pressure applied to freely elected governments in the Baltic states, a campaign attacking press freedoms and a decree establishing joint internal security police-Army patrols.

"So long as the Soviets pursue this path, they will face further economic decline and continued political unrest," said Cheney.

Cooperation between the United States and the Soviet Union depends on the latter's domestic reform, the secretary continued, and experience shows that U.S. relations are driven by how the Soviet Union governs itself. The United States wants Soviet reforms to succeed, he said; the failure of the reforms will prevent across-the-board cooperation.

The secretary asked: What does this mean as far as U.S. long-term defense needs are concerned? If the Soviet Union rejects reform, its military will be hurt by the same economic troubles gripping other sectors of society, Cheney believes. However, the military will continue to play an important role, with some elements, such as Soviet strategic force modernizations, continuing unabated.

Even though the Soviet military remains the largest armed force on the European continent, the threat of a short-warning, global war starting in Europe remains less likely than at any time in the last 46 years, continued Cheney. He believes the USSR will continue withdrawing its forces from Eastern Europe.

"The withdrawals from Hungary and Czechoslovakia are well on the way to completion, and despite some recent difficulties, we anticipate that withdrawal from Germany and Poland will be completed sometime thereafter," he said. "The Warsaw Pact, as an effective military organization, is dead."

Cheney said U.S. strategy must take into account the uncertain outcome of Soviet unrest and the massive Soviet capabilities that will remain for the foreseeable future. But, he noted, the United States need no longer focus its defense strategy primarily on the threat of a Soviet-led aggression that would engulf Europe and probably much of the world.

Rather, he said, the U.S. strategy will be based on the positive trends in the Soviet Union and the Third World. The United States can structure its active and reserve forces to meet regional conflicts that threaten its interests. These threats are made more dangerous by the number of Third World countries with formidable conventional forces, ballistic missiles and weapons with chemical, biological and nuclear potential.

The goal remains to deter aggression against the United States, its allies and its interests; America invests in defense not to go to war, but to preserve peace, he said. His major elements of the new U.S. defense strategy include maintaining a mix of survivable offensive nuclear forces and a structure of forces that could be quickly mobilized and deployed.

Marriage: Good Marine qualities can hamper marital success

By Cpt. Jason Erickson
Hawaii Marine Staff Writer

The qualities that make good Marines do not always make good marital partners. Military separations create great hardships for families, and marriage, in or out of the Corps, means a lifetime of compromise.

This was the bad news passed on by Owen Norton of the Family Service Center here during a recent interview. But he was not without good news. Effective communication can and does do wonders to alleviate problems, he said.

Norton, a clinical social worker with nearly 10 years experience serving Air Station families, explained that effective communication is crucial to marital success, but is perhaps the hardest thing for couples to master.

"We know how to fight dirty and hurt our mates when we're angry," said Norton who is also married. "But when it comes to explaining why we're angry in the first place, and actually listening to their side of it with an open mind, we're pretty inept."

Mimi Tracey, Norton's only assistant counselor, said Americans just aren't taught the kinds of communication skills needed to handle the situations they confront in marriage, unless they learn them through counseling, literature or workshops, all of which are available at Family Services.

But many people don't take advantage of this option, Tracey explained, because they think counseling is only for marriages on the brink of the deep pit of doom. Thus they often wait until it is at that point before they seek counsel.

"If people came to us as soon as they realized marriage is a complicated process, much of the problems they encounter later on wouldn't happen," Norton said. "Marital communication is a skill that has to be recognized, understood and nurtured in order to take root in a relationship."

By "communication" Norton was referring to the specific process that enables couples to discuss the inevitable gripes and complaints created by intimacy in a "positive, issue-oriented and healthy" way.

During both counseling and workshops, couples are encouraged to orient their discussions of such conflicts to the issue at hand, to focus on what "really" created the problem. They're also taught to express their side, in terms of how the other's actions made them feel, rather than making accusations and assumptions of why their partner did what they did, or why it was "wrong."

"In addition to expressing your own feelings, listening is crucial to progress," Norton stressed. "Too often, we don't hear what our partners are trying to say, which hinders any ability for us to work together for a mutually satisfying solution."

These and other skills are taught and matured through a variety of techniques. The requirement for improvement, Norton said, is a willingness to accept new ideas and an effort by both parties to improve. While this can be tough for any couple, the military family has unique characteristics that compound the difficulty.

"Open cooperative communication skills are hard enough for the average person to learn," Tracey said. "Marines have an extra hurdle to jump because these are contrary to the characteristics of a well-disciplined, strong leader."

That is to say, taking orders, giving orders and "grinning and bearing it," don't water the marital rose garden. They add fuel to the fire.

Spouses unfamiliar with the military system have hurdles of their own to negotiate, because it is so different from what they know. This time of transition generally comes concurrent with the difficult first years of marriage that "make or break" a relationship. If they don't understand their servicemembers' duties and responsibilities, the need for military discipline and the customs that form the root of the Corps, Tracey said spouses are bound for a difficult path.

Frequent protracted deployment separations do little to improve the odds, Norton added. The past seven months of Operations Desert Shield and Storm were a drastic example, but even routine separations create problems.

"Six months is a long time to be apart," Tracey said. "People grow and change." The uncertainties surrounding the war, both at home and in the desert, exaggerated many of the changes.

Norton added that as they come back together, a couple has to "re-negotiate" its relationship. "Things have changed, and they're going to have to adjust the parameters of their relationship accordingly. Get what you want and expect, out in the open and be willing to compromise."

He said compromise is the basic nature of a relationship and it's a never ending process.

"You've got to be willing to compromise. The last thing you want in a relationship is to win an argument," warns Norton. "That only means you'll lose big later."

Once people accept that the person they've married is human, with flaws of their own, and they make a commitment to compromise and communicate, Norton said, they've made the crucial first step toward a healthy and happy relationship.

For more information on communication counseling or workshops, call the Family Service Center at 257-3655.

Award Storm begins

By Cpl. B.W. Beard
Marine Expeditionary Force

Northeastern Saudi Arabia
The six-week Desert Storm has passed, and the race to recognize Marines for their acts of gallantry or meritorious service has begun.

The 14 Leathernecks of the 1 Marine Expeditionary Force Awards Section are working around the clock to provide the administrative support required to bestow Marines with deserved military decorations.

"We are trying to get as many awards completed in theater as possible so that Marines will not have to wait months to be recognized for their accomplishments," said GySgt. Peter J. Reed, Awards Section staff non-commissioned officer in charge.

"These Marines have worked hard and deserve to take their awards home to their command and friends."

Because each case is judged on its own merit, there are many steps that must be taken before the award can be presented. The individual's unit commander initiates the award by submitting to the Awards Section the name of the Marine along with the recommended award and a summary of his actions that make him deserving.

The Awards Section is responsible for preparing the award recommendation into a proper format.

"This requires us to proofread and correct the submissions before we make the file copies for the awards board," said Reed. "A majority of the submissions are either too long or too short and we must make them so that they read just right."

An awards board, comprised of six field-grade officers, along with the 1 MEF Sergeant Major, SgtMaj. Spenser (when dealing with an enlisted Marine's record) read the submissions. They then decide if it is worthy of the recommended award or if it should be up or down-graded. This decision is then presented as a recommendation to LtGen. Walter E. Boomer, 1 MEF commanding general.

LtGen. Boomer is the awarding authority for the Bronze Star Medal and those of lesser distinction. A recommendation is made by him in instances involving the Navy and Marine Corps Medal and those of greater distinction before they proceed to their respective awarding authorities.

In each case a citation and certificate is drafted for the necessary endorsements. This requires vast amounts of reading and typing for the Awards Section, according to Cpl. Karl Eisenacher, an administrative clerk stationed here. "We have been working more than 15 hours each day, but we know it's worth every minute to the Marines to whom these awards are presented," he added.

Although more than 300 medals have already been bestowed upon deserving Marines, 1stLt. Jennifer L. Blair, Awards Section officer in charge, was quick to add that the Marine Corps' standards have not decreased.

"These awards have been earned through extraordinary acts," said Blair.

Top Marines

LtCpl. John S. Allen, Strathmore, Calif., right, and Cpl. Ronald D. Tangoma, North Glenn, Colo. receive Certificates of Commendation from LtCol. T. D. Messera, commanding officer of HQHQRON. The two Marines were recognized as the Station Marine and NCO of the Quarter last quarter 1990, respectively. SgtMaj. John W. Shannon, HQHQRON's sergeant major looks on. Allen is a public voucher examiner with Disbursing and Tangoma is a property control clerk with PMO.

Legally Speaking

By Cpl. Shelly Rivard
Legal Services Center

Various problems will sometimes cause military family members to return home to the mainland before their sponsor's tour of duty is over.

The early return of dependents from their sponsors' tours to their home of record is authorized and financially covered by the government for cases involving marital problems, financial difficulties, medical reasons and other unusual circumstances.

It is not authorized for dependents who wish to attend a college on the mainland, or for those who want to return to the continental United States solely to wait until their sponsor returns from a deployment or war time.

A request for a dependent's early return begins at the Transportation Management Office. Proof of the problems which would warrant an early return are required.

For instance, requests based upon marital difficulties must have a chaplain's statement attached. If a request is based on financial difficulties, a financial statement must be attached. Requests based on medical reasons must have statements from attending physicians attached.

If a request is based upon marital difficulties, the parties will be sent to a chaplain for an interview. After the interview, the chaplain will write a letter to either approve or disapprove the request.

If approved, the letter is submitted to the company office. The company office then submits the request through the chain of command for approval. Once it is approved by the command, it is sent to the personnel office. Orders are cut at that level.

The shipment of the dependent's household goods is based upon the weight limit entitlement of the sponsors next Permanent Change of Station orders.

For example, Joe Marine is entitled to have 7000 pounds shipped. He ships his dependent's household goods early, which weigh 4,000 pounds, to their home of record.

When he eventually gets PCS orders and is ready to ship his remaining household goods, he will only be entitled to ship 3,000 pounds. If he has more than that weight amount to ship, he will be liable for the expenses of shipping the excess.

If he then wants to ship his dependents from their home of record to his new duty station, he will have to pay for the shipment himself. Joe Marine's other option would be to wait until he gets another set of PCS orders, at which time he'll be entitled to another full shipment of household goods.

The early return of dependents is a one time deal. Once dependents have returned home, any return back to the sponsor's duty station is not financially covered by the military. The sponsor or dependent would have to pay all expenses.

Also, once dependents arrive home, they are authorized up to 90 days of free storage for household goods. After 90 days, the individual has to pay storage costs.

Finally, be forewarned - our experiences with Operation Desert Shield/Desert Storm have shown that early returns should be initiated only in situations where there are no other options. They should be very carefully considered before taking action.

On the Blotter

Alcohol-related incidents

• A Marine was arrested by Honolulu Police after striking a building on Kalakua Road in a rented car. He wasn't injured. The Marine failed a field sobriety test and was taken to the Honolulu Police Department's Central Station. He took an intoxilyzer test, which showed his blood alcohol content to be .09 percent. He was released on $200 bail and scheduled to appear in court.

• A military dependent and a civilian worker were both arrested for Breach of Peace after arguing with each other at the Pizza Parlor and the Enlisted Club. The incident at the Pizza Parlor began as a verbal argument, but ended with the dependent assaulting the civilian. They both ran to the Enlisted Club, and continued a verbal argument. Military Police later found that the civilian had served alcoholic beverages to the dependent at the Pizza Parlor. The civilian was also processed for Prohibition of a Minor. The dependent was also charged with Underage Drinking.

• Two Marines were arrested for Mutual Affray after fighting at the Staff Non-commissioned Officers' Club. One Marine was injured on the head, and was taken to the Branch Clinic. A letter was sent to the Director of Morale Welfare and Recreation, recommending that both Marines be suspended from club facilities.

Other incidents

• A dependent was ticketed for an At Fault Traffic Accident after she backed her vehicle at the Commissary parking lot and caused a four vehicle accident.

All four vehicles were damaged, ranging from minor to moderate. The dependent had lower back injuries, and was treated and released from the Branch Medical Clinic.

• A dependent was arrested for Unlawful Discharge of Pyrotechnics after she and her son played with firecrackers and one exploded in his hand. He had minor cuts and burns which were treated at the Branch Medical Clinic. The dependent was advised of Station regulations regarding pyrotechnics and released.

• A driver was parked at the Marine Corps Exchange was released by MPs to the Honolulu Police for an outstanding assault warrant. The driver was stopped by MPs because his vehicle was parked in the red zone at the exchange.

There is an increased problem with illegal parking in spaces reserved for the 1st Marine Expeditionary Brigade Commanding General and the Air Station Commanding Officer, according to the Military Police Department. Air Station order P8500.6c, states "violators parking in spaces assigned to the 1st MEB CG, Station CO, other COs, sergeants major, other senior officers, Medal of Honor winner and handicapped persons at the MCX, Commissary, SNCO and Officers' Club, will have their driving privileges automatically suspended for one week for the first offense, six months for the second offense and permanent suspension for the third offense. Military sponsors are responsible for the actions of their dependents." For more information, call 257-3425.

Girl Scouts conquer 'worlds'

Story and photos by Cpl. Jason Erickson Hawaii Marine Staff Writer

Fortunately, it was water base paint. Oil base would have stained the truck and her clothes. How was she supposed to know the stirring stick would get stuck in a thick muck at the bottom of the can, break in half and splatter paint everywhere?

Christie Geier took it in stride, though. In fact, she seemed to think it was all pretty funny, although she admits she's anxious to get the whole thing over with.

Painting house numbers on the sidewalks of Station residences is her final project for the highest Girl Scout award. With five years of badge acquisition only a few house numbers away, her easy-going attitude isn't surprising.

Besides, she had good friends all around her who got a kick out of the paint splashing episode, so it wasn't a total waste. Even when it started pouring rain a half hour later, Geier was still laughing. Granted, she was disappointed that she'd have to postpone her community service for another day, but what's one day after six months of preparation?

The Gold Award is merely the symbol of what she and fellow Senior Girl Scout, Liberty McCarty, will reel in for their efforts. The real reward? Both agreed that tackling a difficult task after several months of hard work gave them a very good feeling of accomplishment.

not to mention rising to the top of the Scout world that has been a part of their lives for so many years.

A 15-year-old sophomore at Kalaheo High School, Geier said she'll be glad in a couple weeks, when it's all over. That's it. She made it to the top and now she can devote more time to whatever it is today's teenagers are devoting their time to.

McCarty, also 15, but a freshman at Kalaheo, is looking forward to getting it over with as well. After nine years in the scouts, and more importantly, after dozens of badges and the work they entailed, she's ready to relax and just enjoy the camping trips and friendships that go along with being a Scout. She said she'll continue the community service she performed for her Gold Award project, though, because she likes tutoring elementary school students.

It's the same reason she enjoys being a Senior Scout. Now that she's a "well-decorated young woman in uniform," she's a role model for nearly 175 younger scouts in the 15 troops of the Mokuapu Division of the Honolulu-based Girl Scouts Council of the Pacific. Only 16 of those girls, from 9th-12th grade, share the status of Senior Scout with McCarty and Geier.

The majority of the troops are filled with either Brownie Scouts (1st-3rd grade) or Juniors (4th-6th grade). In fact, these two levels comprise 11 of the 15 troops. Kindergarten-age

"Daisies" comprise the two youngest troops, while one group of Seniors and one group of 7th and 8th-graders (Cadets) form the remaining two troops.

With a relatively small group of Mokuapu Girl Scouts overall, many of their activities are combined, such as a recent camping trip on the North Shore that involved all five levels. At the same time, however, each of the troops has its own activities.

The Persian Gulf War consumed much of their attention in the past six months. Girl Scout Chairwoman Diane McCarty said banner making, yellow ribbon campaigns and other support activities helped not only the war effort, but many of the girls with deployed parents deal with their emotions in a positive way.

"By channeling their efforts in a positive direction, we helped the girls relieve at least some of the anxiety that accompanied the war," McCarty added.

Now that the war is over and parents are coming home, things are getting back to normal and the Girl Scouts are moving back into their own world. Actually, they're getting back into five "worlds."

McCarty explained that activities are divided into the five areas they call worlds, because within each there are "a world of varied activities."

According to guidelines published by the Girl Scouts of the USA, there are worlds for outdoor activities, arts, future exploration, people and wellbeing. Within each world there are virtually an unlimited number of activity angles that groups and individual Scouts can pursue. The projects they fulfill to get their various badges come from within one or more of those worlds.

Liberty McCarty tutored elementary students, Ilke Kallua Elementary School's Darryl Bailey of the 1st Grade, to satisfy the requirements of her Girl Scouts Gold Award.

Badge earning is an integral part of being a Scout. At the younger levels, the projects are simplified so they can be accomplished quickly and without a great deal of effort. As the girls grow older, the projects grow more complicated and require much more work.

The most difficult task, the Gold Award, which Geier and McCarty will soon achieve, requires work in four of the five worlds, and involves several "preparation projects" before their final three-month project can be started. It's a commitment most Girl Scouts are not willing to make.

Even the two young ladies who stand so close to the achievement of that goal are a bit surprised they went the distance. But that's exactly what they did, through hours of hard work, community service, studies, documentation and even a little splattered paint.

Nikki Hamilton, her sister and friend Danielle Uzoninleks, were among several local Scouts who sang Christmas songs and sponsored a booth at the annual Santa's Village party last Christmas.

Woman Marines prove they're equally capable as they work side-by-side male counterparts

Sgt. Pamela Flint

By Cpl. Reginald M. Cole
Hawaii Marine Staff Writer

It all began during World War I, when 305 women stepped out of the civilian world and into the Marine Corps, to serve briefly as stenographers, bookkeepers, clerks and orderlies as male Marines went off to war. These women were known as "Marinettes." After the Great War, they packed-up their uniforms and returned to the civilian sector.

At the onset of World War II, these highly-skilled women once again answered the Marine Corps' call, this time as full-fledged Marines. But as their length of service grew in the Corps, so did their role. Today, women Marines serve in nearly all of the same noncombat occupations as their male counterparts.

People look up to Sgt. Kathleen Hansen for lots of reasons, but probably the most obvious is because she spends most of her time atop H11-46 (Search and Rescue) Aircraft, repairing them.

The five-foot-two East Chicago native said that earlier in her 11-year career, she always found herself competing against men.

"When I came in back in '79, it was as though I had to prove myself to the male Marines," she said. "In my first Military Occupational Skill, I was a motor transport mechanic and I guess some of the Marines felt threatened. I couldn't manhandle a truck tire as quick as some men could, but my size or my sex never stopped me from completing my job."

Although Hansen became one of the top mechanics in her shop, she had her sights set on aviation.

After nine years of being a motor transportation mechanic, Hansen decided to make a lateral move. While she realized that the transition would be tough, she was determined to make her new career a successful one.

"The first impression I had of Sgt. Hansen was a squared-away, motivated Marine," said SSgt. Thomas Moore, SOMS's Air Frames chief. "The fact that she is a woman wasn't a factor. It was the fact that she was coming from another MOS and knew it would take a lot of hard work to learn her new job."

Although she has been an aviation structure mechanic just shy of a year, Hansen has proven herself, according to Moore.

"On a scale of one to 10, she's an eight," said Moore. "She's definitely an asset."

Back in 1985 when Sgt. Pamela Flint (then a private first class), told her parents and friends she had been assigned as an ammunition technician out of Marine Corps boot camp, no one believed her.

In fact, Flint could hardly

believe it herself. Because she elected to join the Marine Corps under the open contract program, she didn't learn of her new job until days before graduation.

"My parents immediately thought I was in danger of being blown up," said Flint. "I wanted the legal field and I have to admit, this was a far cry from what I was hoping to get. But I didn't complain or try to get out of it. I figured it would be a challenge."

Six years later, Flint is assigned to the Air Station Ordnance here, and says she feels privileged to not work in a cramped office behind a desk. On any given day, she can be seen hours before sun-up issuing out thousands of rounds of ammunition to units here for their yearly rifle range qualifications.

According to Flint, she issues and receives ammunition ranging from 22 caliber to 1,000 pound bombs.

Being one of two women in her shop, Flint attributed her respect from peers to hard work.

"I never wanted or asked for any type of special treatment. I knew I had to prove myself as a Marine," she said.

"When I first met Sgt. Flint, she was a lance corporal in an ammunition company at Camp Pendleton, Calif.," said Sgt. Vernon Vinson, magazine noncommissioned officer in charge of Station Ordnance. "Although she wasn't the first woman Marine I've known in this field, she was the most knowledgeable."

"Years ago, before joining the Marine Corps, I filled out a questionnaire that asked if women should be allowed in the military. I said no, absolutely not.

"Nine years later, and having worked with women in the Marine Corps, my eyes have been opened. Women are just as capable of earning the title Marine as men are.

"This is not a man's Marine Corps," he added. "It's a Marine's Marine Corps."

Leathernecks miss mark in bowling tournament

Hawaii Marine Staff Writer

The Hawaii Marine Men's and Women's Bowling Teams were unsuccessful in their attempt to dethrone the four-time reigning Air Force teams in the 1991 Hawaiian Armed Services Athletic Council Bowling tournament here March 13-15.

In a heated bowl-a-thon, the Marine teams had to settle for an uneventful fourth place finish behind the Air Force, Navy and Army teams, respectively. The Air Force team rolled away with a five-year bragging rights and the Perpetual Team Trophy. The Air Force had a total of 34,300 points.

Veriann Nuuhiwa-Pollard, a member of the Hawaii Marine Women Bowling team who entered the tournament with a 166 average, said the ending could have come out differently.

"We missed three of the games during the tournament, so that hurt us in the finals," said Nuuhiwa-Pollard. "We'll get 'em next year."

According to a member of the Marine men's team, the team's poor performance may be due the absence of one of their key bowlers, Rance Howard, who didn't make the team during preliminary trials.

Lee Ralls, a 190 average Hawaii Marine bowler, talked about his game after the tournament.

"I had a bad game during the first day of the tourney, but as it progressed, I leveled off," said Ralls. "Unfortunately, it wasn't enough. I gave it my best shot," he added.

The only highlight for the Marines of the 1991 HASAC Bowling Tournament went to Mavis White. She captured the Women's High Game trophy with a score of 223.

There were four events during the championship tournament. The events, winners, branches of service and scores are as follows:

Team Event
Men Air Force, 7356
Women Navy, 4100

Doubles
Men Army, Joe Sulich and Bill Anthony, 2585

BE PROUD TO BE AN AMERICAN

Since the days of early Hawaii, Hawaii's citizen soldiers have answered the call to duty with honor and dignity. In national crisis and in natural disasters, Hawaii has responded in the tradition of warriors.

Today is no different. The Hawaii Army National Guard still needs the kind of citizens who know that peace and freedom aren't free. That's why we are looking for those who are willing to stand up and be counted when they are needed — those patriotic men and women willing to continue the warrior tradition.

If you are one of them, we've got a job, a paycheck, and some attractive benefits waiting for you. Choose to be a part of the

THE MOST IMPORTANT meal, according to nutritionists, is breakfast. A low fat, low cholesterol, bowl of whole grain cereal topped with skim milk and fruit is perfect. The artery-clogging plate of bacon, doughnut, and creamed beef with butter, may shorten chubby's life. Can you also pick out the six differences between these two seemingly identical drawings?

ANSWERS:

- 1) Canister missing off top shelf.
- 2) Number of items carried on tray in background.
- 3) Light bulb in ceiling.
- 4) Mess cook has turned.
- 5) Eyes on seated man in the background.

Discounts offered to military on air fares, lodging, attractions

PAO
The next nine months may be the ideal time for military and their families to explore entertainment and travel opportunities throughout the Hawaiian Islands.

That seems to be the ulterior motive behind Hawaii Gov. John Waihee's newly announced "Aloha R & R" program, which was created as a "special way of expressing gratitude to the men and women who brought us victory in the Persian Gulf," according to a news release from the governor's office.

Through the program, airlines, hotels, restaurants and other attractions are now offering discounts of 50 percent or more for all active and active reserve U.S. military personnel and their family members, and for all allied Desert Storm forces. These discounts will be offered through Dec. 15.

Here's a sampling:

- America West, American, Continental, Delta and United Airlines are all offering 70 percent off of full coach fares between Hawaii and the mainland.
- Aloha IslandAir and Aloha and Hawaiian Airlines are offering inter-island flights for $35.95 per flight segment.

- Atlantis Submarine dives are $20 and $10 off the normal rates for adults and children, respectively, for tours which take off from the Hilton Hawaiian Village in Honolulu.
- Ko Olina Golf Club at Ewa Beach, (Oahu) is offering 50 percent off its normal rates for green fees, to include cart rentals.
- Jack's Kona Charters is offering a 50 percent discount on charter sportsfishing off of the Big Island's Kona Coast.

- Akina Aloha Tours is offering 50 percent off of shuttle and tour services in Maui.
- The Polynesian Cultural Center is being offered at 75 percent off its normal admission.
- Aston Condo Resorts and Hotels, and Hyatt Regency Hotels on the Big Island, Kauai, Maui and Oahu (Waikiki) are offering rooms at 50 percent off their normal rates.

For more information, contact the Station LIFE CO at 254-3581 or the Camp Smith LIFE CO at 487-1567.

Grace Jones will be in concert April 4 - 6 at Pink's Garage. Tickets are $20 in advance. The Sonic Youth will also play at Pink's Garage, April 19-20. Tickets are $15.50 in advance.

Special Desert Storm discounts are being offered for military personnel and their families, including: Aikane Cattanaran Sunset or Moonlight Dinner Cruises, Barefoot Cattanaran Morning or Afternoon Fun and Sun Sails, Brothers Cazimero Cocktail Show, Polynesian Cultural Center's "Afternoon-in-the-Park" or "This is Polynesia" evening extravaganza.

Check out these specials and more.

Whale-watching on board the Navatek 1 is offered in two-and-a-half hour cruises, Tuesday - Sunday, beginning at 8 a.m. Each cruise includes a continental breakfast, narration and photographic opportunities. You're guaranteed to see a whale, or receive a coupon for another sail. The military rate is $33.50 for adults and $16.50 for children. A combination package includes visits to the Hawaii Maritime Museum and Falls of Clyde after the sail. Rates are $42 for adults and $17 for children.

The Honolulu Symphony will present Empire Brass, a brass quintet April 5 at the Blaisdell Center. Tickets range from $8 - $22.
