Lest we forget ...

The POW/MIA flag was raised at the base flagpole Friday in observance of National POW/MIA Day. Marines, DoD civilians and guests of MCB Hawaii gathered at the morning colors ceremony to honor those men and women who were prisoners of war or have been listed as missing in action.

Corps changes travel charge contractors

Sgt. Steven Williams
Combat Correspondent

NationsBank will replace American Express as the contractor for the DoD's Travel Charge Card Program Nov. 30.

The changeover will effect more than 190,000 cardholders in the Department of the Navy, according to information in a Sept. 14 administrative message.

Approximately 7,500 of those cardholders are in the Pacific Fleet.

NationsBank will mail the Visa cards to respective agency program coordinators (personnel given responsibility for accountability and security of the cards) to replace the American Express cards before Nov. 30. The APCs will then distribute the cards to individual unit cardholders, and the American Express cards will be destroyed.

The NationsBank cards will be used by military and DoD personnel on official temporary additional duty travel. And like the American Express cards, they will function as a way to reserve and pay for services and incidental expenses for TAD purposes.

"They will still have the same basic use," said Master Chief Ben See CHARGE, A-4

CMC sends holiday message

On behalf of our entire Corps, I want to extend my warmest wishes to all of our Jewish Marines, Sailors and their families as you prepare to celebrate the high holy days of Rosh Hashanah and Yom Kippur.

This is a time of spiritual renewal and self-examination — a time to become closer with God. These observances are most significant as the Jewish community around the globe prays for worldwide peace and harmony in the new year.

Rosh Hashanah, a celebration of the new year, begins at sundown Sept. 20, and concludes at sunset Sept. 22. Those of reform Jewish faith generally observe only the first day of Rosh Hashanah. As the shofar, or ram's horn, is sounded during the service, hearts are stirred to come closer to God both in deed and thought.

Yom Kippur, the day of atonement, is a day of total abstinence from food and drink. Observance begins at sundown Sept. 29 and concludes at sunset Sept. 30. This is a day of deep introspection, when repentance is sought for sins. The fast concludes with the sounding of the shofar, which marks divine forgiveness with hope for a new beginning and eternal peace.

Commanders will ensure that those who desire to attend the high holy day observances are afforded liberal leave and liberty.

Semper Fidelis.
C.C. Krulak, General
Commandant of the Marine Corps

K-Bay crash crewman honored

PFC David Salazar
Combat Correspondent

A Kaneohe Bay Marine was named the Navy and Marine Corps' "Crash Crewman of the Year" in a ceremony held during the Department of Defense International Fire Rescue Convention in Louisville, Ky., Sept. 12.

Staff Sgt. Ramon Perez Jr., assistant section leader at Aircraft, Rescue and Firefighting department, Marine Corps Air Facility, was presented the Tommy Troutner Award, which recognized him as the best crash crewman in the Department of the Navy.

Candidates for the Troutner award are nominated by ARFF departments throughout the Navy and Marine Corps. Nominees are judged on accomplishments, community service, personal goals and the progress of those goals within the crash, fire and rescue field.

"For SSgt. Perez to win this award, it's indicative of all of his accomplishments ... he's a stellar performer. Anyone who knows him can see this," said SgtMaj. Anthony Baxton, sergeant major of MCAF here.

SSgt. Ramon Perez Jr., who was named "Crash Crewman of the Year," inspects a Marine's firefighting gear during a routine bunker gear drill.

"It's not surprising to see him get this recognition, because of the type of Marine he is," said Baxton.

Marines who work with the crash crewman of the year echoed the sergeant major's sentiments.

"He's very meticulous. Attention to detail — that's him," said SSgt. George Berger, section leader at Aircraft rescue and Firefighting here. "He takes other Marines and gets their standards up to his."

Perez admitted he appreciated the recognition of the Troutner Award, but the modest hard-charger insists he never really set a goal to win this award.

"I didn't work for it at all. When I was at Camp Pendleton, I was recommended for it," said Perez.

But when the Crash Crewman of the Year board compared his package to those of the other Marines and Sailors recommended for the Troutner Award, Perez' performance and character stood out above the rest.

According to the Queens, N.Y., native, this and other awards are nice, but he receives even more satisfaction knowing he can have a positive impact on the Marine Corps by influencing junior Marines.

"The best part of my job is working with junior Marines just coming into the fleet," he said. "Seeing them through and eventually helping them with their problems and hearing them say 'thank you' is probably the best thing."

HMT-301 adopts Kailua school

Cpl. Trent Lowry
Combat Correspondent

Marine Helicopter Training Squadron 301 and Kailua Elementary School formally teamed up as part of the Adopt-a-School program Sept. 21.

About 560 students were present at the elementary school's cafeteria to welcome the Marine goodwill ambassadors to their school.

The HMT-301 leathernecks celebrated the new relationship with a presentation of the national and Marine Corps colors by the squadron color guard. LtCol. Phil Gleason, HMT-301 commanding officer, also presented Michael Harano, the Kailua Elementary School principal, with a plaque commemorating the occasion.

As a part of the Adopt-a-School program, HMT-

301 Marines agree to provide Kailua's students with positive role models for years to come.

"We most definitely have real potential to help the students out here," Gleason said. "Kailua's principal and I talked about at least three different types of projects I sincerely believe we'll be able to help them with."

The most important part of the pact comes when squadron volunteers help the students and staff bolster the education process. The Marines are scheduled to volunteer their time as mentors and tutors in such scholastic subjects as math, reading and social studies.

"I think the Marines will really be able to help in all subjects," said Harano. "Since Marines come from all different parts of the country, they'll be a unique asset in geography, for instance."

"We will also ask the Marines to help our Fun Fair in November run smoothly," Harano said, referring to the fund-raising event that helps pay for student activities at the elementary school.

The idea to join Kailua Elementary with HMT-301 in an Adopt-a-School agreement was initiated by SgtMaj. Collin Cotterell, the squadron's sergeant major. He said he got the idea after having volunteered with the school when he was assigned to 1st Radio Battalion.

"The kids and the faculty here are great," Cotterell said. "The most important benefit the Marines can give the children is the one-on-one interaction and to be positive role models for them."

HMT-301 Marines said they felt like they would also benefit from the relationship with Kailua Elementary School.

College of Continuing Education begins academic year at MCB Hawaii

Retired Col. Bill Peoples
Regional Coordinator for CCE

The Marine Corps University's College of Continuing Education satellite campus, located above the Staff NCO Academy, launches the distance education program academic year when the first Command and Staff College seminar convenes Oct. 5 at 6 p.m.

This is a major, positive leap toward fulfillment of the CMC Planning Guidance tasking. It effectively launches the long awaited, and much needed, support structure through which Marine officers can complete their professional military education.

Through the satellite campus, the CCE provides resident seminars at MCB Hawaii for the C&SC and the Amphibious Warfare School DEP. By employing professional educators and mentors, a series of regularly scheduled on-base seminars, a tele-video conference lecture series and locally available video tape lectures, the CCE gives structure to the courses, enables officers

Security increased at Hickam's AMC

Sgt. Steven Williams
Combat Correspondent

Security measures have recently increased at Hickam Air Force Base's Air Mobility Command terminal, where military personnel catch space-available military flights.

The 635th Air Mobility Support Squadron, the unit in charge of the terminal, implemented a single point for entry/exit and started X-raying luggage, checking identification and having passengers walk through metal detectors.

"Air Mobility Command has been integrating higher security measures since the Khobar Towers bombing," said to Air Force Master Sgt. Timothy Veen, 635th AMSS passenger services superintendent.

The single point of entry was established due to recent United States embassy bombings, according to Veen.

The new security measures affect active-duty, retired military personnel and their families who fly on a space-available basis, and pre-booked funded passengers authorized by the Department of Defense.

Once personnel have been screened into the lock-in area, they can leave but then have to get screened again prior to re-entry. Lock-in area includes the AMC terminal building, car rental and exchanges within the terminal. Passengers arriving at Hickam who were screened earlier for a flight from other bases won't be screened again unless they leave the lock-in area.

The increased security "isn't to turn people away," said Veen. "It's to ensure their safety while they're with us."

To find out flight schedules without being locked-in, Veen said flights are broadcasted on Hickam AFB's channel 5. However, for MCB Hawaii and other personnel without Hickam television access, the flight schedules are posted on a monitor near an outside window at the terminal.

More information and flight schedules are available on a recording at 449-6833. For a passenger service agent, call 449-1515.

Chefs compete for honors

PFC David Salazar
Combat Correspondent

After more than four hours of sizzling and sweating Sept. 17, one food service specialist proved to be the top chef of Anderson Hall — PFC Christopher Strobel.

Four other food service specialists competed with Strobel for the Chef of the Quarter title, but only one could "take the cake."

The cooks were tested on food service information and went before an oral board, said MSgt. David Steward, base food service technician here.

"We started out with about 15 competitors. Eventually, the field was narrowed down to five," he said.

These five cooks then chose entrees, side dishes and desserts to prepare for a panel of eight judges, Steward said.

The chefs were judged on food presentation and taste. The judges briefly interviewed each of them and sampled a small portion of each chef's display, said Steward.

Strobel, a food service specialist with Combat Service Support Group 3, boasted a menu featuring chicken cordon bleu, pasta stuffed tomatoes, Italian whitebean salad and chocolate almond frozen torte.

"I wanted to serve something healthy, so I took a recipe and made it low-fat," Strobel said. "I baked the main dish instead of frying it and substituted the regular cheese with low-fat cheese."

Strobel was awarded a trophy, 96 hours of liberty, a certificate of commendation and a chance to work along side Daniel Delbrel, executive chef at the Sheraton Moana Surfside for two days. Delbrel was on hand to judge the competition.

"I really look forward to working with Mr. Delbrel. It will give me a chance see what the commercial industry is like," said Strobel, who plans to become a professional chef someday.

According to Steward, all of the chefs benefitted from the competition.

"It's an opportunity for young cooks to display their culinary abilities by putting their food out to Marines," said Steward. "The competitions give them a sense of pride and a chance to hone their culinary skills," said CWO-2 Douglas Bush, food service officer here.

"We need to have competitions like this," said Steward, who has been in the career field for nearly 24 years. "We need to show these Marines how much they are appreciated."

PFT route changes

Staff Report
Public Affairs Office

A new physical fitness test run route was announced for MCB Hawaii, Kaneohe Bay, Monday.

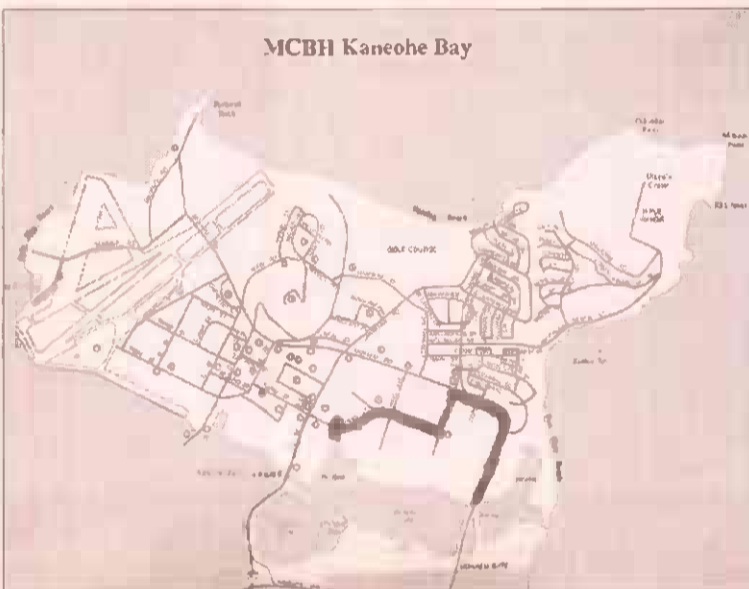

The new route, released by MCB Hawaii G-3, affects all Marines who take the PFT aboard the base.

The course now starts near the bridge on 3rd street, adjacent to the softball field. Runners then will follow Seldon Street as it veers to the right, in front of CSSG-3 headquarters. At Harris Ave., the route turns left. Runners will turn right on Mokapu Rd., as if they were heading out the back gate. The turnaround point is just before the Nu-upia Ekolu and Kaluapuhi ponds. Runners reverse the route and return to the starting line to finish the PFT run.

All Marines running a PFT are required to run on the bike trail, according to MSgt. Ruthven P. Boucaud, base training chief.

The new PFT route has been marked with red paint at the start line, the 1-mile mark, the half-way point and the 2-mile mark, according to Boucaud.

Every Clime and Place IOC conducts training in Hebron

Sgt. Jason J. Bortz
Quantico Public Affairs

HEBRON, Md. — Lieutenants from the Infantry Officer's Course, located at MCB Quantico, Va., conducted training in a realistic environment Sept. 3 and 4 here to prepare for urban operations.

"The training sites on base do not offer the realism that a real town such as Hebron can offer," said Capt. Charles Black, an instructor at the IOC. "On Base, Marines act as role players, but the lieutenants still know they are Marines." In Hebron, the lieutenants had to deal with curious children and local residents who had no active role in the exercise, but the Marines were never sure who was or wasn't part of the exercise.

In planning the exercise, IOC first received permission from Hebron's town council. Black grew up in Hebron and still had family who lived there which helped the process. After being presented with the scenario, the council voted to allow the training. Fliers were sent to local businesses to ensure no one would be surprised when the Marines came into town to conduct their urban train. Several residents volunteered to participate in the exercise by providing storage space for rubber rifles and by giving information to the lieutenants when asked.

Safety was an important factor during training. The sheriff's department was involved in all planning stages. During the exercise, patrols by the sheriff's department were increased to provide safety for the town and the Marines. Four Air Force Reserve trauma nurses, a Marine civil affairs representative and a Navy lawyer were also on hand to handle any problems.

The exercise began around noon Sept. 3, when a CH-46 Sea Knight and a CH-53D Sea Stallion landed on a farm owned by Black's father just outside of town. The scenario was that a farming town in a foreign country, had been hit by typhoons and lost most of its crops.

Because some angry farmers felt the local government was not doing enough to help, the farmers were trying to destroy the political system. The Marine Corps was tasked to provide security while the United Nations handled humanitarian relief.

After landing, the Marines patrolled toward the town center to meet the mayor. They were welcomed by more than 30 town residents and media who lined the main street leading to town hall. Among the crowd were four Marines dressed in civilian attire who were playing the role of angered "farmers."

Once the town hall was secure, the platoon commander met with the mayor, Janet Schlesinger, who is also the town manager. She gave them information about the four angered farmers and it was up to the lieutenants to decide how best to handle the situation.

The Marines began to patrol the streets to gather information about the farmers, asking local residents if they had seen anything or anyone unusual. Many children tried to help the Marines by saying they had seen someone with "hair like yours" across town.

Within a few hours, clues began to arrive about the farmers. The Marines were told to go to a specific address to search a garage for weapons. When the Marines arrived at the house, they were met by Sheriff Babe Wilson. Wilson, a full time deputy with the sheriff's department, volunteered to play the role of the town sheriff who was not always loyal to the government. The Marines found several weapons, but when they tried to have the owner of the garage, who was another volunteer, arrested, the sheriff refused to arrest her.

The following morning, the Marines, tired and frustrated at not being able to find the farmers, received their final tip - the farmers had been seen in an abandoned warehouse on the North side of town. The Marines moved out and surrounded the warehouse. A squad of Marines then entered the warehouse, and without further incident all the farmers inside were escorted out.

"The training achieved all of our objectives: realism, interaction with civilians and community relations," said Black. "These Marines cannot get this kind of realistic training on base."

"These young lieutenants will take this experience with them to the fleet and to the young Marines they will command," said CWO2 David Dunfee, a Marine gunner with IOC 5-98. "When I went to Cuba with 3/2, I didn't know how to use civil affairs and other outside agencies, and we had to deal with kids and with people shooting at us."

"I hope we can do this for every class, but not always in the same town," said Black. "This kind of training helped prepare the lieutenants for possible urban operations in the future."

CHARGE, From A-1

Delacruz, program coordinator for the Pacific Fleet's travel card program.

The cards will continue to be a charge card and not a credit card, he added. Personnel must complete their travel claims and pay the full amount charged to the card within 30 days of the closing date of the billing statement.

There will be no interest charged for the accounts, cash advance limits will still apply, traveler's checks will continue to be an option and automatic teller machine operations will remain the same, according to the message.

A new personal identification number will be issued along with the card, but cardholders will be able to change it at their discretion.

An advantage to working with NationsBank is the Electronic Account Government Ledger System it's developing. This user-friendly, browser-based system connects to department networks, is highly secure at multiple levels and is designed to support all DoD users simultaneously, according to Delacruz.

Also, APCs can use EAGLS to establish an individual online program to include submitting new card applications, making changes to cardholders' cash/charge limits, disputing cardholders' questionable charges, cancelling or transferring cards to different activities and activating/deactivating cards.

The APCs will also be able to query monthly reports, delinquent accounts and billing statements or view current management policies.

Pacific Fleet personnel are scheduled to be trained with the new system, according to Delacruz. They should be up to speed with information in plenty of time for NationsBank to take over in two months.

Hispanic history

PFC David Salazar
Combat Correspondent

Throughout history, Hispanic Americans have played major roles in the U.S. military, fighting and giving their lives in defense of the nation.

The deeds of PFC Guy "Gabby" Gabaldon stand out in the ranks of Hispanic military achievements. Gabaldon distinguished himself as an integral during the capture of more than 1,000 enemy soldiers during World War II.

His bravery not only earned him a Silver Star, but a movie based on his endeavors — the 1960 film "From Here to Eternity." He also appeared on the NBC television show, "This is Your Life," in 1957.

Born in Los Angeles, Gabaldon was adopted and raised by a Japanese-American family, where he learned to speak Japanese fluently. During World War II, Gabaldon and his brothers joined the armed forces.

Gabaldon underwent Marine Corps recruit training and became a mortar crewman, Japanese translator and scout observer. He later received amphibious assault training and was sent to Saipan on June 15, 1944.

It was in Saipan that he was awarded the Silver Star while serving as a Japanese interpreter. The citation reads as follows:

"PFC Gabaldon entered enemy positions in caves, pillboxes, buildings, jungle brush and in the face of enemy fire, obtained vital information and aided in the capture of over 1,000 enemy civilians and enemy personnel.

Working along in the front of the lines, he contributed materially to the success of the campaign and through his efforts, a definite humane treatment of prisoners was insured.

The weakened Japanese soldiers had been commanded to fight to the last man by their officers, but Gabaldon persuaded them to surrender."

Gabaldon was taken to the United States Hospital in Oceanside, Calif. after being wounded twice.

Gabaldon's Silver Star was elevated to a Navy Cross in 1960.

Team K-Bay Marine goes for gold

Avionics technician selected for Enlisted Commissioning Program

Cpl. M.V. Trindade
Combat Correspondent

An avionics technician with Marine Heavy Helicopter Squadron 463 has crossed countries, cultures and obstacles to get to where she is now, and her journey isn't over.

Recently selected into the Enlisted Commissioning Program, Cpl. Renee Joseph will soon bid farewell to Hawaii and hello to Officer Candidate's School, which she hopes will be her next step towards a law degree and commission in the Marine Corps.

Originally from Trinidad, Joseph had to adjust to the American lifestyle at the age of 14 when her family moved to New York City.

"My mom came to America to make a better life for herself and me," Joseph said of her rough transition. "Of course, I really had no choice in the matter."

"I moved to the Bronx, which was overcrowded," the 24-year-old said. "I'm not going to say I came from the country, but with all the buildings and people, you just see things you're not used to seeing."

Joseph recalled seeing many people taken advantage of where she lived, which provided motivation for her pursuit toward a law degree.

"I hated landlords," Joseph said. "I saw so many treat their tenants poorly and it bothered me that so many tenants didn't seem to know their rights."

"My plan, even before joining the military, was to be a lawyer," said Joseph. The corporal added that she believed she could make a difference, at least within her community, by informing people of their rights.

"My ultimate goal is to help those who aren't aware of their rights," said Joseph.

However, Joseph's path toward a commission and a law degree has not been the most direct.

"I had to get my citizenship before I could go to OCS," Joseph revealed. "So I decided to enlist first."

"I don't mind having come in enlisted," she continued, "mainly because I get to see what enlisted Marines have to go through, so I'll be able to appreciate them better once I become an officer."

"She's definitely motivated," said SSgt. William Thurber, avionics chief with HMH-463. "She likes to get out there and get things done. She takes charge and is a positive influence to those around her."

After nearly two-and-a-half years as an enlisted Marine, Joseph will soon depart for OCS.

"She's getting her just reward," said SgtMaj. Arthur Taylor, HMH-463's sergeant major. "She did what was expected of her, and even more than what was expected. She'll probably be one of the better candidates out there."

Joseph credits much of her success to her family, who she said has always been supportive no matter what she decides to do.

"I never heard them say 'you can't do that,'" said Joseph. "Instead it was 'OK, if that's what you want to do, we're behind you.'"

Joseph also credits her perseverance to her very strong religious beliefs.

"A lot of things I deal with by having faith in God," said Joseph. "When things don't work out the way they should, or the way you think they should have, you just have to keep praying."

CCE, From A-1

to stay focused on their educational objectives and helps them stay on track toward completion of their PME with a reasonable amount of effort.

This is significant because each of these officers must also stay focused on the demands and responsibilities of their primary job assignments with the Fleet Marine Force or the base. They are furthering the professional development, to their significant credit, not as a full time student, but as an additional duty. This is no easy task, but it is now considerably more manageable than under the old non-resident program where an officer was mailed 65 pounds of books and told to call us when you're done.

The response to the program has been absolutely outstanding. A full 75% of eligible officers are enrolled in the C&SCDEP here. The final tally isn't in yet for the AWSDEP, but the numbers, thus far, are comparable.

The CCE will convene three C&SC seminars of 16-17 officers. Each will convene once per week on Monday, Tuesday and Thursday evenings at 6 p.m. and will be led by a member of the adjunct faculty staff. This staff includes a retired colonel with several years of ILS and TLS teaching background; a retired Navy captain and long-time instructor of National Security and Decision Making for the Naval War College; and a Ph.D., Doctor of Military History, from Hawaii Pacific University. These gentlemen have impressive military and educational credentials and will make this course interesting, enjoyable, and deserving of every minute the officer students devote to it.

The AWSDEP has considerably more flexibility in structuring the seminar groups, but the percentage of eligible officers who will participate will be just as impressive as for the C&SCDEP. We expect to convene at least 5 task organized-mentor-led seminars of 16-18 students each, and a number of smaller study groups working independently within their respective units. Final numbers for participation and seminar assignments will be completed by Oct. 5.

If you are a captain, or eligible lieutenant, and have not received a letter by COB Oct. 5, call the CCE immediately.

The only real difficulty experienced to date by the CCE is the scarcity of spaces in which to convene the seminars.

Because of the outstanding educational programs offered at MCB Hawaii, military and civilian, classroom space is at a premium. It is literally saturated; but these kinds of problems always work themselves out. MSE commanders have offered to help, and the positive, cooperative attitude of everyone here at MCB Hawaii always produces a workable solution.

Every first lieutenant, captain and major who has not fulfilled his or her PME responsibility for their current grade, and who has not yet signed up for the CCE DEP program, needs to call the Regional Coordinator, Bill Peoples, or his administrative assistant, Mrs. Tonya Kellam, ASAP at 257-1956/0459.

Caring starts deep in marrow donor's bones

Cpl. Trent Lowry
Combat Correspondent

The opportunity to save a stranger's life was a chance Petty Officer 3rd Class Scott Carter could not let pass, especially when the situation hit so close to home.

Carter

Carter, a corpsman with Combat Service Support Group 3 here, was asked to give a 7-year-old boy stricken with leukemia, one of the more common types of more than 60 life-threatening diseases that require marrow transfusions, a chance to live.

"Leukemia causes the body to produce white blood cells which are not developed enough to fight infection," said Petty Officer 1st Class Deborah Doggett, a laboratory technician with Branch Medical Center here.

"I think it's really great that I get the chance to save a boy's life," Carter said. "There's no guarantee that the procedure will be successful, I know, but he has a much better chance to live with my help than if there was no donor."

Carter's name was on a registry of potential bone marrow donors, volunteers who have their blood drawn at bone marrow drives like the one held here at the Windward Enlisted Club Wednesday and today. He gave blood samples while at corpsmanschool, but he has more personal reasons for his motivation to help.

"I had a niece who had aplastic anemia (a disease that completely shuts down bone marrow) when she was 13-years-old," Carter said, remembering his relative. "My brother's daughter didn't get a donor in time. I knew that if my marrow matched the boy's I would donate."

Carter said he jumped at the chance to help a child in a similar situation. Carter said he was enthusiastic about going through the series of tests to determine if his marrow is compatible with that of the needy patient.

Carter flew to Georgetown Medical University for his final physical exam leading up to the scheduled operation date of Oct. 9.

The procedure leaves very little chance of danger for the donor, according to Doggett, who says the worst that may happen is infection at the needle insertion points, which can be cleared up by antibiotics.

"I'll probably have an aching soreness after the surgery," Carter said, "But most patients are up (and able to move around) the same day."

"The slight fear I may have is of the unknown, since I've never done anything like this before," Carter said.

"But the pros far outweigh the cons," Doggett said, finishing Carter's thoughts.

Carter and Doggett urge people to get registered for the bone marrow donor program whenever drives are held. The lab technicians at the marrow drive take two vials of blood, which are sent to the Naval Medical Research Institute for classifying the type of bone marrow the potential donor has.

Since bone marrow characteristics are hereditary, ethnic background is an important factor in determining whether a donor matches a marrow patient. Ethnic minorities including African-Americans, Hispanic-Americans, Native American and Asian-Americans have a more difficult time finding donors, as there are a shortage of volunteers on the bone marrow registry.

People interested in registering to be bone marrow donors can contact the local donor registry to set an appointment.

"You never know when you'll be presented with the opportunity to save a stranger's life," Carter said. "A lot of people never get the option."

KAMA'AINA KORNER

Donna Klapakis

Editor

Don't tell anyone, but I love to surf. Make no mistake, no one will ever confuse me with the famous "surfer girl" about whom at least two songs have been written. For one thing, I'm no expert. I fit firmly in the novice category. Secondly, I don't fit the "girl" requirement, and haven't since attaining the age of majority 27 years ago.

When my husband retired and we moved here a year ago, he began surfing again for the first time in 25 years. I may have remarked casually that I wished I knew how to surf. To me, the remark meant just that: I wished I somehow magically already knew how to surf. Never one to underestimate my own limitations, I figured that the time had long passed for learning.

Surprise! My birthday present from my husband was two weeks of surfing lessons at the best school on the island. Feeling like an utter idiot, and knowing that I would probably kill myself, or worse yet, be laughed at by a bunch of adolescent instructors, off I went.

Needless to say, my fears were all in vain. The people at the surf school were wonderful. They were thorough in their preparation before going out, and even more helpful once we were in the water. I stood up on the first wave I tried, and haven't looked back since.

So, in case you would like to learn how to surf, but have been putting it off for one of the following common reasons, let's go over them together:

1. You don't know how to swim. This is really dangerous. Please, please learn immediately. Even if you're deathly afraid of water, and you've taken two hundred lessons and still can't dog paddle, try again until you learn.

2. Your knee, arm, or some other area doesn't work well enough because of prior sports injuries. It's a drag, isn't it? Sometimes I'm surprised that body parts don't fall off as I walk down the street. Try surfing and see before you decide that you're too banged up to do it. I have two shoulders, and a knee that barely work, and can stand up, turn, etc. Surfing is not nearly as knee intensive as skiing.

3. You're not athletic/not in shape. I'm not either. I quit gym class my sophomore year in high school, as soon as it became an elective. Have a complete medical check-up before you start surfing, just as you would before starting any other new sport.

4. You're too old. In case you are one of our dozen or so readers who is older than I, all kinds of older men and women surf, particularly in Hawaii. A 73-year-old woman in our apartment complex goes out every morning.

5. You don't like salt water. Some people take awhile to get used to it. I didn't like it either when I first left Kansas. I thought it smelled funny, and it stung my eyes and nose. The only cure for this one is to spend more time in and around the ocean.

6. You like salt water but not surf. I used to hate surf. As far as I was concerned it was put on the earth to keep me from getting to my snorkel or dive spot as quickly and effortlessly as I would like. Once you learn how to board surf, it is much easier to get through it. The waves bother you less, even when you're not surfing.

7. It's too expensive. It's free. Compare it to another "free" sport, running. A new board costs about $400-$600, a used board $75-$200, and either lasts anywhere from one day to eternity. My colleague who runs 60-80 miles a week buys new running shoes for around $80 every three months. In the long run a board is cheaper. Don't surf the big waves, and ask the lifeguards at your chosen surf spot where the rocks are. Your board should last for a long time.

8. You don't have a good sense of balance. This is one thing I do have. Chances are, if you're a woman with a medium-sized or larger bottom, you have better balance than you think you have. Your center of gravity is low, and you can get away with less than perfect technique. Men can make up for their higher center of gravity with their greater strength.

9. You've heard about violence among surfers and are afraid to go out. According to my instructors, this was true a few years ago. Now with the return of the long boards, it has all gone away. Not everybody reads Miss Manners before they go out, and people will still take off in front of you, but not often.

10. You're afraid of sharks. HA, HA, HA, HA, HA! Now you're just being silly.

Falling in love with paradise

Sgt. Steven Williams
Combat Correspondent

SACRED FALLS NATIONAL PARK, Hawaii — A muddy path, littered with large rocks and protruding tree roots, weaves through the jungle terrain. As it lines the edge of 20-foot drops and crosses a running river, the path seems to stretch forever.

But despite two-and-a-half-miles of rugged terrain, dozens of people push forward, striving to experience the wonderland at the path's end — Sacred Falls.

"This place is amazing," said Frank Tatum, a visitor from Omaha, Neb. "When I think of paradise, this is what it looks like."

"When I heard about it, I just had to experience it for myself," said Julie Vigdal, a visitor who tagged along with Tatum. "If you can put this place in words, more power to you."

The falls, nestled in a mossy cliff, tumble approximately 100 feet from a small crevice in the back of Sacred Falls National Park's Kaliuwa'a Valley. They are Sacred Falls because the valley is filled with several Hawaiian legends.

One legend that pertains to the falls specifically is how the ancient Hawaiians believed the pool beneath the falls was bottomless, according to "Ancient Sites of Oahu" by Van James. They felt it merged with another realm where evil spirits lived. The spirits were continuously trying to surface, however, they were blocked by the plunging force of the waterfall.

Along with history, the valley is filled with luscious greenery, scenic rest areas and plenty of fun for people who enjoy hiking.

People planning to journey up the Sacred Falls trek should wear comfortable hiking shoes and attire. They should bring plenty of water and plan to make a day of the event.

It is less than an hour's drive north on Kamehameha Highway from MCB Hawaii to get to the park entrance and more than two hours roundtrip to travel to the falls and back, according to Tatum.

"You have to be safe up here," said Vigdal. "There are a lot of places where a mistake could get you hurt."

"Even though it's a rough hike, and you get a little muddy," said Tatum, "seeing the falls at the end of the road make it all worthwhile."

K-Bay Marine wins Camp Smith 5K Grueler

PFC David Salazar
Combat Correspondent

CAMP H.M. SMITH, Hawaii — More than 70 runners competed in the fierce 5K Grueler held here Sept. 19, but one Kaneohe Bay Marine took all the glory.

Christopher Silva earned bragging rights by winning overall with a 16 minute, 55 second run time.

"I wasn't even sure I would compete. When I woke up this morning, I felt good, so I decided to run it," he said.

Even though winning the Grueler was a feat in itself, Silva said it was "small potatoes" compared to his true goal.

"This was basically just a 'tune-up' to help me prepare for the Honolulu Marathon in December," he said.

Throughout the majority of the race, Jason Royer led the hoards of harriers.

"I thought I had a pretty good chance. There were a lot of good runners out here," Royer said.

But in the final stretch of the course, Silva caught up to him.

"I heard someone coming up behind me, before I knew it, (Silva) was right next to me," Royer said.

Silva was awarded a first place trophy. Trophies and medals were also awarded to winners from their respective age groups.

Above, Dominic Grasso, a MCAF golfer, is frustrated by the hill that causes his ball to gravitate out of bounds. Top right, follow through is the key to a good drive as this example of a swing by MCAF golfer, Pat Rabbitt, makes clear.

Ugly Angels edge MCAF, 13-11 in finals

Cpl. Trent Lowry
Combat Correspondent

A breezy day and the green lawns of Kaneohe Klipper Golf Course set the tone Sept. 17 for a 13-11 win by Marine Heavy Helicopter Squadron 362 golfers in the championship match of the Intramural Golf Tournament. Marine Corps Air Facility pushed the "Ugly Angels" throughout the match, but finished just a step behind. "It was great to be able to make it this far," said MCAF golfer Dominic Grasso. "We had a great season. We just came up a little short in the end." Marine Corps Air Facility won the regular season title for the intramural league's Gold Division, breaking their tie with Winfall, the team from MCB Hawaii finance offices, based on MCAF's head-to-head victory during the regular season. The Ugly Angels took top honors in the Red Division with a three point lead over the Messhall team. "MCAF definitely earned the right to be here and compete," said HMH-362 golfer Scott McFadden. "They pushed us until the very end." McFadden teamed with David Gruhn to top the duo of Grasso and Pat Rabbitt of MCAF. "I feel like I let the team down by not scoring any points," Grasso said. "This was just a bad day for me. I choked on the back nine." Even though MCAF was the runner-up, they were glad to be able to play one more time this season. "We knew the match would be extremely tough," McFadden said. "It took everything we had to come out on top."

MALSEK's boosters were excited over the dominating effort shown by their favorite team in winning the Intramural Softball Championships.

MALSEK hitters clip Pegasus' wings in finals

Cpl. Trent Lowry
Combat Correspondent

Under the artificial glare of stadium lights, MALSEK outshined all challengers in a three-game intramural softball championship at Annex Field here Sept. 18. The victors used their impressive arsenal of power-hitters to muscle the competition with the long ball. They pounded the batsmen from 1st Battalion, 12th Marine Regiment, earlier in the night 20-10. MALSEK then pummeled HMH-463 Pegasus crew 19-4 in the first of a two-game set. They then edged a 10-8 victory to earn the championship. "MALSEK's a good team, the best team out here," said Scott Alvey, second baseman for 1/12, who joined the raucous, rabid and rowdy crowd in cheering MALSEK on to victory. "They beat us every time we played them this season." Indeed, MALSEK entered the tournament with a perfect 19-0 record to lead the Red Division. But they still had to get to the championship game the hard way. "We figured we'd have tough playoffs with everyone gunning for us since we were the top team," said Michael Chrostek, manager and first baseman for MALSEK. MALSEK received their wake-up call in a previous 8-7 playoff loss to HMH-463, the very team they'd meet in the finals. "We beat ourselves the first time we met (the Pegasus squadron in the playoffs)," Chrostek said. "Tonight we put the boxing gloves on, went in to fight and didn't let up at all." The heavy hitters on MALSEK showed their opponents no mercy, showering 1/12 and HMH-463 with 10 home runs in each of the first two games, and six in the final game. "I guess we can call Brian (Blanchard) 'Big Mac,' and I'll be Sosa," said Mike Duplichan, MALSEK shortstop and one of their homer kings. Playing with bushels of emotion, HMH-463 didn't downplay their accomplishment in the tournament. "For a bunch of ragtag misfits, I think we surprised everyone when we first beat MALSEK and then again tonight by sticking in there the last game," said Alex McCraight, pitcher for the Pegasus squadron.

Poolie barely escapes with victory

Sgt. Steven Williams
Combat Correspondent

While Tony Banks was actually able to Ram a last-minute touchdown this week, Trent Lowry and Kim Rowe didn't have the final ram it took to topple Barry Melton.

Melton went undefeated Sunday and looked good going into Monday night's game since the Cowboys were stumbling around on the range and didn't seem to stand a chance in Giant territory.

But after the Boys schooled the Giants in the second half Monday with a 31-7 spanking, two more poolies came into the picture — Lowry and Rowe (sounds like a corny cop flick). It came down to total points. Lowry picked 41, Rowe picked 35. Each were only three points away, but Melton pulled it off with a 40.

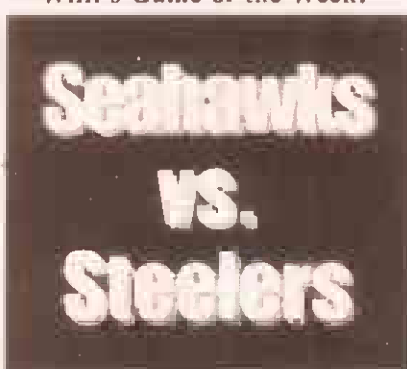

Though others didn't have the wins to get them into the race, several pigskin pickers were hot this week, and one hit the overall score right on the button.

Another good point this week was that everyone actually picked all the games. I've had a few problems with missing games and scores, including mine in the last two weeks. Final scores for Monday Night Football were missing from several picks this week. Fortunately, it didn't matter. However, be sure to catch all games and call the score to ensure yourself a chance to win the pool.

Finally, if you're in, you're in. If you're not, you're not. The pool entry is closed. You're welcome to keep track of your own record and see where you stand. With all that said, let us attack this week.

Willi's Game of the Week:

Seattle at PITTSBURGH: OK, OK. So, I've put way too much confidence in "The Bus," and Kordell Stewart is acting like he wants to miss another Pro Bowl. However, the yellow and black crew is not only going to sting like yellow jackets, they're going to swarm and eclipse the "Moon."

Atlanta at SAN FRANCISCO — The Falcons will drown in the bay.

DENVER at Washington — Even if Bubby Brister plays, the Skins will get trampled by the Broncs.

GREEN BAY at Carolina — Another Pack attack.

Jacksonville at TENNESSEE — I'm probably crazy, but the Jags might slip in Oiler territory.

KANSAS CITY at Philadelphia

— Do I have to say anything? MINNESOTA at Chicago — Those poor Bears. First the Jaguars shredded them, then they got beat down in the Steel City, the Buccaneers sliced and diced them last week and now they're going to get gobbled up by the Vikings.

New Orleans at INDIANAPOLIS — Mike Ditka and "da crew" have performed well. But Peyton Manning is still looking for a "W." This is his chance.

NEW YORK GIANTS at San Diego — Ryan Leaf is charging with his buds, but the Giants are mad in a giant way after a hammering last week.

Oakland at DALLAS — Jason Garrett got my vote.

Cincinnati at BALTIMORE — The Bengals could pull this off after the stellar job they did against the Pack, but I wouldn't bet on it.

TAMPA BAY at Detroit — It's going to be close. The Bucs will squeeze it out in the end. The grand total will be 28.
