Serving MCAS Kaneohe Bay, 1st MEB, Camp H.M. Smith and Marine Barracks.

October 21, 1993

Flying high

There are four Marine Corps pilots attached with the Blue Angels, including Capt. Ken Switzer just about to board his #5 F/A-18. The three Marines with the C-130 crew are Capt. Joe Michalek, Capt. John Skinner and Capt. Craig Williams.

Halloween hours set for Oct. 31

GySgt. Randy Price
Provost Marshal Office

Trick-or-treating on Halloween night is a fun event to be shared by young and old alike, but a little planning for your child's safety before, during, and after this event will help to keep the "fun" in this traditional holiday.

When organizing your child's costume, try to select one that is light in color. If that's not possible, it's a good idea to put reflective tape around the ankles, wrist, and on the headdress. While face painting is preferred, masks should be checked to ensure vision, hearing and breathing are as unrestricted as possible. In addition to their "goody" bag, children should carry a flashlight to help make them more visible to motorists on dark streets.

Parents should not let their children go trick-or-treating alone. Groups of children accompanied by a responsible teenager or adult are safest, and they should walk on the sidewalks when possible—not in the street. Only well-lighted residences should be approached by trick-or-treater's and children should never step inside the house.

Caution children in advance against eating anything they receive while trick-or-treating. While there has not been a problem here were tainted treats, parents should still closely check their child's treats for signs of tampering.

Check fruit for punctures or slices and self-wrapped homemade candy should be avoided. Factory processed candy should also be checked for any irregularities. A simple rule to follow when inspecting Halloween treats is "if in doubt, throw it out."

If any suspicious activities are observed or reported by children, or tampered treats are found by parents, contact the Military Police Department at 257-7114. Residents of off-base housing should contact the Honolulu Police Department.

Trick-or-treat hours for the Air Station are from 5:30-8:30 p.m., Sunday Oct. 31. The base medical clinic will also provide an x-ray examination of any suspicious items until 9 p.m. on Halloween night.

Deputy Provost Marshal named NQLB chairman

By Sgt. Paul Schneider
Staff Writer

Board members of the Neighborhood Quality of Life Board recently elected Capt. Chris Martin to the position of board chairman, which was vacated by MSgt. Joseph Giaradino after he was deployed.

Martin, the station deputy provost marshal, was the acting chairman until elections were held in September. Martin will serve as the chairman until regular elections are held at the January NQLB meeting.

The January elections will be for the six at-large members of the board. A total of nine people serve on the board.

Because of the short time he will serve as chairman, Martin said he plans to continue the direction the board has already set.

"We want to be responsive to the interests and concerns of the station community," Martin explained.

The board is currently working on a proposal for expanded service by The Bus to the station. Board members are still collecting and tabulating the results of the bus survey and are almost ready to make a proposal to the station commanding officer.

The board is still working on establishing a Teen Center. In the past, some of the more common concerns brought to the board have involved juvenile issues. The military police have taken some action to cut down on problems.

A Teen Center will also help since teens currently have no where to "hang out."

"Parents are still responsible for the actions of their children," Martin added.

One thing Martin said he would like to see while he is serving as chairman is increased regular participation by station residents. People appear to come to the board only when they have a direct concern.

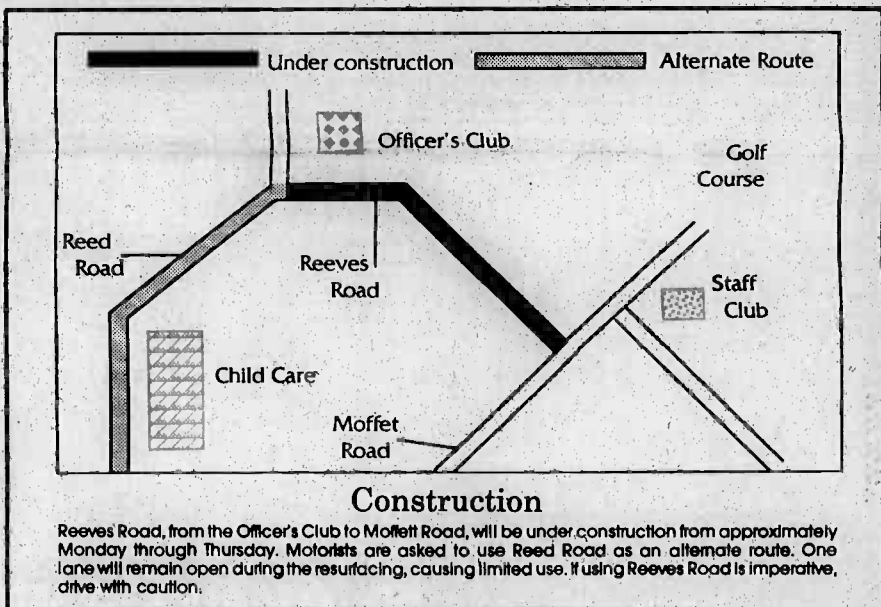

"The board can only be as responsive as the input it receives from the community," Martin said.

If anyone has any concerns, they can contact any member of the board, attend the monthly meetings or fill out a NQLB suggestion form.

The next NQLB meeting will be held Oct. 28 at 7 p.m. at the

Training and Audiovisual Service Center (TAVSC) classroom 1. The topics for the October meeting will be the commissary and neighborhood watch program.

If anyone has any questions or suggestions for the board, call Capt. Martin at 257-2103.

Station's beaches, reefs found clean

By Sgt. Lou Ramirez
Staff Writer

More than 600 pounds of trash were collected from station beaches Saturday, as 42 Marines, sailors and civilian volunteers participated in the third annual island-wide clean up.

The theme for this year's clean up was "Get The Drift and Bag It." That's exactly what more than 8,000 volunteers did through out the island of Oahu. This total includes 823 divers who cleaned the underwaters. In total they picked up 5400 pounds of trash from Oahu's shoreline and underwater.

Twenty seven dive organizations helped clean up 18 of Oahu's beaches. Military installations were in charge of cleaning their own beaches.

The cleanliness of the station beaches came as a surprise for those organizing the clean up as well as those conducting it.

"Military beaches are very clean. Everybody takes care of them," said Cpl. Kyle Smart, who helped with the clean up at the Hale Koa beach.

Only three items were found in the underwaters of the Hale Koa

Cpl. Barry Baker

Recon. Company, 3rd Marines entered the water off of Rifle Range Road as they took part in the island-wide clean up, "Get the Drift and Bag It."

Honolulu Police Department observed a Marine driving without his headlights on. Upon contact with the Marine a strong odor of an alcoholic beverage was detected emitting from his breath. The Marine was administered and failed a field sobriety test. The Marine submitted to an intoxilyzer test which resulted in a blood alcohol content of .115 percent.

Military Police observed a Marine drive up to the H-3 Gate. Upon contact with the Marine a strong odor of an alcoholic beverage was detected emitting from his breath. The driver was administered and failed a field sobriety test. He elected to submit to an intoxilyzer test which resulted in a blood alcohol content of .116 percent. The Marine was processed and released to his unit representative.

Military Police here received correspondence from Pearl Harbor that a Marine was apprehended for drunk and disorderly conduct at the Enlisted Men's Club, Pearl Harbor. The Marine was released to his unit representative.

Three Marines threatened to commit suicide while conversing with other Marines. All Marines were transported to Tripler Army Medical Center for evaluation. One Marine was found to be of no threat to himself and was released on his own recognizance. The other two Marines were admitted for observation.

A Marine stated he fell from the second deck of the barracks and was transported to Tripler Army Medical Center for treatment. While there he admitted he jumped from the second deck in an attempt to commit suicide. Alcohol was involved. The Marine was admitted for observation.

Military Police responded to a family disturbance. The couple had been involved in a verbal altercation concerning their divorce when the husband threatened the wife. No injuries were reported and he was released to his unit representative.

Drift

from A-1 Beach, a bottle, a piece of tape and a ring.

"We did not find a lot of trash at all," said Athena Angelis, a civilian volunteer. "But we did find some beautiful coral."

Although 600 pounds of trash may seem like a lot, clean-up officials agreed that considering the size and amount of traffic station beaches receive, that amount of trash was small.

"I thought we would find more trash. Especially here (Hale Beach) because of the way the wind blows and because of the campers," said Harry Sprague, manager Scuba Locker.

Most of the trash picked up was found on Fort Hasse Beach. This area was cleaned by Marines of Recon Co. 3d Marines and the girls of Bronnie Troop 347.

"We actually finished our clean up sooner than expected," said Cyndy L. Scott, Mokapu Service Unit Manager.

This was in part, she explained to the cleanliness of the beach.

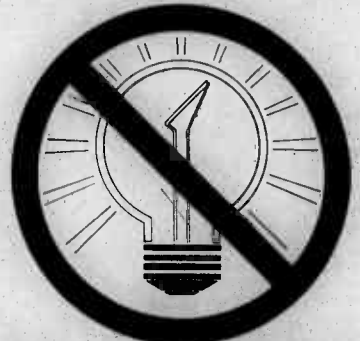

Divers with Recon Co. 3d Marines also cleaned the underwater but found little or no trash except for some fishing equipment which was probably left there unintentionally, explained Capt. Chele Robertson, commanding officer Recon Co. 3d Marines.

Robertson said they volunteered for the clean up because diving is part of their training and this would be a way to help the community while at same time remaining proficient.

It is this spirit of helping out which encourages people to volunteer in their community for activities such as the beach clean up, explained Candy Young, state underwater coordinator.

"This year 2,000 pounds of trash less than last year was picked up. It is very encouraging to see the amount of trash decreasing," said Young.

"The ocean is not a dumping ground and everybody has a personal responsibility to keep it clean," she concluded.

Energy awareness month

Another fiscal year has fallen by the wayside, and budgets continue to get smaller, utilities consumption is on the rise. Conservation will become more and more of an issue as we continue to throw money, literally out the window by abusing what is often taken for granted — our water and electricity. Hawaii is totally at the mercy of the petroleum companies, having to import fuel and coal for power plants and refineries. The easiest way to offset this growing dependence is to incorporate energy efficient practices in our daily routines.

- Tips to consider:
- Plug the drain when shaving. Letting the water run wastes 14 gallons of hot water.
 - Wash clothes in cold water when possible. The warm/cold cycle uses approximately nine gallons of hot water. The hot/warm cycle uses approximately 27.
 - Rinse in cold water.

CDC Weekend Program to close

Supersitter list available

Susan Cleveland
Early Childhood Education Program Director

As of December 1, the weekend evening program at the Child Development Center will close. In times of limited resources, the closure will allow the programs to utilize assets more efficiently.

The Family Child Care Program has a number of certified providers who will provide services on Friday and Saturday evenings. Please call 257-7030 for names and telephone numbers.

The Family Service Center, 257-3655, distributes a "Supersitter" list of teenagers who have completed the supersitter class.

The Child Development Center will continue to provide evening services for special events such as the Marine Corps Balls and deployment briefings. Organizations may call the ECE Program Office, 257-7430, to arrange child care for a special event.

Correction

There has been a lot of interest in the station paper recycling program as evidenced by all the people that have called the Hawaii Marine after the wrong phone number was printed in the Sept. 30 issue. The point of contact for the program is Donna Saito, director, Staff Services Division. The correct number is 257-2917. The recycling program began Oct. 1 and it is currently limited to paper recycling from offices and units on the air station.

This week around the world

□ Haiti embargo

A United Nations embargo went into force Tuesday after Haiti's security forces failed to guarantee the safety of the USS Harlan County, carrying American and Canadian United Nations forces, when it arrived in Haiti last week.

The ship was ordered to Guantanamo Bay Naval Base in Cuba until the issue is resolved. The United States Navy is helping to support the embargo by committing three guided missile cruisers, two frigates and a destroyer.

Besides the United Nations embargo, President Clinton also imposed unilateral sanctions against Haiti. The additional sanctions include revoking visas and freezing assets of those who are perpetrating the violence, and their supporters.

In addition to the increased naval presence, the Marine security guard in Haiti was increased by 30 Marines.

President Clinton also ordered a reinforced Marine rifle company to standby at Guantanamo Bay in case they are needed to protect and evacuate the approximately 1,000 American citizens in Haiti. The forces would only be used if the situation in Haiti deteriorates further and American lives are in danger.

□ U.S. warns Serbs

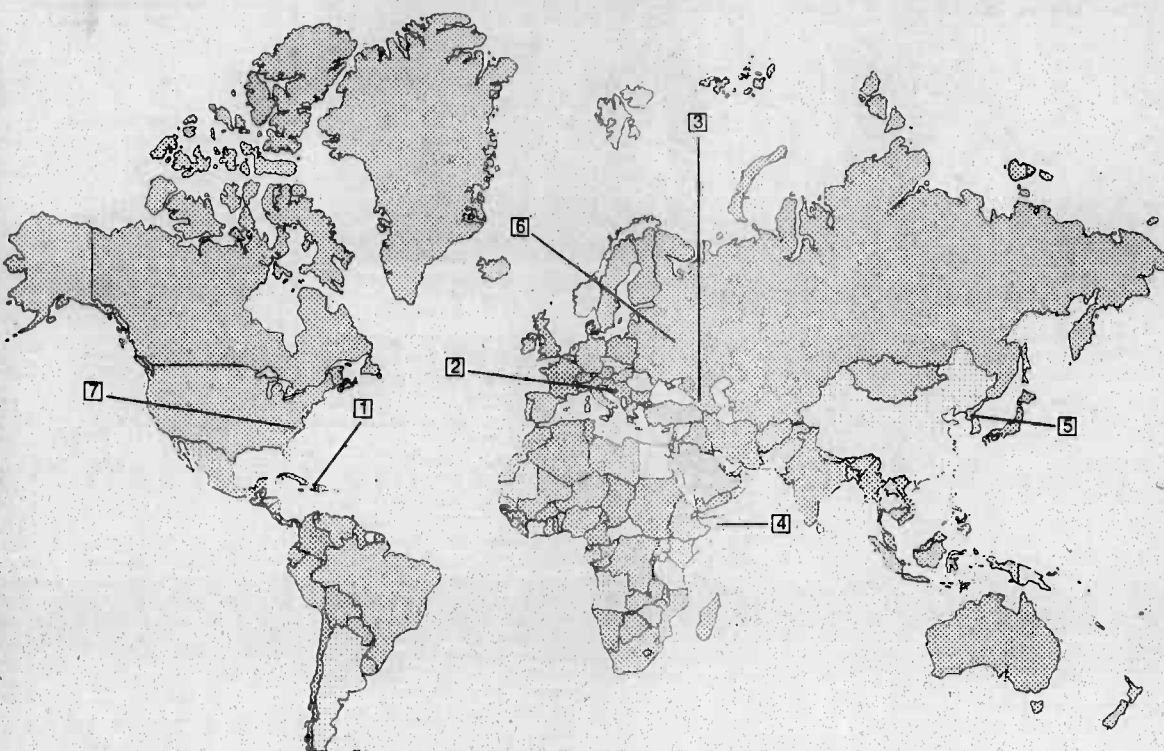

The United States issued a warning to Serb leaders in Bosnia-Herzegovina to move away from Sarajevo or face the possibility of air strikes by NATO aircraft.

The warning came after the Serbs escalated the shelling of Sarajevo during the weekend and blocked United Nations relief convoys.

United Nations personnel called the shelling of Sarajevo the worst in months. They also reported the Serbs had redeployed armor in the high ground around the city.

Serb forces made similar moves in August until NATO countries threatened air strikes against the Serb positions. The threat caused the Serbs to retreat until this past weekend.

Although United States diplomats are saying the August threat is still in effect, support for air strikes by NATO countries is not as great as it was in August.

The threat of air strikes in August had the desired effect as the Serb forces had relaxed their siege of Sarajevo until this weekend.

□ Shevardnadze asks for help

Georgian leader Eduard Shevardnadze has appealed for help from Russia, Armenia and Azerbaijan to end Georgia's bloody civil war.

Forces loyal to Shevardnadze, have suffered a string of heavy losses from Abkhazia secessionists and forces loyal to former President Zviad Gamsakhurdia.

The secessionists have gained control of almost all of the Abkhazia province.

Shevardnadze made his plea for help to the Commonwealth of Independent States after becoming a member this month. Russia, who has plenty of problems of its own, has said it might help, but it will be unlikely this will include military forces.

The move by Shevardnadze was an indication of the serious problems he is facing. Since he has been in power, Shevardnadze has sought to isolate his country from Russian influence. Joining the CIS and asking Russia for help was a major shift for Shevardnadze.

□ Quiet shattered in Somalia

United States forces fired at armed Somalis Monday after the armed group approached their compound. The action appeared to be an isolated incident.

Somalia has been relatively quiet after the massive battle Oct. 3 which killed 18 Americans and about 300 Somalis. There has been fighting in Mogadishu, but it has been between Somali clans and not directed at United Nations forces.

The relative quiet in Somalia appears to be the result of the unilateral cease-fire announced by warlord Mohamed Farrah Aidid. In addition, the United Nations has given up its manhunt for Aidid.

On Tuesday the White House announced the two Marine Expeditionary Units ordered to Somalia are now off the coast. Since the 3,600 Marine unit is special operations capable, the President ordered the Army Rangers to return to the United States.

□ North Korea warned

The International Atomic Energy Agency director-general warned North Korea that time was running out for it to accept nuclear inspections.

The United States has warned it might push for United Nations sanctions if it doesn't allow inspections of its nuclear facilities.

Although North Korea has denied that is trying to develop nuclear weapons, the international agency believes North Korea has enough plutonium to make one or two bombs by 1995.

□ Russians prepare for elections

Supporters of President Boris Yeltsin are preparing for the December parliamentary elections by forming a political party called Russia's Choice.

The party may become the dominant political party since Yeltsin banned the Communist Party from the elections. The only major problem the party may face is not from other parties, but from itself. The party is seeking to unify several different democratic forces.

The December elections will be critical for Yeltsin. Even though Yeltsin has consolidated his power since he ended his standoff with the former parliament by force, his political survival will likely depend upon the December elections.

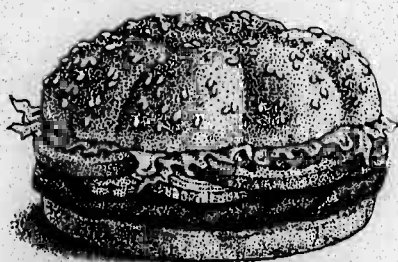

□ Beirut veterans' reunion

Hundreds of veterans who served in Beirut, Lebanon, in the 1950s and 1980s are meeting in Jacksonville, N.C., Friday and Saturday, to recall their service in that troubled country and to honor the memory of their fallen comrades.

This reunion marks the 35th anniversary of the 1958 landing in Beirut, and the 10th anniversary of the Marine Barracks truck bombing.

A formal public ceremony will be held to honor the fallen at the Beirut Memorial Saturday at 1 p.m. Commandant of the Marine Corps Gen. Carl E. Mundy Jr., and other dignitaries are scheduled to attend.

New parents now have classes to lend a helping hand

By Sgt. Lou Ramirez
 Staff Writer

Do you ever wish your children came with instructions? Unfortunately they don't. In order to help new parents adjust and answer some of their many questions, the Marine New Parent Support Program was implemented through out the Marine Corps.

The Marine New Parent Support Program began as a pilot project at Marine Corps Base Camp Pendleton, Calif. It has since expanded to MCAS Kaneohe Bay, and eleven other bases and air stations throughout the Marine Corps.

The office here opened in January 1993 to provide parenting education and support services to the Marine community.

Most new parents have their mom and dad close by to give that extra support and help with the children. The distance the military puts between families places an extra burden on military parents. They have to go through all the good times and sometimes agonies of being a parent alone.

Home visitors are available through the New Parent Support Program to make parenting an easier, more enjoyable time for both parents and the children.

"We realize military families have special needs. We try to relate the issues we discuss to the military families," said Anne White, program home visitor.

Some of the topics discussed during the home visits are child development, developmental stages and also feelings and how they relate to the child's behavior.

First of all, the home visitors get to know their clients and learn about their needs, explained White.

"We want to know what their needs are and how we can help them. We try to be an extended family for them," White said.

"We have found many of the families we have visited have a lot of limitations in terms of transportation and financial problems," she said.

These problems could easily be solved if the extended families were close. Being they are far away, the home visitor tries to give them suggestions and alternatives.

For most civilian families, mom and dad are available to provide the moral support needed by new parents. They encourage them by letting them know what a wonderful job they are doing and tell them how wonderful their children are, explained Chris Powell, program home visitor.

"They need to know they are doing great. This increases self esteem and lets them see the wonderful skills they already have," she said. "We are there to let them know they are not alone."

Another way the home visitors serve as an extended family for young military families is by being available to answer any questions which need to be answered.

"The home visitors can help parents with any type of concerns which relate to parenting. If there is something the home visitors does not have the answer to, they will at least be able to point their clients in the right direction," explained White.

"We help people link up with the programs they need," she said. White also explained they link parents with others who may have the same concerns. The parenting education and support group which meets Tuesday nights from 6 to 7:30 p.m. allows parents who have a common ground such as the military to get together and discuss these concerns.

"Throughout the group sessions we follow a curriculum, but most of the time is spent discussing ideas the parents bring to the groups," White explained. "We are only there to provide a background in our areas of expertise and answer any questions."

The groups are divided into ten-week sessions. Each week a different topic is discussed. After the ten weeks are completed a two week break is taken and then the sessions restart.

"Sessions are open-ended so any one can come in at any time," explained White.

Any parents with children 5 years of age or younger are welcome to attend.

For more information on the New Parents Support Program contact Dorsey Dubbs at 257-3655.

M*A*S*H brings back big blasts at Boondocker

By Sgt. Lou Ramirez
Staff Writer

The Boondocker Theater was suddenly dark. The sound of sirens and emergency calls coming from the stage then awoke the audience from the darkness and into a different place and time.

A place where life was lived one day at a time, where you may be smiling one minute and the next trying to save somebody's life. This was the era of the Korean War, a time and place that could only be portrayed in M*A*S*H (Mobile Army Surgical Hospital).

Many have seen it on TV for years, and although the actors of the Windward Theatre Guild production might have looked different, this production still takes you back to a time of long ago.

More than 26 actors and stage technicians are involved in the production of M*A*S*H. Many of whom are active duty military or dependents.

Their knowledge of the military might have been useful but at the same time it must have been a handicap, for those who are used to the strict rules of the military. Because although the characters of M*A*S*H were in uniform they were far from being serious.

Michael Martinelli, a Marine staff sergeant, played the role of Capt. B.F. "Hawkeye" Pierce. "Hawkeye," as he is called in the production, is a doctor who is drafted into the Army. But even after being at M*A*S*H for some time "Hawkeye" refuses to adjust to the Army's way of life.

The way Martinelli portrays the lighthearted Army officer is hilarious and keeps a cheerful mood throughout the play.

Although most of the scenes are funny and bring laughter from the audience, some of the scenes where the MASH nurses and doctors have to move rapidly in order to save lives, makes everyone realize the importance of unit such as MASH.

The production awakened the audience's every emotion, with funny scenes, emotional scenes, and even a song and dance scene.

Some amateur actors were acting in the play but the majority of the actors had previous experience. Their experience was obvious in the way they carried out their roles.

Fans of the television series, would think LtCol. Henry Blake looked different than he did on television; but this fact was forgotten as Dick Villard carried out his role. Villard gained his experience in 50 years of acting. He was a TV director and producer and performed in summer stock and professional theatre in Hollywood.

Other experienced talents include Hank Lindsey, who has done roles

In this scene, Mariys Jackson, who plays Maj. Margaret "Hot Lips" Houlihan, tries to convince the rest of the nurses that the men at M*A*S*H are sexist pigs.

in Magnum P.I. and Jake and the Fat Man and Kathy Miller who has performed in Pearl Harbor's Mardi Gras Follies and is the wife of a Marine.

Another Marine spouse is Teresa Weaver Stoots. Stoots has been acting since high school. In fact, it was in high school where she first acted in the play MASH.

Two active duty Marines used their experience in the military as well as on stage for their performance in M*A*S*H.

Daniel E. Winters, a Marine lance corporal played John "Trapper John," McIntyre. Winters had previous Shakespearean experience, acting as MacBeth and as Richard III.

Phantom of the Opera and Les Miserables. Murray says he plans to pursue a career in acting after he gets out of the Marine Corps.

New talent along with experienced actors made this an interesting and enjoyable production.

Shows will continue every Friday had acted in Kiss Me Kate, Pirates of Penzance and in excerpts of October at the Boondocker Theater.

Kathy Miller and Shawn Murray act out one of M*A*S*H's love scenes.

Lecture on second career to be offered

TAMP

A Washington lecturer and author on career transition from military to civilian employment will be at Marine Corps Air Station, Kaneohe Bay on Nov. 1 to talk to officers, senior noncommissioned officers and spouses on "Marketing Yourself for a Second Career."

Colonel Doug Carter, USAF (Ret.), Director of the Officer Placement Service for The Retired Officers Association (TROA) travels nationwide addressing military audiences composed of people who are nearing retirement, being involuntarily separated, or opting to leave military service.

In his free two-and-one-half-hour presentation, Carter introduces the audience to the realities of the civilian job market, rejection shock, resume writing, networking, job interview strategy, salary negotiation and much, much more. He doesn't promise an individual instant job search success, but guarantees that each person who attends his lecture will profit from the knowledge gained and be ready to move in the right direction toward that second career.

Praised by military installation commanders for his depth of knowledge and dynamic delivery, Carter pointedly discusses all the pros and cons regarding retirement and the civilian job market. One attendee remarked, "it was the best...reenlistment pitch I ever heard." For those leaving the service, there is a wealth of helpful information provided by Carter.

Military members and their spouses are cordially invited to attend the lecture, will have the opportunity to ask questions of Carter and will also receive a free copy of the publication, "Marketing Yourself for a Second Career."

Carter will be at the Station Theater, building 219 on Monday Nov. 1 and his lecture will last from 9-11:30 a.m. Should anyone have any questions contact Jim Gardner at 267-3135.

The Retired Officers Association sponsors these lectures, which in 1992 were presented to over 30,000 personnel at 113 military installations throughout the United States and Europe.

Tree planting

Firefighter Paul Schrader stands next to one of the 13 trees planted by himself and the other firefighters of Fire Station 8. The 5 milo trees and 8 palm trees were donated by Capt. Rodney Whittington, a firefighter here.

Are your windows tinted to regs?

Joint Public Affairs Office

Two recent fatal automobile accidents have prompted the Honolulu Police Department and the Provost Marshall's Office here to investigate whether tinted windows were a factor.

"People sometimes look through windows of other vehicles to ensure a movement can be done safely. If they are not able to see across the windows, the other vehicle becomes a safety hazard," said Sgt. Webster Heath of PMO's traffic safety department.

According to Hawaii Revised Statutes Regulation 291-21.5 (B) of motor vehicle sun screening devices: no person shall install, mount, adhere, affix, or use any sun screening device or combination of devices in conjunction with glazing material of a motor vehicle, if it does not meet the safety standards.

The first incident involved a Navy yeoman who was fatally injured near Pearl Harbor when a car struck his moped from behind and a second car ran over him. In the second incident, a 27-year-old motorist from Barbers Point Naval Air Station fatally struck a 77-year-old man already half way through a cross walk.

The regulation explains that in order to meet safety standards the front side wing vents and windows shall not have a glazing material which has a light transmittance of less than 35 percent plus or minus three percent. Any person who violates this section shall be liable for the removal of any sun screening device applied contrary to this section.

As defined in Hawaii Revised Statutes, "sun screening devices" means products or materials used or designed to be used in conjunction with glazing materials for the purpose of reducing the effects of sun. This includes but is not limited to tinting films and perforated sun screening materials, but excluding louvered materials.

The military police aboard the air station will begin checking the tinted windows of automobiles aboard the station. According to PMO, if they cannot see the driver through the windows necessary for driving visibility during midday, they will cite the driver for illegal modification of the vehicle.

"We haven't had a problem with people on station not following this regulation but it is important for everyone to be aware of it," said Sgt. Matthew Becker, PMO's Crime Prevention Department. For more information, call PMO at 267-2103.

Beirut tragedy remembered 10 years later

CWO Robert C. Jenks
MCCDC, Quantico, Va.
Deputy PAO

Editor's Note: Oct. 23 Marks the 10th Anniversary of the terrorist bombing of the U.S. Marine Barracks in Beirut, Lebanon. In that tragedy 241 American servicemen, 220 of whom were Marines, lost their lives. The writer, CWO Robert C. Jenks, was a corporal who served as a combat correspondent with the 32nd and 24th Marine Amphibious Units in Beirut in 1983.

MCCDC, QUANTICO, Va.— "When I met the first flight of your fallen comrades as they arrived at Dover, Del., after the mass murder of 23 October, I asked the question—Lord where do we get such men? As you stand here today I ask the same question. Where do we get such men of courage, such men of dedication, such men of patriotism, such men of pride?"

"The simple answer is that we get them from every clime and place—from every race—from every creed—and from every color. But each of you has one thing in common—you are a Marine or that special brand of Navy man who serves alongside Marines.

"Two days ago an entire nation opened its heart in grateful recognition of your safe return.

"You gallant Marines of the 24th have earned your rightful place in the glorious history of our Corps. You can stand tall and proud in the knowledge that you have selflessly given of yourselves in the service of your country, your Corps, and of free men everywhere.

"In the joy and emotion of your safe return, let none of us forget those brave Marines and sailors who made the supreme sacrifice—or forget the wife who will never again see her husband—the child who will never again see his father—or the parents who will never again see their son. They, too, have made the supreme sacrifice!"—General P.X. Kelley, Nov. 4, 1983.

It was a quiet Sunday dawn, 10 years ago... A modified holiday routine. Reveille would be sounded a little later than usual, 0630. Seventy-seven degrees, a bit warm for a late Lebanon October. What would occur just after sunrise would wound the nation at its core... and stab the Corps at its soul.

"They came in Peace." That's what the marble monument in Jacksonville, N.C., says. Nestled in a stand of sleepy Carolina pines just off Lejeune Boulevard, a bronze statue of a Marine peers vigilantly, affected with the disbelief at the utter destruction that is before him.

Like with Kennedy's assassination, most Americans and all Marines remember precisely where they were the day a suicide truck rocked the Corps—Oct. 23, 1983.

The DoD Commission report recorded it like this: "At approximately 0622 a.m. on Sunday, 23 Oct. 1983, the Battalion Landing Team headquarters building in the Marine Amphibious Unit compound at Beirut International Airport was destroyed by a terrorist bomb. The catastrophic attack took the lives of 241 Marines, sailors and soldiers and wounded more than 100 others. The bombing was carried out by a lone terrorist driving a yellow Mercedes Benz stake-bed truck that accelerated through the public parking lot south of the BLT headquarters building, crashed into the central lobby of the building, where it exploded. The truck drove over the barbed and concertina wire obstacle, passed between two Marine guard posts without being engaged by fire, entered an open gate, passed around one sewer pipe barrier and between two others, flattened the Sergeant of the Guard's sandbagged booth at the building's entrance, penetrated the lobby of the building and detonated while the majority of the occupants slept. The force of the explosion (12,000 pounds) ripped the building from its foundation. The building then imploded upon itself. Almost all the occupants were crushed or trapped inside the wreckage."

A little more than a year earlier 1,200 Marines from Camp Lejeune landed in Beirut, the first time since 1958, as part of a multinational peacekeeping force. Their mission: "to provide a presence in Beirut, that would in turn help establish the stability necessary for the Lebanese government to regain control of their capital."

Perhaps, however, the mission was illustrated a little more accurately in a 1983 political cartoon by Dwane Powell, "Raleigh News and Observer," "OK Marines—We're faced with Druze and Shia Muslims being backed by the Syrians against the Christian Phalangists. The Druze and Shias are divided among themselves, as are the Christians. The Israeli pullout is leaving a gap that the 'Lebanese Army' probably can't fill and the PLO is creeping back in... Nobody likes us, and it's all preceded by 2,000 years of bloodshed. Any questions?"

From Aug. 23, 1983, when the 32nd MAU, commanded by Col. James M. Mead, first arrived to fulfill the "presence" role, until Feb. 26, 1984, when the 22nd MAU, commanded by BGen. Jim R. Joy, redeployed to ships offshore, the Marine Corps had endured firsthand the devastating effects of a terror campaign. Subsequently, analysts identified key areas that needed addressing for future operations. Those areas included: mission development and execution, rules of engagement, the chain of command, intelligence, security, casualty handling, aeromedical evacuation and military response to terrorism. Within the area of military response to terrorism, the DoD Commission report concluded that the U.S. contingent of the Multinational Force was not trained, organized, staffed, or supported to deal effectively with the terrorist threat in Lebanon. The Commission further concluded that "much needs to be done to prepare U.S. military forces to defend against and counter terrorism."

Tell that to the lance corporal who spent countless days filling sandbags and countless sleepless nights on firewatch all the while being told not to have a round in the chamber of his weapon.

For months following the suicide bombing of the BLT headquarters, fingers of blame were pointed in all directions. But those days have faded like the smoke from the terrorist attack. What remains is the ever vigilant Marine, sailor and soldier who is intently aware of his and her responsibilities in faithfully carrying out the mission—whatever the cost.

When the terrorist bomb exploded, the cost was high. According to "U.S. Marines in Lebanon, 1982-1984," the explosion literally blew out the windows of the MAU headquarters several blocks away. Col. Timothy J. Geraghty, 24th MAU CO, after seeing the devastation, ran back to the MAU headquarters and saw the MAU executive officer, who was quickly getting dressed, and said, "Good God, the BLT is gone!"

The first message transmitted by Navy Capt. Morgan M. France, Commander Amphibious Squadron-8, said simply, "Explosion at BLT 1/8 HQ... a large explosion at BLT 1/8 Headquarters building collapsed the roof and leveled the building. Large numbers of dead and injured... amplifying info to follow."

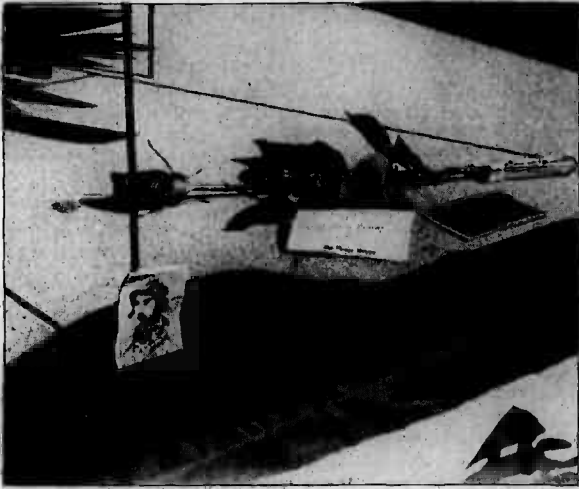

What was amplified was that an attack like this would have two effects, said the Commission report. "First, there would be symbolic success of penetrating the guarded compound. Second, the bomb carried was of such size that once through the perimeter, it would cause sufficient damage and casualties to have a major psychological impact and worldwide media coverage.

"From a terrorist perspective, the true genius of this attack is that the objective and the means of the attack were beyond the imagination of those responsible for Marine security. As a result, the attack achieved surprise and resulted in massive destructions of the BLT headquarters building and deaths of 241 U.S. military personnel. The psychological fallout of the attack on the U.S. has been dramatic."

While that drama was being played out in the political arena, the drama of hundreds of rescue workers scratching at concrete and steel in thankless attempts to find trapped Americans in the rubble was broadcast worldwide. The horror of what had happened came into every living room in America—it affected resounding emotional response and the repeated question, "Why?"

"They Came in Peace." One of the most poignant demonstrations of the Corps' dedication and faithfulness came when Gen. Kelley met LCpl. Jeffery L. Nashton in an intensive care ward in Wiesbaden, Germany. Nashton was in "...critical condition with more tubes going in and out of his body than I had ever seen. When he heard me say who I was, he grabbed my camouflage coat, went up to the collar and counted the stars. He squeezed my hand, and then attempted to outline words on his bedsheet. When what he was trying to write was not understood, he was given a piece of paper and a pencil, and then wrote 'Semper Paratus.' This guy in a single act, in a moment captured... the courage of that man and love for the Corps and his country. And more than anything, the faithfulness, the loyalty... the opposite of despair, you know, 'Semper Paratus'... Let us forget."

Memorabilia of a Marine who perished in the Beirut bombing is placed in front of the Beirut Memorial in Jacksonville, N.C.

MWR to post boards for yard sale signs in two locations

By Cpl. Wanda D.G. Schaner
Staff Writer

Advertising a yard sale by posting signs on fences, posts and trees will be a thing of the past.

Two large boards, one placed by the gas station, and the other placed in front of the 7-Day Store, will be the only two places where yard sale signs may be posted.

The yard sale boards will be put up each Friday morning and will be taken down Sunday evening. The managers of both establishments are responsible for the boards and will clean the signs off on Sunday night.

To post a sign, just place it on the board. Boards are for the posting of yard/garage sale signs only and signs should be of reasonable size and worded tastefully.

The Morale, Welfare and Recreation was tasked to build and place the boards by the Station Commanding Officer Col. R. R. Crawford.

Due to the repeated violations of Air Station Order 5500.6C and Family Housing Order Pam 210-1, that governs the posting of signs and sale of personal property, the station commanding officer has deemed it necessary to modify the order so that the posting of the signs is limited to only the two designated boards.

Cpl. W.D.G. Schaner

Two yard sale boards will be located in front of the 7-Day store and at the gas station. Signs, as shown above, are a thing of the past.

"The bottom line is that the yard sale signs were being posted but nobody was taking them down," said LtCol. Tim Sukow, station executive officer. "Old signs and bits of paper were continuing to litter the station," he said, "so the boards are being posted to resolve this problem." MWR is offering the boards as a courtesy to families here and as a way to keep the Air Station beautiful. "The boards have been constructed and placed to meet the needs of the personnel," said Tim Hudson, assistant manager MWR. "We encourage residents to use them to advertise the yard sales as well as keep the Air Station clean."

Sergeant Major recalls tragic day in Beirut

Remembering the bombing still stirs emotions after 10 years

By Cpl. Aaron Martin
Staff Writer

Some people recall what they were doing when Kennedy was shot, others when the space shuttle exploded shortly after its launch, and one Hawaii Marine remembers perhaps the most tragic day in Marine Corps history not because of what he has read or seen but because he was there.

Steve Mellinger, sergeant major of Marine Barracks, Hawaii was in Beirut on Oct. 23, 1983. Two-hundred and forty one Marines, sailors and soldiers were killed that day when their quarters were bombed by terrorist.

Mellinger was a gunnery sergeant with Weapons Platoon, Charlie Co., 1st Battalion, 8th Marines, in 1983. His unit arrived in Beirut on May 28, 1983. Weapons platoon dealt primarily with crew served weapons such as 60mm mortars, M60 machine guns and Dragon anti-armor weapons.

Charlie Company arrived when Beirut was "still an adventure" according to Mellinger. Beirut was still a beautiful and exciting place.

"We arrived in Lebanon and had been well briefed in regards to military operations as well as customs and traditions of the people," Mellinger said. "When we first got there most of the male population [who had joined] the 'Marines who died in the bombing did not die in vain. They died for their country. All of us realized that we didn't pick the place we went to, but followed the orders and completed the mission.'

SgtMaj. Steve Mellinger

Palestinian Liberation Organization, was gone and we had very little involvement in the conflicts."

The State Department had laid down some very strict rules of engagement which were to be adhered to by the Marines. Most of the "grunts" were situated outside the airport perimeter while security detachments, medical and administrative personnel were located in the building known as the BLT (Battalion Landing Team) headquarters and in close proximity.

Security was provided for three positions surrounding the airport area. Units would alternate maintaining the positions located at both ends of the airport and at Beirut University.

The Marines had been sent as a peacekeeping force. At first, the Marines remained immune from the civil conflict and the chaos surrounding this troubled nation. As the months passed, hostilities increased.

"From the first day we arrived there was fighting and car bombings going on," Mellinger said. "We arrived about a month after the American Embassy had been bombed. We had seen so much of it in the short time we were there that it didn't seem out of the ordinary. These things were an everyday occurrence."

The intensity of the fighting began to escalate when the Israelis pulled out of their positions. This was the turning point of the Marines involvement.

"Up to the time the Israelis had pulled out we (Marines) had been purely spectators," said the Fort Walton Beach, Fla. native. "We used to sit on top of the bunkers and watch the firefights between the warring factions at night."

The event which brought conflict to the Marines was when the Lebanese Army began using Marine perimeters as staging areas prior to their battles with the PLO.

"When the Lebanese began using us for protection is when we lost the neutrality of being only peacekeepers," said the former senior drill instructor. "The rules of engagement prevented us from getting offensively involved in any way."

On the morning of Oct. 23, Mellinger was serving as the COC (Command Operations Center) duty officer. Shortly after 6 a.m. he was walking from the COC to the head when he felt the impact of an explosion.

"I thought we had been hit by an arty (artillery projectile)," Mellinger exclaimed. "I dove into the closest bunker and landed on top of my executive officer, 1st Lt. Jerry Walsh. We waited for a few minutes because we usually received arty rounds in groups of three. I yelled up to the COC to get a fast TAB on the rounds."

A TAB is a Target Acquisition Battery which tracks the trajectory of a round from where it is shot to where it will land.

"After a moment I looked up and saw a huge cloud and immediately thought a car bomb had exploded at the airport. As the smoke cleared I realized that the four story BLT was no longer there," Mellinger said. "I then ran to the CO (Capt. Chris Cowdrey) and told him we lost communications and I think the BLT is down."

Cowdrey found it hard to believe what he was just told. The BLT had been regarded as one of the strongest and most solidly built buildings in the area, according to Mellinger. The Syrians had used the building as their headquarters just a year before and it had withstood mortars and artillery rounds. It would take a tremendous amount of explosives to down such a building. It took a truck loaded with approximately 12,000 pounds of explosives to accomplish this feat.

The yellow Mercedes Benz truck had pulled in to the security area and sped past Marines who were on their post. Because of the rules of engagement, Marines were not permitted to even have a magazine in their weapon. In the time it took for the Marines to load a magazine and chamber a round, the truck was beyond their post. The Marines were virtually helpless against this zealous terrorist.

Seconds later the truck crashed through the front of the building and came to rest in the lobby. The magnitude of the explosion could be felt more than a half mile away at the COC where Mellinger was working.

The explosion ripped walls off the buildings near by as the twisted metal and concrete which once supported the building was lifted by the explosion and then crashed down upon the sleeping BLT personnel. The time was 6:22 a.m., only eight minutes before reveille.

In the next few minutes many people were dazed, confused and in awe of the devastating blast. The screams of pain belled from inside the mass of rubble which had once been the four-story headquarters.

"There were seven people on the roof when the building blew. One died, one was injured and five walked away. That was probably the safest part of the building," Mellinger said.

The appalling realization of the explosion's effect struck Mellinger and Cowdrey as they turned on to the road leading to the BLT.

"When we got past the MAU (Marine Amphibious Unit) headquarters in the jeep I could see that walls in the MAU building were blown out and then I saw the BLT building which was just a huge pile of twisted steel and rubble, Mellinger said in solemn reflection. "I knew then that we had many dead and injured in the area."

Marines immediately rallied to begin rescue attempts. Even after 10 years Mellinger cannot recall the disaster without showing great emotion.

"We divided into four companies. Each company took one-quarter of the building and began digging for survivors and pulling out the dead. I remember that approximately 70 people who were in the building actually survived the blast," Mellinger said as he held back the tears. "Some of those people were maimed and disfigured to the point that it would have been better if they had died during the explosion rather than have to endure the suffering."

Survivors were taken to any available hospital and the USS Iwo Jima, which was not equipped for mass casualties. This made accountability difficult.

"We decided to determine who had survived and not who had died," Mellinger said. "Many of the dead were dismembered and unidentifiable, so rather than speculate we only determined who had lived. The next several days were very difficult for everyone there."

The assistance by other multinational peacekeeping forces was also something which Mellinger respectfully recalls.

"The French, who were also attacked the same day and suffered several casualties as well, came to help us. I will never forget them for what they did," Mellinger said. "They had their own problems but they were helping us. I have a lot of respect for those guys."

The pain which Mellinger and others experienced was difficult both mentally and emotionally.

"For the first year after the bombing I lived day-by-day. Everyday I would remember friends and fellow Marines and what we went through together," the 21-year veteran said. "Marines who died in the bombing did not die in vain. They died for their country. All of us realized that we didn't pick the place we went to, but followed the orders and completed the mission."

Mellinger feels strongly that Marines could have gone through the entire tour without a casualty. Politics and military operations have been a sore spot with many people since Vietnam.

"It took the tragedy in Beirut to reinforce the effects from the Vietnam War. Politics and military operations do not mix well," Mellinger said. "But I know that the Marines did all they could to protect the areas they were responsible for."

One of the positive results of the tragedy was that Gen. Al Gray, Commandant of the Marine Corps, implemented the Fleet Antiterrorist Security Team Companies in 1989. These companies trained in antiterrorism on the east and west coasts and have operated throughout the world since being formed.

"The FAST companies were formed as the direct result of Beirut," the sergeant major said. "I had the privilege of serving as the first sergeant of the East Coast team in 1989 and operated in Panama during that time. I was able to teach some of my experiences to the troops during this time."

Mellinger has since went on with his military career and still hopes to return to the fleet for his next duty assignment. But for those days in Lebanon the memories still linger, the good and the bad. The day Mellinger stood before the Beirut Memorial at Camp Lejeune the realization of the tragedy hit home.

"As I stood at the Beirut Memorial and saw the families of the Marines who had perished, I realized that the Marines died doing their job. My heart went out to a wife who was pregnant, the children who will never see their father, and mothers and fathers who had buried their sons. They are the ones who suffered the most," Mellinger stressed.

Cpl. Aaron Martin

SgtMaj. Steve Mellinger displays a picture of the Beirut explosion with the words, "They came in Peace." Mellinger was in Beirut during the bombing which claimed the lives of 241 Marines, soldiers and sailors. The term "They came in Peace" is also inscribed on the Beirut Memorial in Jacksonville, N.C.

Marines have opportunity to golf with Legends of Golf

By Julie Mall
MWR

The Legends of Golf in the Klipper Classic is just around the corner and a few Marines will have an opportunity to golf free with the "Legends."

The Legends will be teaming up with amateurs in the Pro-Am Tournament beginning at 7:45 a.m. on Tuesday, Oct. 26. Up to 18 sponsored Marines will be paired with the Pros and other tournament participants. Commercial sponsors have donated the $250 entry fee for the active duty Marines to play in the tournament.

"This is a great opportunity for active duty Marines to be able to participate in the tournament with the Legends of Golf, all thanks to the people and companies who sponsored them," said Chuck Larson, Klipper Classic Tournament Director.

in the tournament have been participating in a series of competitions that started in August. The Peoria system of scoring has been used to determine each player's handicap. The players with the lowest scores will be chosen to play in the tournament.

"The best part of being able to play in the tournament for me was being able to play golf with my idols. I have been playing golf since I was eight and this was a great chance to meet them, said GySgt. Earle Hartfield, a sponsored Marine in last year's tournament.

The sponsors making it possible for the Marines to play in the tournament are: United Airlines; APP Hawaii; Dawn Patrol; Hawaiian Isles Kona Coffee; Sato and Associates; Ameron HC&D; Gentry Hawaii Ltd.; Hawaiian Optical; Royal Hawaiian Movers; Acurus; Prudential Insurance; KOP Distributing; McDonald's and Shindaiwa.

The Legends of Golf in the Klipper Classic is a Pro-Am Tournament which features 18 Senior PGA professionals, such as Lee Elder, Larry Laoretti, Don Bies and more. The Pros will team up with amateur players in the Pro-Am. Following the Pro-Am, at 12:30 p.m., will be the Bank of America Professional Golf Clinic on hole number one. The Honolulu Ford Shoot-Out, where the pros will compete for thousands of dollars in prize money, follows the golf clinic.

Dental Devil Dog Dash attracts more than 200

By Sgt. Lou Ramirez
Staff Writer

Early on the the morning of Oct. 13 runners were waiting with anticipation for the start of the first annual Dental Devil Dog Dash. As the megaphone signaled "go" more than 220 runners eagerly crossed the starting line to began the 7 kilometer run.

The runners began at 21st Dental Co., then proceeded along the flight line. Runners then encountered their first minor obstacle, a small hill which took them past the golf course's 16th tee.

Even though at this point some runners started lagging behind, Troy Springer, 1st place overall finisher, continued to lead to the point many were afraid of, Kansas Tower hill (KT).

"All the hills gave the race a lot of variety. Going up KT was hard but when you came down, it gave you an extra push," said Lillian Rodriguez, 2nd place female overall finisher.

The majority of the runners seemed to agree the part which made the race interesting was the hills they had to run. They also agreed it was one of the things that made this 7K run challenging. "The race was good and challenging but it's hard to pace yourself when the run is so hilly," Springer said.

This was not enough to slow him down and Springer was the first runner to cross the line with a time of 22:51, shortly behind him was Rick Jones with a time of 23:31.

Jones, who is recovering from stress fractures, did not let this fact stop him from doing the one thing he loves to do best... competitive running.

He said he just did not want to miss this race and although it was a short race it was very challenging.

"What I really didn't expect was this many people to show up but I guess for $2.00 you can't beat it," Jones said.

The large number of participants also came as a surprise to those who organize the run.

"The turn out was better than we had expected," said Chief Petty Officer Rodney Camacho, who helped organize the run. "We were glad it turned out so well because a lot of work went into it."

"Everybody here (at 21st Dental Co.) helped out a little with the organization. After all the work put into it we were really pleased that everything went like clock work. We were especially pleased to have such a fantastic turn out," said Chief Petty Officer Russel Bache, 21st Dental Co.

One of the best things about the run was it counted as the first event for the Commanding General's Fitness Series, explained Navy Captain R.K. Flath, Navy Day Run coordinator, at the awards ceremony.

The top nine finishers will receive points depending on their finishing times. The top three overall finishers and the top three finishers in each age and sex category will receive 15, 12 and 10 points. The top nine teams will also receive points.

There were many newcomers to the running world at the Navy Day Run but whether they were an experienced or inexperienced runners the Navy Day Run provided participants with not only a challenge but also an opportunity to have a good time.

K-Bay loses in Slug fest

By Cpl. Barry Baker
Staff Writer

The Kaneohe Bay Varsity Baseball team tried to improve their 1-1 Oahu Fall Baseball League record Sunday at Ala Wai Park, but their comeback in the slug fest fell short. They lost to the Fitzgerald White Sox, 15-13.

The White Sox (3-0) capitalized on some fundamental errors any team would struggle through with the lack of playing together.

"It's very difficult for the players because we don't have the same players at the same positions every game," said Ken Weisenberg, manager. "But, they make it up with a lot of heart for the game."

Timing, basic fundamentals and teamwork needed for a baseball team to perform were evidently lacking in the Marine's performance during their third game of the season.

The White Sox' lack of team playing was also evident. "It's still early in the season," said Chris Choi, White Sox coach/player. "I am still moving my players around to find the right combination."

Both teams sent up their entire batting line up in the first inning. The White Sox scored six runs on one hit, four walks and a Marine fielding error. The Marines scored four runs on four hits and a White Sox fielding error. Both starting pitchers failed to complete the inning.

Lead-off batter, center fielder Ricky Brown started the first inning off for the Marines as he took an 0-2 pitch and sent it nearly 400 feet over the center fielder's head for a triple. (Ala Wai Park only has an out field fence in right field, preventing the right fielder from chasing a fly ball into the Ala Wai River).

The second batter, left fielder Norris Pla, who had just joined the team on Saturday, trotted to first base after he was walked. On the next pitch, Pla tried to steal second, but was caught in an intentional rundown, giving Brown the opportunity to score from third. Brown slid safely into second.

Short stop Gary Hernandez was the next Marine batter. He put a line drive down the left-field line for his first of two triples, scoring Pla easily. White Sox manager, Chris Choi had seen enough and replaced his starting pitcher.

Catcher Dave Bissell took the first pitch and hit it towards the hole between short and third, beating out the throw. Hernandez crossed the plate for the Marines' third run.

Matt Minter then singled down the right-field line moving Bissell to third. Chris Montgomery batted in Bissell on a groundout to third base for the first out of the inning.

Second baseman Jack McKinney popped up in the infield for what looked like the second out of the inning, but miscommunication between the White Sox put Minter on third and McKinney on first.

Jesus Arredondo, Marine extra hitter (a position that allows a team a tenth batter), had what looked like a picture-perfect bunt single, but was called out when the catcher threw down to first base and hit Arredondo in the back. The home plate umpire called Arredondo out for interference. He said Arredondo was inside the chalk line.

Minter and McKinney returned to second and first, respectively. Third baseman Dan Bissell, the tenth batter of the inning, flew out to right field to end the hour-long first inning.

The White Sox took advantage of two Marine fielding errors in the top of the second, scoring five more runs on two singles, two walks (one intentionally) and a fielder's choice. Again, 10 White Sox stepped into the batter's box.

The Marine half of the second was short and not so sweet; three up, three down.

A hit batsman and a triple, coupled with a fielding error allowed two more White Sox runners to cross the plate in the top of the third.

Both teams' bats were quiet in the third and fourth innings.

In the top of the fifth, the Marines' defense shined. After pitcher Rob Julian gave up a single to the White Sox lead-off batter, catcher Dan Bissell fired a bullet to second baseman McKinney to nail the runner trying to steal.

The Marine offensive attack shone once again in the bottom of the fifth as they sent 10 batters to the plate. Three hits, including a Pla double and Hernandez' second triple, and three walks allowed the Marines to score six runs, closing the gap to three, 13-10.

Due to a two hour and 15 minute time limit placed on games, the umpire said the sixth inning would be the last.

The White Sox sent five batters to the plate, adding two more runs to their lead.

Down by five, the Marines looked as if they were going to have a traditional Marine Corps comeback. With runners on first and second, Pla stepped to the plate, took the first pitch and sent it over the center fielder's head, nearly 400 feet from home plate, for a three-run home run. Alas, the Marines couldn't produce any more runs, losing 15-13.

"My goal is to bring baseball back to K-Bay," Weisenberg said. "We've had outstanding support from the MWR athletic department and Mr. (Walt) Skierskowski. (1st Marine Expeditionary Brigade) Commanding General (BGen. R.F.) Vercouteran even came out to watch us play."

The varsity team was put together to form a team to play at an Armed Forces Tournament in November. Weisenberg took it upon himself to get the team into the Oahu Baseball League.

Baseball may be making a comeback on K-Bay, slowly, but, when asked for hardball players to tryout for the varsity team, more than 40 showed up. "I'm not going to cut anyone, and I will always be looking for good players," Weisenberg said.

From the cheap seats: A sports commentary

By John Magnus
KMCAS Athletic Director

World Series pits Toronto against who? The Phillies . . . no way can they come from the bottom of the cellar to the World Series; or can they?

Back in August, I picked the White Sox, Blue Jays, Phillies and Giants to win their respective divisions in the Major League Baseball races. Well, batting .750 isn't too bad, but I made the unfortunate call of picking the Giants to win the World Series. I'm out of that, but then who would have thought the Braves would win about 75 percent of their remaining games while the Giants would play .500 ball? The Braves surge and Giants choke made for a down-to-the-wire race that was against the odds.

I picked the Blue Jays to defeat the White Sox in five games mostly based on the Jays' experience. Well, the Blue Jays won it in six and their experience showed. But the White Sox are very young and will be serious contenders in the next few years. The Blue Jays' experience may provide them a repeat of last year's World Series.

And what about those Phillies? The ever-annoying Atlanta chop-shop was cut down from winning the World Series once again. The Braves, with all that hitting and pitching have been doing it virtually from day one of the season, so maybe now people ought to take notice of their abilities.

So I picked the Giants and Blue Jays to be in the World Series. That wasn't a bad choice, considering that it was the second week of August. After all, the Giants were cruising through the National League and the Blue Jays had three of the top hitters in the American League. The Phillies and White Sox seemed to be logical choices for their respective divisions.

But the Atlanta Braves had acquired first baseman Fred McGriff from the San Diego Padres "blue light special in aisle three." The Braves' organization hoped that McGriff would add a much needed spark. He didn't add a spark; he was the fuse to an offensive case of dynamite. The Braves offense erupted and turned into the perfect compliment for the young, outstanding pitchers. The tomahawk chop reared its ugly head once again, and the heat was turned up as the Braves began their pursuit of the then-division leading San Francisco Giants.

It all eventually came down to the last day of the season; what an ideal setting. The Braves pulled out their much needed victory while the Giants choked in L.A. I think the Giants just ran out of gas.

Meanwhile, Philadelphia led the N.L. East from almost the beginning of the season and fought off a late season slide and a surge from the Montreal Expos. The Phillies were definitely the overlooked team of all the division contenders, mostly because they finished the 1992 season in last place, and they didn't make any grandiose personnel moves to shake their team. The Phillies front office personnel must have been very comfortable with their roster.

With the Braves going full steam ahead, it appeared that they would win their third straight National League Championship. But the opposite happened. The two month long battle to catch and overtake the Giants wore them out. Ron Gant and Dave Justice, Atlanta's leading RBI men, became invisible on offense during the league championship. Another Braves team left their fans frustrated and whining.

The Phillies figured that nobody ever gave them a chance. So what the heck, they thought they would go out and play their game with all the fun and enthusiasm they could muster. It worked. It wasn't pretty, some of their top RBI men didn't hit too well, but there was one big difference; they hit when they needed to hit. The Phillies went worst to first and became a rather unlikely contender for the World Series crown.

In the American League West the White Sox were fending off the Texas Rangers and Kansas City Royals. The White Sox offense was pretty much left to M.V.P. Frank Thomas and the pitching led by Jack McDowell. But the young pitchers, Jason Bere and Wilson Alvarez came through with 13 victories in September between them. This is what really saved the White Sox down the stretch.

Toronto's hit parade of Olerud, Molitor, Alomar and the rest, would lead them to the American League Championship. With the experience of being to the playoffs several times, I felt they would overmatch the younger, more inconsistent White Sox.

After losing the first two games in Chicago, and going to Toronto for three more, the White Sox were in deep kim-chee. But alas, the youngsters, Bere and Alvarez, came with back-to-back victories, guaranteeing a return to Chicago. Of course, being from Chicago, I knew that the Chicago baseball jinx would eventually show up. It did. The Blue Jays won with clutch hitting, pitching and experience; the ingredients the White Sox lacked. Another Chicago sports team teases.

The Phillies and Blue Jays in the World Series, who'd 'a thunk it. The Blue Jays were a pre-season favorite to repeat, but the Phillies, c'mon. The White Sox finished second in their division in 1992 and were 16-to-1 odds in pre-season to win the World Series. So you can imagine what the odds were for the 1992 last place Phillies to win the 1993 World Series. Anyway, the Blue Jays have clutch hitting, pitching, enthusiasm and a fun-loving nature. I like the people who like to have fun. And they'll have fun in six games. (Hopefully the Series won't be over by the time you read this):

Spice of life!

By Maggie Milham

Editor's Note: Spice of Life is a column for military spice (plural of spouse). You are invited to write Maggie with any questions you have concerning military life. Please address your letter to: Joint Public Affairs Office, (Hawaii Marine, Spice of Life), Box 63003, MCAS Kaneohe Bay, HI 96863-3003.

Second, the writer was unwilling to get dressed and stand outside waiting for the M.P.'s. She was afraid to become involved in a clash with her new neighbors. Without her help, there was little the M.P.'s could do.

I would like to apologize to the fine young men and women of the Military Police. They are doing everything they can to keep the base safe and certainly don't deserve adverse publicity.

To the concerned readers: I appreciate your keeping me on my toes. Next time I won't be so quick to cut information for the sake of space. The point I wanted to make remains the same, however. Family abuse is the responsibility of everyone. If you are a witness to it, you need to become involved no matter how hard it is. People are always asking why "They" never do anything. Perhaps it is time to take a bit of responsibility onto ourselves and become "They."

Dear Maggie,

I have a complaint. I am so very tired of being treated rudely by MWR employees. Granted, there are those who are very helpful and pleasant, however, they are in the minority. The bulk of the problem is in the exchange. I realize people have bad days, but this goes on any given day of the week. I know how hard their job can be. However, they are constantly rude, that is, if they even speak to you at all! If they dislike the job that much, find a new one! MWR has a lot to do with the problem. They don't care. They know we have little choice but to shop the exchange due to the high cost of goods and services here in Hawaii. Hopefully, this letter will have some sort of positive effect. If not, at least I got it off my chest.

P.S. Please, if possible, send a copy of this to MWR. Maybe they'll listen to you. My phone calls and comment cards have been to no avail. Thanks!

Sick of It

Dear Sick of It,

Wow! That's a lot on your chest! As you suggested, I have turned your letter over to MWR, but they can't call you back because you left out your phone number and address.

I can agree that it is sometimes hard to find a clerk at the exchange when you need one, but I've never had one be rude to me. Do you have a specific instance? What happened? Who was involved? How did you respond? Did you speak to anyone in Customer Service? Unfortunately, "rude" is a value judgement. You will need to substantiate your reasoning. Did a clerk make a face at you? Were you verbally attacked? Did the salesperson deliberately turn away and ignore you? Give a name, date, place and event. The MWR folks would probably be more willing to discipline the employee.

One of the biggest problems at the exchange has been covering the entire store with fewer clerks. Money constraints have resulted in cutting back on employees and their hours. Often that means there is no clerk available to help a customer's immediate need. At least we have cash registers in each department! Have you ever tried to find a clerk at Pearl Harbor or Hickam? Have you tried to check out at either place? It's a nightmare. Compared to them, I find our exchange a welcome relief.

This doesn't mean your complaint isn't justified. There may indeed, be rude salespeople at the Exchange. Next time it happens, take a name (they all wear nametags) and report the incident to Customer Service. Don't wait until later and spend fruitless hours fuming. It's bad for your blood pressure and it's easier to get a response in person. The folks at MWR are always trying to improve things at the Exchange, but they need specifics before anything can be done. Hope that helps. I'll send you their response, if you'll let me know your address.

Dear Readers,
The past week has brought a number of letters commenting about the letter from Freaked Out concerning spouse abuse. Most of them focused on the response of the Military Police to the writer's phone call. I wanted to clarify the information from the column and let you know that the M.P.'s were not at fault in the investigation. The letter was quite long, and I necessarily cut it. In the process, I omitted some important facts. First, the writer of the letter was new to base housing and unfamiliar with the street names. She was unable to identify the house to the officer, but did manage to give directions to the street. A patrol car was sent to cruise the street, but, since the fighting had stopped, was unable to locate the correct house.

Equal opportunity

SSgt. Eileen Osterhout
FOIA

Prejudice is a negative feeling or dislike based upon a faulty and inflexible generalization. It may be felt or expressed. It may be directed toward a group as a whole, or toward an individual because he or she is a member of that group.

There are five levels of intensity in acting out prejudice. The first and most common one is antilocution. Antilocution is name calling, labeling. It can be anything from a racial slur to standing on a corner shouting obscenities about one group.

Avoidance: a prejudice that leads the individual to avoid members of the disliked group, even perhaps at considerable inconvenience. Driving through three towns to get gas because you won't buy any gas "from one of them," or never offering a Marine a ride because she hangs with "their" kind.

Discrimination: the prejudiced person makes detrimental distinctions of an active sort, literally acting out the prejudicial expression. The recruiter thinks this group is stupid, so all the people in that group are put in unskilled MOS's, or this Marine is from that group and I don't like that group, so I'll send him to the field for the holidays.

Physical attack: under conditions of heightened emotion, prejudice may lead to acts of violence or semi-violence. This could be physical or material. Physically touching someone, with a violent intent because they belong to a certain group, burning a cross, running a family out of town or destroying the store they own are all examples of physical attack.

Extermination: the ultimate degree of violent expression of acting out a prejudice. Nazi Germany, Skinheads and the KKK have all practiced extermination, singular and plural.

If you have any questions regarding prejudices contact SSgt. Osterhout, 257-2130, Equal Opportunity Staff Advisor.

World's fastest boats at Hydrofest

Pearl Harbor sponsors exciting boat racing

MWR Pearl Harbor

Prepare for a weekend of 'unlimited' thrills as the fourth annual Outrigger Hotels Hydrofest roars into Pearl Harbor October 23-24.

Hydrofest are available at all Blockbuster Video and NAPA stores, military ticket outlets and Outrigger Hotels activity desks through Oct. 22.

This year race fans will enjoy expanded public viewing areas with grandstand seating next to the start tower on Ford Island.

More prime spectator viewing is available on the Pearl City Peninsula where the hydroplanes make their dramatic rooster tail turns and shoot 40 tons of water into the sky.

Parking and ferry boat passage to Ford Island is available near the Arizona Memorial Complex. Free parking is available at the Pearl City Peninsula.

Bring your beach chairs and blankets and between race heats enjoy HydroJam the biggest concert event of the year featuring two days of Hawaii's hottest bands performing from 12:30 to 5 p.m.

Pahinui Brothers, Pandanus Club, Kapena and Del Beazley & the Bridge Boys. The fun continues Sunday with Tropical Knights, Mana'o Company, Ka'u Crater Boys and Israel Kamakawiwo'ole.

More hot racing action will be featured on Ford Island with the Hawaii Formula Karts and the South Seas watercraft racing and ski show.

performs death-defying aerobatics in his Pitt's Special stunt bi-plane. Aircraft enthusiasts can explore more than 50 antique, military and experimental aircraft displayed on historic Luke Field.

Keiki will find their thrills in Ford Island's fun zone with E.K. Fernandez kiddie rides, a video game arcade, pony rides and the Belgian draft horse hay wagon.
